FOREWORD TO THE PRESENT EDITION

"The Holy Qur'ān – Arabic text with English Translation and short commentary" which was edited by the late Malik Ghulam Farid[ra], with the blessings, and under the guidance of, Ḥaḍrat Mirza Bashir-ud-Din Mahmud Ahmad[ra], Muṣleḥ-e-Mau'ūd, the Second Successor of the Promised Messiah[as], and was published sometime back and reprinted again in 2012. This commentary epitomizes the Divinely inspired knowledge of Ḥaḍrat Mirzā Bashir-ud-Din Mahmud Ahmad[ra] in as much as it is based on his Urdu Commentary of the Holy Qur'ān, notes of his *Dars-e-Qur'ān, his lectures, discourses, speeches, books etc., which were initially used in Five Volume Commentary of the Holy Qur'ān, of which this is an abridged form.

It has been out of print for sometime now, during which its demand has continued growing. So, we are pleased to republish it, by the grace of Allah.

It is indeed a great compendium of the Quranic scholarship and we are certain that the believers, and non-believers alike would, God willing, benefit from it a lot. For it is the Qur'ān, and Qur'ān only, that can guide the misguided, solve the problems that the world is facing, and increase the virtuous and God fearing followers of it, in their spiritual rank.

I am pleased to acknowledge the help of Mirza Anas Ahmad M.A., M. Litt. (Oxon), Shaikh Naseer Ahmad, Rubina Nasser, Dr. Amatur-Razzaq CarMichael and others, for getting it camera-ready for publication. May Allāh reward them abundantly. Amin.

FOREWORD TO THE FIRST EDITION

Great is Allāh and great is His mercy. It is through His boundless grace and infinite mercy that we have been able to bring out an abridged edition of "The English Commentary" of the Holy Qur'ān. The preparation of "The English Commentary" was entrusted some years ago to a Board of Translators consisting of the late Maulawī Sher 'Alī, the late Mirzā Bashīr Aḥmad and the writer of these lines, Malik Ghulām Farīd; some spade work having previously been done by the late Maulawī Sahib. The "Commentary" took several years to be completed. Immediately after the Partition in 1947, Maulawī Sher 'Alī died and Mirzā Bashīr Aḥmad was called to other important duties when Explanatory Notes of only the first nine Chapters had been published and the writer of these lines was left alone to carry on and finish the work.

The "Commentary" covered about 3,000 pages with a very learned introduction by the late Ḥaḍrat Mirzā Bashīr-ud-Dīn Maḥmūd Aḥmad, Second Successor of the Promised Messiah and his Promised Son, and was published in 1963 in three large volumes. Evidently, such a voluminous book could hardly be of regular daily use for the average reader and the need was keenly felt for an abridged edition. The present book is intended to meet that need. Fortunately, during the interval a masterly exposition of the meanings of the Qur'ān by the late Ḥaḍrat Khalīfatul-Masīḥ II appeared in the form of "Tafsīr-e-Ṣaghīr." The Editor has done his best to incorporate in the present book all that could be of use and interest in the "Tafsīr-e-Ṣaghīr." especially for those upon whom modern thought and western sciences have exercised not altogether a healthy influence. He has also extensively revised the Translation of the Text of the 1954 Edition, printed in Holland, in the light of the Urdu Translation of the "Tafsīr-e-Ṣaghīr."

The Editor is overwhelmed with feelings of deepest gratitude to the Almighty in that he was fortunate to have been vouchsafed ample opportunities to sit at the feet of the late Ḥaḍrat Khalīfatul-Masīḥ II (of blessed memory) and for years listened to his speeches, discourses on various religious subjects, sermons, and highly enlightening lessons on the Qur'ān, in which were reflected those mysteries of Divine knowledge to which only the pure of heart are granted access. The present Abridged Edition is mainly based, as was "The Larger Edition" on the material culled and collected from his speeches and writings. "Introduction to the Study of the Holy Qur'ān" by the late Ḥaḍrat Khalīfatul-Masīḥ II, forms an integral part of this Abridged Edition, but in view of its volume and importance it has been printed as a separate book.

The Arabic Text of the book has been given side by side with the English Translation. A mere translation without the text is likely, in the long run, to endanger the purity of the text; besides depriving the reader of the opportunity of comparison.

The explanations of the important Arabic words and expressions in the Commentary are based on the standard lexicons of the Arabic language, such as the Lisānul-'Arab, the Tājul-'Urūs, the Mufradāt of Imām Rāghib, the Arabic English Lexicon by E. W. Lane and the Aqrabul-Mawārid. As regards the Translation, our procedure has been to base the meaning of every word, first on the corroborative testimony of other parts of the Qur'ān and secondly on the context. The words printed in italics have been introduced to explain the meaning of the Text, there being no words corresponding to them in the original.

As regards Explanatory Notes or Commentary, every Note first derives its authority from the tenor and spirit of the Qur'ān as expressed at various other places.

Next to the Qur'ān precedence is given to the Ḥadīth and then come the standard dictionaries of the Arabic Language. Last of all, recourse is had to the evidence of history which was necessary for the explanation of such verses as refer to well-known historical events.

In the course of the preparation of these Notes light has been thrown from time to time on the order which runs through the verses of each Chapter, the one following the other in natural sequence. By a careful perusal of these Notes the reader will realize that the Qur'ān forms a thoroughly coherent and consistent reading.

Special care is taken in the Notes to refute the principal objections raised against Islām by Christian writers. These objections are based either on ignorance or on deliberate misrepresentation of the true teachings of Islām on the part of these writers. Refutation of such objections helps to remove much bias and prejudice against Islām and to create an atmosphere for a better appreciation of its teachings.

A system of cross-references has been introduced. These cross-references have been placed below the Text and the Translation. They give at a glance the various places where the subject of a particular verse has been dealt with in the Qur'ān.

An Introduction is prefixed to each Chapter. It discusses the place and date of its revelation and gives a summary of its contents and the relation it has with the Chapters preceding or following it. It also provides sufficient material for the reader to understand and realize that not only the verses of the various Chapters but also the specific position of each Chapter itself is governed by an intelligent order.

In numbering the verses of the Qur'ān we have followed the system in vogue in the standard Editions of the Qur'ān in Pakistan with this exception that in our numbering Bismillāh is counted as the first verse of every Chapter, while in other Editions the verse following Bismillāh is numbered as the first verse of the Chapter. Chapter 9, however, is an exception to this rule. It does not begin with Bismillāh, and therefore in this Chapter our numbering is identical with that of other Editions of the Qur'ān. Our numbering of the Notes is continuous. It does not end where a Sūrah ends but is continued into the next Sūrah to the end of the Book.

In references the figure on the left side of the colon shows the number of the Chapter, while that on its right the number of the verse. It should also be noted that when reference is to a Chapter of the Qur'ān, the word Qur'ān is invariably omitted for brevity's sake. Thus 20:8 refers to the 8th verse of the 20th Chapter of the Qur'ān; in references to other religious Scriptures, however, the name of the book is invariably mentioned, though generally in an abbreviated form. So Gen. 5:6 means the 6th verse of the 5th chapter of Genesis, the first Book of Moses.

The Editor would be failing in his duty if he does not acknowledge his deep debt of gratitude to Mirzā Mubārak Aḥmad, Wakīl-e-A'lā, Taḥrīk-e-Jadīd, without whose active and valuable support and useful guidance it would not have been possible for this Abridged Edition to see the light of the day. He also expresses his sincere thanks to Maulawī Muhammad Aḥmad Jalīl and Ch. Muẓaffar-ud-Dīn, who helped him by very carefully reading the proofs of the whole manuscript and making meaningful suggestions and also to Maulawī Nūr-ud-Dīn Munīr, who has taken great pains in preparing an exhaustive Index.

The Editor
(Malik Ghulām Farīd).

BOOKS OF REFERENCE WITH THEIR ABBREVIATED TITLES

Some commentators have given single letter or a group of letters as abbreviations for the authorities they have quoted. These are not of much help to the reader, who has to turn to the list of abbreviations again and again in order to ascertain to which authority the letter refers. But it also seems cumbrous to give the names of the authorities in full. So we have followed a middle course and have given a shortened form of the name, which generally consists in a part of the name of the book or its author. Thus, for instance, instead of Al-Baḥrul-Muḥīṭ by Abū Ḥayyān, we have simply given the word 'Muḥīṭ,' and for Sīratun-Nabī by Ibn-e-Hishām, the abbreviated form 'Hishām' is given. These abbreviated names easily suggest to the reader the book or the author to which reference is made. No shortened form, however, has been used for the authorities that are not frequently quoted. In case of the books of the Bible, we have made use of the abbreviations that are generally used in Christian literature. Following is a list of well-known works of reference and other important books to which we have referred in this Commentary. We have taken special care to give the full name of each book and its author along with its abbreviated title.

SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION

In transliterating Arabic words we have followed the following system adopted by the Royal Asiatic Society.

ا	at the beginning of a word, pronounced as a, i, u preceded by a very slight aspiration, like h in the English word 'honour'.
ث	th, pronounced like th in the English word 'thing'.
ح	ḥ, a guttural aspirate, stronger than h.
خ	kh, pronounced like the Scotch ch in 'loch'.
ذ	dh, pronounced like the English th in 'that'.
ص	ṣ, strongly articulated s.
ض	ḍ, similar to the English th in 'this'.
ط	ṭ, strongly articulated palatal t.
ظ	ẓ, strongly articulated z.
ع	‘, a strong guttural, the pronounciation of which must be learnt by the ear.
غ	gh, a sound approached very nearly in the r 'grasseye' in French, and in the German r. It requires the muscles of the throat to be in the 'gargling' position whilst pronouncing it.
ق	q, a deep guttural k sound.
ء	’, a sort of catch in the voice.

Short vowels are represented by a for ـَـ (like u in 'bud'); i for ـِـ (like i in 'bid'); u for ـُـ (like oo in 'wood'); the long vowels by ā for ـا or آ (like a in 'father'); ī for ی ـِـ or ـِـا (like ee in 'deep'); ū for و ـُـ (like oo in 'root'); ai for ی ـَـ (like i in 'site'); au for و ـَـ (resembling ou in 'sound').

The consonants not included in the above list have the same phonetic value as in the principal languages of Europe.

CHAPTER 1
AL-FĀTIḤAH

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Place and Time of Revelation

As reported by many traditionalists, the whole of this Sūrah was revealed at Mecca, and from the very beginning formed part of the Muslim Prayer. The Sūrah has been referred to in the Quranic verse, We have indeed given thee the seven oft-repeated verses and the great Qur'ān (15:88), which was admittedly revealed at Mecca. According to some reports, the Sūrah was also revealed a second time at Medina. The time of its first revelation, however, may be placed very early in the Prophet's ministry.

Names of the Sūrah and their Significance

The best-known title of this short Sūrah, i.e. Fātiḥatul-Kitāb, (Opening Chapter of the Book) is reported on the authority of several reliable traditionalists (Tirmidhī & Muslim). The title was later abbreviated into Sūratul-Fātiḥah, or simply Al-Fātiḥah. The Sūrah is known by quite a number of names, the following ten are more authentic, viz. Al-Fātiḥah, Aṣ-Ṣalāt, Al-Ḥamd, Ummul-Qur'ān, Al-Qur'ānul-'Aẓīm, As-Sab'ul-Mathānī, Ummul-Kitāb, Ash-Shifā', Ar-Ruqyah and Al-Kanz. These names throw a flood of light upon the extensive import of the Sūrah.

The name Fātiḥatul-Kitāb (Opening Chapter of the Book) signifies that the Sūrah, having been placed in the beginning, serves as a key to the whole subject-matter of the Qur'ān. Aṣ-Ṣalāt (The Prayer) signifies that it forms a complete and perfect prayer and constitutes an integral part of the institutional Prayers of Islam. Al-Ḥamd (The Praise) signifies that the Sūrah brings to light the lofty purpose of man's creation and teaches that the relation of God to man is one of grace and mercy. Ummul-Qur'ān (Mother of the Qur'ān) signifies that the Sūrah forms an epitome of the whole of the Qur'ān, containing in a nutshell all the knowledge that has a bearing on man's moral and spiritual development. Al-Qur'ānul-'Aẓīm (The Great Qur'ān) signifies that although the Sūrah is known as Ummul-Kitāb and Ummul-Qur'ān, it nevertheless forms part of the Holy Book and is not separate from it, as mistakenly considered by some. As-Sab'ul-Mathānī (The Oft-repeated Seven Verses) signifies that the seven short verses of the Chapter virtually fulfil all the spiritual needs of man. It also signifies that the Chapter must be repeated in every Rak'at of Prayer. Ummul-Kitāb (Mother of the Book) signifies that the prayer contained in the Chapter was the cause of the revelation of the Quranic Dispensation. Ash-Shifā' (The Cure) signifies that it provides remedy for all the legitimate doubts and misgivings of man. Ar-Ruqyah (The Charm) signifies that it is not only a prayer to ward off disease but also provides protection against Satan and his followers, and strengthens the heart of man against them. Al-Kanz (The Treasure) signifies that the Sūrah is an inexhaustible storehouse of knowledge.

Al-Fātiḥah Referred to in a Prophecy of the New Testament

The best-known name of the Sūrah, however, is Al-Fātiḥah. It is interesting to note that this very name occurs in a prophecy of the New Testament: "I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven...and he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea and his left foot on the earth" (Rev. 10:1, 2). The Hebrew word for 'open' is Fatoah which is the same as the Arabic word Fātiḥah. Again, "And when he (the angel) had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices" (Rev. 10:3, 4). "The seven thunders" represent the seven verses of this Chapter. Christian scholars say that the prophecy refers to the second advent of Jesus Christ, and this has been established by actual facts. The Holy Founder of the Ahmadiyya Movement, Ḥaḍrat Mirzā Ghulām Aḥmad, in whose person the prophecy relating to the second advent of Jesus has been fulfilled, wrote commentaries on this Chapter and deduced arguments of the truth of his claim from its contents and always used it as a model prayer. He deduced from its seven short verses Divine realities and eternal verities, which were not known before. It was as if the Chapter had been a sealed book until its treasures were laid bare by Ḥaḍrat Aḥmad. Thus was fulfilled the prophecy contained in Rev. 10:4: "And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, 'Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered and write them not.'" The prophecy referred to the fact that Fatoah or Al-Fātiḥah would, for a time, remain a closed book, but that a time would come when treasures of spiritual knowledge contained in it would be laid bare. This was done by Ḥaḍrat Aḥmad.

Connection with the Rest of the Qur'ān

The Sūrah forms, as it were, an introduction to the Qur'ān. It is, in fact, the Qur'ān in miniature. Thus at the very beginning of his study, the reader becomes familiar in broad outline with the subjects he should expect to find in the Holy Book. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that Sūratul-Fātiḥah is the most important Chapter of the Qur'ān (Bukhārī).

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah contains the essence of the entire Quranic teaching. It comprises, in outline, all the subjects dealt with at length in the body of the Qur'ān. It starts with a description of the fundamental attributes of God, which form the pivot round which all the other Divine attributes revolve, and the basis of the working of the universe and of the relation between God and man. The four principal Divine attributes, Rabb (Creator, Sustainer and Developer), Raḥmān (Gracious), Raḥīm (Merciful) and Māliki Yaumid-Dīn (Master of the Day of Judgment) signify that after having created man, God endowed him with the best natural capabilities and provided the means and material needed for his physical, social, moral and spiritual development. Further, He made a provision that man's strivings and endeavours should be amply rewarded. The Sūrah goes on to say that man has been created for 'Ibādah, i.e. the worship of God and the attainment of His nearness and that he constantly needs His help for the fulfilment of this supreme object. The mention of the four Divine attributes is followed by a comprehensive prayer in which all the urges of the human soul find full expression. The prayer teaches that man should always seek and invoke the assistance of God that He may provide him with the means required for success in this life and in the life to come. But as man is apt to derive strength and inspiration from the good example of those noble and great souls of the past, who achieved the object of their life, he is taught to pray that like them God should open up for him also avenues of unlimited moral and spiritual progress. Finally, the prayer contains a warning lest after having been led to the right path he should stray away from it, lose sight of his goal and become estranged from his Creator. He is taught to remain always on his guard and constantly to seek God's protection against any possible estrangement from Him. This is the subject, which is put in a nutshell in Al-Fātiḥah and this is the subject with which the Qur'ān deals fully and comprehensively, citing numerous examples for the guidance of the reader.

Believers are enjoined that before reading the Qur'ān they should solicit God's protection against Satan: When thou recitest the Qur'ān, seek refuge with Allāh from Satan, the rejected (16:99). Now, refuge or protection implies; (1) that no evil should befall us; (2) that no good should escape us; and (3) that after we have attained goodness, we may not again relapse into evil. The prescribed words of the prayer are: "I seek refuge with Allāh from Satan, the rejected," which must precede every recitation of the Qur'ān.

A Chapter of the Qur'ān—and there are 114 of them—is called a Sūrah. This word, rendered into English as 'Chapter', means, (1) rank and eminence; (2) a mark or sign; (3) an elevated and beautiful edifice; and (4) something full and complete (Aqrab & Qurṭubī). The Chapters of the Qur'ān are called Sūrahs because (a) one is exalted in rank by reading them and attains to eminence through them; (b) they serve as marks for the beginning and the end of the different subjects dealt with in the Qur'ān; (c) they are each like a noble spiritual edifice and (d) each one of them contains a complete theme. The name Sūrah for such a division has been used in the Qur'ān itself (2:24 & 24:2). It has been used in the Ḥadīth also. Says the Holy Prophet: "Just now a Sūrah has been revealed to me and it runs as follows" (Muslim). From this it is clear that the name Sūrah for a division of the Qur'ān has been in use from the very beginning of Islam and is not a later innovation.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ①

1. [a]In[1] the name[2] of Allāh,[3] the Gracious, the Merciful.[4]

[a]Placed before every Chapter except Chapter 9; also in 27:31. See also 96:2.

1. Bā' is a particle used to convey a number of meanings, the one more applicable here being 'with'. The compound word Bism, therefore, would mean 'with the name of'. According to Arab usage, the words Iqra' or Aqra'u or Naqra'u or Ishra' or Ashra'u or Nashra'u would be taken to be understood before Bismillāh which expression would thus mean, 'begin with the name of Allāh' or 'recite with the name of Allāh', or 'I or we begin with the name of Allāh', or 'I or we recite with the name of Allāh'. In the translation the expression Bismillāh has been rendered as 'in the name of Allāh' which is a more familiar form (Lane).

2. Ism means, a name or attribute (Aqrab). Here it is used in both senses. It refers to Allāh which is the substantive name of God; and to Ar-Raḥmān (The Gracious) and Ar-Raḥīm (The Merciful) which are His attributive names.

3. Allāh is the name of the Supreme Being Who is the Sole Possessor of all perfect attributes and is completely free from all conceivable defects. In the Arabic language, the word Allāh is never used for any other thing or being. No other language has a distinctive or proper name for the Supreme Being. The names found in other languages are all attributive or descriptive and are often used in the plural, but the word "Allāh" is never used in the plural number. It is a simple substantive, not derived and is never used as a qualifying word. In the absence of a parallel word in the English language, the original name "Allāh" has been retained throughout the Translation. This view is corroborated by eminent authorities of the Arabic language. "Allāh", according to the most correct of the opinions respecting it, is a proper name, applied to the Being Who exists necessarily by Himself, comprising all the attributes of perfection, the al being inseparable from it (Lane).

4. Ar-Raḥmān (The Gracious) and Ar-Raḥīm (The Merciful) are both derived from the same root Raḥima meaning, he showed mercy; he was kind and good; he forgave. The word Raḥmah combines the idea of Riqqah, i.e. 'tenderness' and Iḥsān, i.e. 'goodness' (Mufradāt). Ar-Raḥmān is in the measure of Fa'lān and Ar-Raḥīm in the measure of Fa'īl. According to the rules of the Arabic language, the larger the number of letters added to the root-word, the more extensive or more intensive does the meaning become (Kashshāf). The measure of Fa'lān conveys the idea of fullness and extensiveness, while the measure of Fa'īl denotes the idea of repetition and giving liberal reward to those who deserve it (Muḥīṭ). Thus, whereas the word Ar-Raḥmān would denote "mercy comprehending the entire universe", the word Ar-Raḥīm would denote "mercy limited in its scope but repeatedly shown." In view of the above meanings Ar-Raḥmān is One Who shows mercy gratuitously and extensively to all creation without regard to effort or work, and Ar-Raḥīm is One Who shows mercy in response to, and as a result of, the actions of man but shows it liberally and repeatedly. The former is applicable to God only, while the latter is applied to man also. The former extends not only to believers and disbelievers but also to the whole creation; the latter applies mostly to believers. According to a saying of the Holy Prophet, the former attribute generally pertains to this life, while the latter attribute generally pertains to the life to come (Muḥīṭ), meaning that as this world is mostly the world of actions and the next world is the world where actions will be particularly rewarded, God's attribute Ar-Raḥmān provides man with material for his works in this life, and His attribute Ar-Raḥīm brings about results in the life to come. All things that we need and on which our life depends are purely a Divine favour and are provided for us before we do anything to deserve them or even before we are born, while the blessings in store for us in the life to come will be given to us as a reward of our actions. This shows that Ar-Raḥmān is the Bestower of gifts, which precede our birth, while Ar-Raḥīm is the Giver of blessings which follow our deeds as their reward.

Bismillāhir-Raḥmānir-Raḥīm is the first verse of every Chapter of the Qur'ān except Al-Barā'ah which, however, is not an independent Chapter but a continuation of the Chapter Al-Anfāl. There is a saying, reported by Ibn-e-'Abbās, to the effect that whenever any new Sūrah was revealed, Bismillāh was the first verse to be revealed, and without Bismillāh the Holy Prophet did not know that a new Sūrah had begun (Dāwūd). This saying shows that (1) the verse Bismillāh is a part of the Qur'ān and not something supernumerary, and (2) that the Chapter Barā'ah is not an independent Chapter. It also refutes the belief expressed by some that Bismillāh forms a part only of Sūratul-Fātiḥah and not of all the Quranic Chapters. The Holy Prophet is reported to have further said that the verse Bismillāh is a part of all the Quranic Chapters (Bukhārī & Quṭnī). Its place in the beginning of every Chapter has the following significance:

The Qur'ān is a treasure of Divine knowledge to which access cannot be had without the special favour of God: None shall touch it but the purified (56:80). Thus Bismillāh has been placed at the beginning of every Chapter to remind a Muslim that in order to have access to, and benefit by, the treasures of Divine knowledge, contained in the Qur'ān, he should not only approach it with a pure heart but should also constantly invoke the help of God. The verse Bismillāh also serves another important purpose. It is a key to the meaning of each individual Chapter, as all questions affecting moral and spiritual matters are related in one way or the other to the fundamental Divine attributes Raḥmāniyyah (grace) and Raḥīmiyyah (mercy). Thus each Chapter, in fact, forms a detailed exposition of some aspects of the Divine attributes mentioned in the verse. It is contended that the formula Bismillāh was borrowed from earlier Scriptures. Whereas Sale says that it was borrowed from Zend-Avesta, Rodwell is of the opinion that the pre-Islamic Arabs borrowed it from the Jews and subsequently it became incorporated in the Qur'ān. Both these views are obviously wrong. First, it has never been claimed by Muslims that the formula in this or similar form was not known before the revelation of the Qur'ān. Secondly, it is wrong to argue that because the formula, in an identical or a similar form, was sometimes used by pre-Islamic Arabs even before it was revealed in the Qur'ān, it could not be of Divine origin. As a matter of fact, the Qur'ān itself states that Solomon used the formula in his letter to the Queen of Sheba (27:31). What Muslims claim—and this claim has never been refuted—is that the Qur'ān was the first revealed Scripture to use it in the way it did. It is also wrong to say that the formula was in vogue among pre-Islamic Arabs, for it is a known fact that the Arabs had an aversion for the use of the name Ar-Raḥmān for God. Again, if such formulae were known before, it only corroborates the truth of the Quranic teaching that there has not been a people to whom a Teacher has not been sent (35:25) and that the Qur'ān is a repository of all permanent truths contained in the previous revealed Books (98:5). It adds much more, of course, and whatever it takes over, it improves in form or use or in both.

2. [a]All[5] praise[5A] belongs to Allāh alone, Lord[6] of all the worlds,[6A]

اَلْحَمْدُ لِلّٰهِ رَبِّ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ۙ﴿۲﴾

5. In Arabic al corresponds to the definite article "the" in English. It is used to denote comprehensiveness, that is to say all aspects or categories of a subject, or to denote perfection, which is also an aspect of comprehensiveness, inasmuch as it includes all degrees and grades. It is also used to indicate something which has already been mentioned, or a concept of which is present in the mind.

5A. In Arabic two words Madḥ and Ḥamd are used in the sense of praise and thankfulness; but whereas Madḥ may be false, Ḥamd is always true. Again Madḥ may be used about such acts of goodness over which the doer has no control, but Ḥamd is used only with respect to such acts as are volitional (Mufradāt). Ḥamd also implies admiration, magnifying and honouring of the object of praise; and lowliness, humility and submissiveness in the person who offers it (Lane). Thus Ḥamd is the most appropriate word to be used here, where a reference to the intrinsic goodness and truly merited praise and glorification of God is intended. In common usage the word Ḥamd has come to be applied exclusively to God.

6. The verb Rabba means, he administered the affair; he increased, developed, improved and completed the matter; he sustained and looked after. Thus Rabb means, (a) Lord, Master, Creator; (b) One Who sustains and develops; (c) One Who brings to perfection by degrees (Mufradāt & Lane). When used in combination with another word, it may be used for persons or beings other than God.

6A. Al-'Ālamīn is the plural of al-'Ālam from the root 'Ilm meaning 'to know'. The word has come to be applied to all beings or things by means of which one is able to know the Creator (Aqrab). It is applied not only to all kinds of the created beings or things but also to their classes collectively, so that one says 'Ālamul-Ins, i.e. the world of mankind, or 'Ālamul-Ḥayawān i.e. the animal kingdom. The word al-'Ālamīn is not used to denote rational beings—men and angels—only. The Qur'ān applies it to all created things (26:24-29 & 41:10). Sometimes, of course, it is used in a restricted sense (2:123). Here it is used in its widest sense and signifies 'all that is besides Allāh', i.e. animate and inanimate things including heavenly bodies—the sun, the moon, the stars, etc.

3. [a]The Gracious, [b]the Merciful,[7] الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۙ﴿۳﴾

4. [c]Master[8] of the [d]Day[9] of Judgment.[10] مٰلِكِ يَوْمِ الدِّيْنِ ؕ﴿۴﴾

The expression "All praise belongs to Allāh alone" is much wider and deeper in significance than "I praise Allāh", because man can praise God only according to his knowledge, but the clause "all praise belongs to Allāh" comprises not only the praise which man knows, but also the praise which he does not know. God is worthy of praise at all times, independently of man's imperfect knowledge or realization. Moreover, the word al-Ḥamd is an infinitive and as such can be interpreted both as a subject and as an object. Interpreted as a subject, al-Ḥamdu Lillāhi means, God alone has the right to bestow true praise. Interpreted as an object, it signifies that all true praise and every kind of praise in its perfection is due to God alone. For the particle al see 5.

The verse points to the law of evolution in the world, viz. that all things undergo development and that this development is progressive and is brought about in stages, Rabb being One Who makes things grow and develop by stages. It also points out that the principle of evolution is not inconsistent with belief in God. But the process of evolution referred to here is not identical with the Theory of Evolution as generally understood. The words have been used in a general sense. Further, the verse points to the fact that man has been created for unlimited progress, because the expression Rabbul-'Ālamīn implies that God develops everything from a lower to a higher stage and this is possible only if after every stage there is another stage in a never-ending process.

7. In the expression Bismillāh the attributes Ar-Raḥmān and Ar-Raḥīm serve as a key to the meaning of the whole Sūrah. Their mention here serves an additional purpose. They are used here as a link between the attribute Rabbul-'Ālamīn and Māliki Yaumid-Dīn.

8. Mālik means, master, or one who possesses the right of ownership over a thing and has the power to deal with it as one likes (Aqrab).

9. Yaum means, time absolutely; day from sunrise to sunset; present time (Aqrab).

10. Dīn means, recompense or requital; judgment or reckoning; dominion or government; obedience; religion, etc. (Lane).

The four attributes of God, viz. "Lord of all the worlds", "Gracious",

5. [a]Thee alone do we worship[11] and [b]Thee alone do we implore for help.[12]

اِيَّاكَ نَعۡبُدُ وَ اِيَّاكَ نَسۡتَعِيۡنُ ؕ۵

[a]11:3; 12:41; 16:37; 17:24; 41:38. [b]2:46, 154; 21:113.

"Merciful" and "Master of the Day of Judgment" are fundamental attributes. The other attributes only explain and serve as a sort of commentary upon these four attributes, which are like four pillars on which the Throne of the Almighty rests.

The order in which these four attributes have been mentioned throws light on how God manifests His attributes to man. The attribute Rabbul-'Ālamīn (Lord of all the worlds) signifies that with the creation of man, God creates the necessary environment for his spiritual progress and development. The attribute, Ar-Raḥmān (The Gracious), comes into operation next and through it God, so to speak, hands over to man the means and material, required for his moral and spiritual advancement. And when man has made proper use of the means thus granted to him, the attribute Ar-Raḥīm begins to operate to reward his works. Last of all, the attribute Māliki Yaumid-Dīn (Master of the Day of Judgment) produces the final and collective results of man's labours; and the process finds consummation. Though the last and perfect reckoning will take place on the Day of Judgment, the process of requital is going on even in this life with this difference that in this life human actions are often judged and rewarded by other men, kings, rulers, etc.; and there is, therefore, always the possibility of error. On the Day of Judgment, however, the mastery of God will be exclusive and absolute and the work of requital will lie entirely in His hands. There will be no error, no undue punishments, no undue rewards. The use of the word "Master" is also intended to point to the fact that God is not like a judge who is bound to give his judgment strictly in accordance with a prescribed law. Being Master, He can forgive and show mercy wherever and in whatever manner He may like. Taking Dīn as meaning 'religion' the words "Master of the time of religion" would signify that when a true religion is revealed, mankind witnesses an extraordinary manifestation of Divine power and decrees and when it declines, it looks as if the universe is running mechanically without control or regulation by a Creator and Master.

11. 'Ibādah signifies complete and utmost humility, submissiveness, obedience and service. It also implies belief in God's Unity and declaration of it. The word also signifies, the acceptance of the impress of a thing. In this sense 'Ibādah would mean, receiving the impress of Divine attributes and imbibing and reflecting them in one's own person.

12. The words, Thee alone do we worship, have been placed before the words, Thee alone do we implore for help, to signify that after man becomes aware of God's great attributes, his first impulse is to worship Him. The idea of invoking God's help comes after the impulse to worship. Man wishes to worship God but he finds that for doing so he needs God's help. The use of the plural number in the verse directs attention to two very important points; (a) that man is not alone in this world but is part and parcel of the society that

6. Guide us in [a]the straight path,[13]

اِهْدِنَا الصِّرَاطَ الْمُسْتَقِيْمَ ۙ﴿۶﴾

7. The path of [b]those on whom Thou hast bestowed Thy favours,[14] those who have not [c]incurred Thy displeasure and surrounds him. He should, therefore, seek not to go alone but to carry others also with him on the path of God; (b) as long as man does not reform his environment, he is not safe.

صِرَاطَ الَّذِيْنَ اَنْعَمْتَ عَلَيْهِمْ ۙ
غَيْرِ الْمَغْضُوْبِ عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَا الضَّآلِّيْنَ﴿۷﴾ ع

It is worthy of note that God is spoken of in the first four verses in the third person, but in this verse He is suddenly addressed in the second person. The contemplation of the four Divine attributes creates in man such an irresistible longing for seeing his Creator and such an intense desire to offer his whole-hearted devotion to Him that, in order to satisfy this longing of the soul, the third person used in the first four verses has been changed into the second in the present verse.

13. The prayer covers the entire field of man's needs—material and spiritual, present and future. The believer prays for being shown the straight path—the shortest path. Sometimes a man is shown the right and straight path but is not led up to it, or, if he is led up to it, he fails to stick to it and follow it to the end. The prayer requires a believer not to be satisfied with only being shown a path, or even with being led up to it, but ever to go on following it till he reaches the destination, this being the significance of Hidāyah which means, to show the right path (90:11), to lead to the right path (29:70) and to make one follow the right path (7:44), (Mufradāt & Baqā'). In fact, man needs God's help at every step and at every moment, and it is imperative that he should ever be offering to God the supplication embodied in the verse. Constant praying, therefore, is necessary. As long as we have requirements unfulfilled and needs unsatisfied and goals unattained, we stand in need of prayer.

14. A true believer is not satisfied with only being guided to the right path or with doing certain acts of righteousness. He sets his goal much higher and tries to attain a position in which God begins to bestow His special favours upon His servants. He looks up to the examples of Divine favours bestowed upon God's Elect and receives encouragement from them. He does not stop even there, but strives hard and prays to be included among God's "Favoured Ones" and to become one of them. These "Favoured Ones" have been mentioned in (4:70). The prayer is general and not for any particular favour. The believer implores God to bestow the highest spiritual favour upon him and it rests with God to confer upon him the favour which He deems fit and which the believer deserves.

15. Sūratul-Fātiḥah reveals a beautiful order in the arrangement of its words and sentences. It is divided into two halves. The first half pertains to God, the second to man, and the different parts of each portion correspond to one another in a remarkable manner. Corresponding to the name "Allāh" which stands for the Being possessing all noble attributes in the first half, we have the words, Thee alone do we worship, in the second half. As soon as the devotee thinks of God as being free from all defects and possessing all perfect attributes, the cry, Thee alone do we worship, spontaneously rises from the depths of his heart. And corresponding to the attribute "Lord of all the worlds" are the words, Thee alone do we implore for help, in the second part. When a Muslim knows God to be the Creator and Sustainer of all the worlds and the Source of all development, he at once takes shelter in Him, saying, Thee alone do we implore for help. Then, corresponding to the attribute Ar-Raḥmān, i.e. the Giver of innumerable blessings and the Liberal Provider of our needs, occur the words, Guide us in the straight path, in the second; for the greatest of the blessings provided for man is guidance which God provides for him by sending revelation through His Messengers. Corresponding to the attribute Ar-Raḥīm i.e. the Giver of the best rewards for man's works in the first part, we have the words, The path of those on whom Thou hast bestowed Thy favours, in the second, for it is Ar-Raḥīm Who bestows merited blessings on His favoured servants. Again, corresponding to "Master of the Day of Judgment" we have, Those who have not incurred Thy displeasure, and those who have not gone astray. When man thinks of giving an account of his deeds, he dreads failure; so, pondering over the attribute, Master of the Day of Judgment, he begins to pray to God to be saved from His displeasure and from straying away from the right path.

Another special feature of the prayer contained in this Sūrah is that it appeals to the inner instincts of man in a perfectly natural manner. There are two fundamental motives in human nature which prompt submission, viz. love and fear. Some people are touched by love, while others are moved by fear. The motive of love is certainly nobler but there may be—indeed there are—men to whom love makes no appeal. They only submit through fear. In Al-Fātiḥah an appeal has been made to both these human motives. First come those attributes of God which inspire love, "the Creator and Sustainer of the world," "the Gracious" and "the Merciful." Then in their wake, as it were, follows the attribute, "Master of the Day of Judgment," which reminds man that if he does not mend his ways and does not respond to love, he should be prepared to render account of his deeds before God. Thus the motive of fear is brought into play side by side with that of love. But as God's mercy far excels His anger, even this attribute which is the only fundamental attribute designed to evoke fear, has not been left without a reference to mercy. In fact, here too

God's mercy transcends His anger, for it is implicit in this attribute that we are not appearing before a Judge but before a Master Who has the power to forgive and Who will punish only where punishment is absolutely necessary.

In short, Al-Fātiḥah is a wonderful storehouse of spiritual knowledge. It is a short Chapter of seven brief verses, but it is a veritable mine of knowledge and wisdom. Aptly called "Mother of the Book," it is the very essence of the Qur'ān. Beginning with the name of Allāh, the Fountain-head of all blessings, the Chapter goes on to narrate the four fundamental attributes of God, i.e. (1) The Creator and Sustainer of the world; (2) The Gracious, Who provides for all the requirements of man even before he is born and without any effort on his part for them; (3) The Merciful, Who determines the best possible results of man's labour and Who rewards him most liberally; and (4) Master of the Day of Judgment before Whom all will have to give an account of their actions, Who will punish the wicked but will not treat His creatures as a mere judge but as a master, tempering justice with mercy, and Who is eager to forgive whenever forgiveness is calculated to bring about good results. This is the portrait of the God of Islām as given in the very beginning of the Qur'ān—a God Whose power and dominion know no bounds and Whose mercy and beneficence have no limitations. Then comes the declaration by man that, his God being the Possessor of such lofty attributes, he is ready, nay eager, to worship Him and throw himself at His feet in complete submission; but God knows that man is weak and liable to err, so mercifully He exhorts His servant to seek His help at every step in his onward march and for every need that may confront him. Finally, comes a prayer—comprehensive and far-reaching—a prayer in which man supplicates his Maker to lead him to the straight path in all matters, spiritual or temporal, whether relating to his present or future needs. He prays to God that he may not only successfully stand all trials but, like His "Chosen Ones", do so with credit and become the recipient of His most bounteous favours; that he may for ever go on treading the straight path, pressing on nearer and yet nearer to his Lord and Master without stumbling on the way, as did many of those who have gone before. This is the theme of the opening chapter of the Qur'ān which is constantly repeated, in one form or another, in the main body of the Holy Book.

CHAPTER 2
AL-BAQARAH
(Revealed after Hijrah)

Title, Date of Revelation and Context

This, the longest Sūrah of the Qur'ān, was revealed at Medina in the first four years after the Hijrah and is known as Al-Baqarah. The name was used by the Holy Prophet himself. The Sūrah seems to have derived its title from vv. 68-72 where an important incident in the life of the Jewish nation is briefly mentioned. For a long time the Jews had lived in Egypt as serfs and slaves under the most cruel bondage of the Pharaohs who were cow-worshippers. As is generally the case with subject races, they had borrowed from, and slavishly imitated, many customs and habits of the Egyptians and consequently had come to possess a strong liking, bordering on adoration, for the cow. When Moses told them to sacrifice a particular cow which symbolised their object of worship, they made a great fuss about it. It is this incident to which vv. 68-72 refer. Besides Al-Baqarah, the Sūrah possesses another name—Az-Zahrā', and both this Sūrah and Āl-e-'Imrān are jointly known as Az-Zahrawān—The Two Bright Ones (Muslim). The Holy Prophet is reported to have said: 'Everything has its peak, and the peak of the Qur'ān is Al-Baqarah' (Tirmidhī). The Sūrah is placed next to Al-Fātiḥah because it embodies answers to all the important problems which at once confront the reader when he turns from Al-Fātiḥah to a study of the main Book. Though generally connected with all the other Sūrahs, Al-Fātiḥah possesses a special relationship with Al-Baqarah which constitutes the fulfilment of the prayer, 'Guide us in the straight path... Thy displeasure.' Indeed Al-Baqarah with its discourses upon the Signs, the Book, the Wisdom and the Means of purification (2:130), constitutes an appropriate and comprehensive reply to that great prayer.

Subject-Matter

It is sometimes said that the Qur'ān starts with this Sūrah as its very opening verse, viz. "This is a perfect Book; there is no doubt in it," shows; while Al-Fātiḥah being, as it were, the Qur'ān in miniature though forming its integral part, possesses an independent and peculiar position of its own (15:88). The subject-matter of this long Chapter is epitomized in its 130th verse. This verse contains a prayer of the Patriarch Abraham in which he implores God to raise a Prophet among the Meccans who should (1) recite to them the Signs of God; (2) give the world a Scripture containing perfect laws of the Sharī'ah; (3) explain the wisdom underlying them; and (4) should lay down principles and rules of conduct which should bring about complete spiritual transformation in their lives and should make them a great and powerful nation, fit to lead the whole world. The four great objects for which Abraham prayed have been dealt with in this Chapter in the same order in which he prayed for them. The "Signs" are discussed in the first 168 verses, the "Book" and "Wisdom" in vv. 169-243 and lastly "the Means of national progress" in vv. 244-287. "The recital of the Signs" refers to the arguments about the truth of the Holy Prophet; "the teaching of the Book and Wisdom" to the laws of the Sharī'ah laid down in the Sūrah and the wisdom or philosophy which underlies them, and last of all in elucidation of the subject of the spiritual change spoken of in Abraham's prayer it refers to the principles that lead to national awakening.

The Sūrah has 40 sections and 287 verses. It opens with a statement of three fundamental beliefs—belief in God, Revelation and Life after death and two practical ordinances about Prayer and Zakāt, the rest being an extension and explanation of these principles and ordinances. In response to the prayer for guidance, the Qur'ān claims to present a perfect code of laws which comprises all the truths that were found in earlier revealed Scriptures, with much more that they did not contain, and claims also to guide man to the highest pinnacle of spiritual glory. The second section decries and deprecates mere verbal profession of faith which has no deep roots in the heart. The third section, however, lays down standards and criteria by which the truth of the Qur'ān can be tested and verified. And for this purpose it draws pointed attention to the process of evolution working in the physical universe. This process is to be seen in the spiritual realm also. Then mention is made of the first link in this spiritual chain—of Adam, the first man, to whom God revealed His Will. In the 4th section we are told that objections are being raised against the Holy Prophet. But these objections cannot detract from his truth even as they could not detract from Adam's truth. The next twelve sections—5th to 16th—dispose of the objection, viz. where was the necessity of a new revelation when God had already revealed Himself to Adam? It is stated that in harmony with progressive evolution in the spiritual system, God has been sending down His revelation in every age, every succeeding revelation being an improvement upon the preceding one. Moses was the Founder of a new Sharī'ah. He was followed by a galaxy of Divine Messengers who were opposed and persecuted by the Israelites. Persistent defiance of Divine commandments on the part of the Israelites and their iniquities made them lose their title to Divine grace. Hence Prophethood, in accordance with biblical prophecies, was transferred to the House of Ishmael and the Holy Prophet was raised in the barren and arid Valley of Mecca with the most perfect and complete Law. This filled the Israelites with rage though they had no right to fret and fume at their being deprived of Prophethood. They opposed the Holy Prophet and spared no pains to bring him to naught. But opposition to Divine purpose has never succeeded.

The next two sections dispense with the objections of the Israelites as to why the Holy Prophet has given up the Qiblah of all the former Prophets in favour of the Ka'bah. They are told that in the first place facing a certain direction in Prayers or fixing a particular place as the Qiblah cannot be an object to be sought after, it only serves to bring about and maintain unity among a people. Secondly, in the prayers which Abraham had offered for the sons of Ishmael, it was prophesied that Mecca would one day become a place of pilgrimage for them and the Ka'bah their Qiblah. In the 19th section it is mentioned that the Holy Prophet will meet strong opposition from disbelievers in the discharge of his onerous mission, and this opposition will continue till the Fall of Mecca. The 20th section draws attention to the supreme truth that all that is stated above is not an idle guess or conjecture; the very creation of the heavens and the earth, the alternation of day and night and other natural phenomena bear incontrovertible testimony to its truth inasmuch as, on the one hand, the law of nature points to the existence of a spiritual law and to a process of progressive evolution in it and, on the other, the whole universe seems to be working in support of the Holy Prophet. With the 21st section begins a description of the ordinances of the Sharī'ah and the wisdom underlying them; and first of all directions have been laid down for using lawful (Ḥalāl) and wholesome (Ṭayyib) food, because human actions are governed by man's mental condition and his mental condition is strongly influenced by the food he eats. In the 23rd section substance of Islamic teaching is given which consists of belief in God, Life after death, revealed Scriptures and Divine Messengers. Doing good to others, worship and contributions to national funds are also mentioned as constituents of righteous conduct. To these, observance of patience under trials and fulfilment of solemn promises are added. Maintenance of justice, legitimate help of relatives and observance of social laws, of which the law of inheritance occupies a most prominent place, are also regarded as important. In the next section stress is laid on devotional exercises which purpose is fulfilled by the Islamic Fast. Sections 24th and 25th deal with rites and laws pertaining to Pilgrimage which plays a very important role in bringing about national unity and solidarity among Muslims. In section 26th light is shed on the philosophy of ordinances of the Sharī'ah which should be shown due regard because outward acts have a very potent effect on inward purity. Then it is stated that the laws of the Sharī'ah are disregarded because men generally do not like to spend their time and money in the cause of God and they adduce lame excuses to shirk their duty in this respect. In fact, no progress is possible without sacrifice and believers are exhorted to spend their hard-earned wealth in the way of Allāh so that full religious freedom may be established. In section 27th we are told that when religious freedom is interfered with, fighting becomes obligatory and sacrifice of life and money necessary. Then it is stated that, in order to while away their time and to seek mental relief, people indulge in drinking, and in order to collect money to meet the expenses of war, they have recourse to gambling. Islam condemns these evil practices. Next, we are told that war leaves behind many orphans who should be properly looked after, and in this connection Muslims are enjoined not to contract marriage with idolatrous women because it is calculated to disturb the harmony of their domestic life. In sections 28th, 29th, 30th and 31st, we are told not to have sexual intercourse with women in their monthly courses which is a sort of temporary separation. These instructions are followed by laws that govern divorce which is more or less a permanent separation and then by laws that concern suckling and also treatment of widows. Sections 32nd and 33rd deal with principles that have a special bearing on national awakening and by observing which alone a people can make real progress, and Muslims are told that a people who seek to occupy an honoured place among the powerful nations must be prepared to face death to promote the cause of truth and righteousness. In section 34th it is mentioned that man's stay on earth is but temporary and he should spare no effort to establish real connection with his Creator, and this is only possible by deep meditation on Divine attributes. Then in Āyatul-Kursiyy, which the Holy Prophet has termed as one of the best and most exalted Quranic verses, a brief but very comprehensive mention is made of God's attributes and it is said that no compulsion is needed to exhort a person to establish his connection with the Possessor of such noble and sublime attributes. Then in the 35th section it is stated that whereas moral righteousness takes place in an individual directly through God's own grace, moral transformation comes about among nations through the instrumentality of Divine Messengers, and hints that both these kinds of reformation are decreed to take place four times among the progeny of Abraham. Next, it is said that both collective effort and national cooperation are essential for moral transformation to take place on national scale; the results in this respect of the concerted and collective efforts and mutual cooperation of true believers are far in excess of their sacrifices. Then all transactions based on interest are strictly forbidden and the giving and taking of interest has been denounced as tantamount to waging war against God and His Prophet because transactions based on interest are against the spirit of mutual help and cooperation and of doing good to fellow beings. Muslims are further told that they should entertain no apprehension that no progress is possible without interest. God has decreed that eventually destruction will overtake nations which give or take interest. Next, it is stated that one way of rendering mutual help and cooperation is to advance money on loan but all transactions dealing with lending and borrowing money should be properly written down. The Sūrah ends on the beautiful note that whereas the above-mentioned directions are necessary for bringing about moral transformation among a people, the best, the safest and the surest means to raise their moral standard and to effect real and true righteousness and purity of character among them is that they should have firm faith in the Word of God, constantly keep in view, reflect and meditate upon His attributes and should seek Divine help by prayer sincerely offered to Him.

This is, in brief, a summary of the subject-matter of this longest of the Quranic Sūrahs and the moral is forcefully brought home directly to the disbelievers in general and to the People of the Book in particular that in the Holy Prophet is fulfilled the prayer of the Patriarch Abraham and thus if the Holy Prophet is rejected, Abraham will have to be regarded as a liar and an impostor and consequently the whole Mosaic Dispensation and Christianity also will be dubbed as tissues of lies and falsehoods. Indirectly, the truth of the Message of Islam has been made clear for the whole world to accept because the creation of man possesses a great and sublime object and that object can only be fulfilled by believing in the message embodied in the Qur'ān which alone now contains the right Sharī'ah and sheds light on the wisdom and philosophy of its ordinances and by believing in and acting upon which alone can purity of the heart and Divine Realisation be attained.

2. Alif Lām Mīm.[16]

16. Abbreviations, like Alif Lām Mīm, are known as al-Muqaṭṭa'āt (letters used and pronounced separately), and occur in the beginning of not less than 28 Sūrahs, and are made up of one or more, to a maximum of five, letters of the Arabic alphabet. The letters out of which these abbreviations are constituted are fourteen in number: Alif, Lām, Mīm, Ṣād, Rā, Kāf, Hā, Yā, 'Ain, Ṭā, Sīn, Ḥā, Qāf and Nūn. Of these Qāf and Nūn occur alone in the beginning of Sūrahs Qāf and Qalam, the rest occur in combinations of two or more in the beginning of certain Sūrahs. The use of Muqaṭṭa'āt was in vogue among the Arabs. They used them in their poems and conversation. An Arab poet says: Qulnā Qifī Lanā, Faqālat Qāf i.e. "We said to her, 'Stop for us for a while' and she said that she was stopping" the letter Qāf standing for Waqaftu (I am stopping). There is also a saying of the Holy Prophet as reported by Qurṭubī to the effect: Kafā Bis-Saifi Shā, i.e. sufficient is sword as a remedy, Shā standing for Shāfiyan. In the modern West and in its imitation in Eastern countries also abbreviations are very popular and widespread. Every dictionary provides a list of them. The Muqaṭṭa'āt are abbreviations for specific attributes of God and the subject-matter of a Sūrah before which they are placed has a deep connection with the Divine attributes for which they stand. They have not been haphazardly placed at the beginning of different Sūrahs, nor are their letters combined arbitrarily. There runs a deep and far-reaching connection between their various sets, and the letters of which they are made also serve a definite purpose. The subject-matter of those Chapters which have no abbreviated letters is subordinate to, and follows the pattern of the subject-matter of the preceding Chapters possessing them. Of the meanings ascribed to Muqaṭṭa'āt two seem to be more authentic: (a) That each letter has a definite numerical value (Jarīr). The letters Alif Lām Mīm have the numerical value 71 (Alif having the numerical value 1, Lām 30 and Mīm 40). Thus the placing of Alif Lām Mīm in the beginning of the Sūrah may signify that its subject-matter, i.e. the special consolidation of early Islām, would take 71 years to unfold itself completely. (b) They are, as stated above, abbreviations for specific attributes of God and the Sūrah before which Muqaṭṭa'āt are placed is, in its subject-matter, connected with the Divine attributes for which the specific Muqaṭṭa'āt stand. Thus the abbreviation Alif Lām Mīm placed here and in the beginning of the 3rd, 29th, 30th, 31st and 32nd Chapters of the Qur'ān signifies, "I am Allāh, the All-Knowing" which has the authority of Ibn-e-'Abbās and Ibn-e-Mas'ūd, Alif standing for Anā, Lām for Allāh and Mīm for A'lamu; or according to some Alif stands for Allāh, Lām for Jibrīl and Mīm for Muḥammad, indicating that the central theme of the Sūrah is Divine knowledge which was given to Muḥammad by Allāh through Jibrīl. These abbreviated letters form an integral part of the Quranic revelation (Bukhārī).

17. Dhālika is primarily used in the sense of "that," but is also sometimes used in the sense of "this" (Aqrab). Sometimes it is used to indicate the high rank and dignity of the subject to which it refers. Here it signifies that the Book is, as it were, remote from the reader in eminence and loftiness of merit (Fatḥ).

17A. The particle al, like the definite article "the" in the English language, is used to denote a definite object known to the reader. In this sense the word Dhālikal-Kitābu would mean, this is the Book, or this is that Book—the promised Book. The particle is also used to denote the combination of all possible attributes in one individual. The expression thus means, this is a Book which possesses all those excellent qualities which a perfect book should possess. Or it means, this alone is a perfect Book.

18. Raib means, disquietude or uneasiness of mind; doubt; affliction or calamity and evil opinion; false charge or calumny (Aqrab). The verse does not mean that nobody will ever entertain any doubt about the Qur'ān. It only means that its teaching is so rational that a right-thinking person, who approaches it with an unbiased mind, will find it a safe and sure guide.

19. Muttaqī is derived from Waqā which has the sense of guarding against that which harms or injures. Wiqāyah means, a shield and Ittaqā bihī (Muttaqī is in the nominative case of Ittaqā) means, he took him or it as a shield (Lane). Ubayy bin K'ab, a distinguished Companion of the Holy Prophet, aptly explains Taqwā by likening Muttaqī to one who walks through thorny bushes, taking all possible care that his clothes are not caught in, and torn by, their branches (Kathīr). A Muttaqī, therefore, is one who is ever on his guard against sins and takes God for his shield or shelter and is very regardful of his duty. The words, "a guidance for the righteous," mean that guidance contained in the Qur'ān knows no limit. It helps man to attain limitless stage of spiritual perfection and makes him more and more deserving of God's favours.

20. Al-Ghaib means anything hidden or invisible; anything unseen, absent or far away (Aqrab). God, the angels and the Last Day are all al-Ghaib.

الصَّلٰوةَ وَ مِمَّا رَزَقْنٰهُمْ يُنْفِقُوْنَ ۙ

وَالَّذِيْنَ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِمَآ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْكَ وَ مَآ اُنْزِلَ مِنْ قَبْلِكَ ۚ وَ بِالْاٰخِرَةِ

5. And who believe in that which has been [b]revealed to thee[23] and that which was revealed before thee[24] and

[a]2:196, 255, 263, 268; 3:93; 8:4; 9:34; 13:23; 14:32; 22:36; 28:55; 32:17; 42:39.
[b]2:137, 286; 3:200; 4:61, 137, 163; 5:60.

Moreover, the word as used in the Qur'ān does not mean imaginary and unreal things, but real and verified things, though unseen (32:7; 49:19). It is, therefore, wrong to suppose, as some Western critics of the Qur'ān do, that Islām forces upon its followers some mysteries of Faith and invites them to believe in them blindly. The word signifies things which, though beyond the comprehension of human senses, can nevertheless be proved by reason or experience. The supersensible need not necessarily be irrational. Nothing of "the unseen" in which a Muslim is called upon to believe is outside the scope of reason. There are many things in the world which, though unseen, are yet proved to exist by invincible arguments, and nobody can deny their existence.

21. The clause, "they observe Prayer," means, they perform their Prayers with all the prescribed conditions; Aqāma meaning, he kept the thing or the affair in a right state (Lane). Worship is the outer expression of the inner relationship of man to God. Moreover, God's favours surround the body as well as the soul. So, perfect worship is that in which body and soul both play their part. Without the two the true spirit of worship cannot be preserved, for though adoration by the heart is the substance and adoration by the body only the shell, yet the substance cannot be preserved without the shell. If the shell is destroyed, the substance is bound to meet with a similar fate.

22. Rizq means, anything bestowed by God on man, whether material or otherwise (Mufradāt). The verse lays down three directions and describes three stages for the spiritual well-being of man: (1) He should believe in the truths which are hidden from his eyes and are beyond his physical senses, for it is such a belief which shows that he is possessed of the right sort of Taqwā or righteousness. (2) When he reflects on the creation of the universe and the marvellous order and design which exist in it and when, as a result of this reflection, he becomes convinced of the existence of the Creator, an irresistible longing to have a real and true union with Him takes hold of him. This finds consummation in the observance of Prayer. (3) Lastly, when the believer succeeds in establishing a living contact with his Creator, he feels an inward urge to serve his fellow-beings.

23. Belief in the Holy Prophet is the central point so far as belief in the Prophets of God is concerned (2:286; 4:66, 137).

24. Islām makes it obligatory upon its followers to believe in the Divine origin of the teachings of all previous Prophets because God sent His

[e]4:156; 6:26, 47; 7:102, 180; 10:75; 16:109; 45:24; 83:15.

Messengers to all peoples (13:8; 35:25).

25. Al-Ākhirah means, (a) the Last Abode, i.e. the next life; (b) it may also signify the revelation which is to follow. This second meaning of the word finds further exposition in 62:3, 4 where the Qur'ān speaks of two advents of the Holy Prophet. His first advent took place among the Arabs in the 7th century of the Christian era when the Qur'ān was revealed to him; and his second advent was to take place in the Latter Days in the person of one of his followers. This prophecy found its fulfilment in the person of Aḥmad, the Promised Messiah and Founder of the Aḥmadiyya Movement.

26. The verse speaks of such disbelievers as become so indifferent to truth that it does not matter whether they receive a warning or not. Of these it is declared that as long as their present condition continues, they will not believe.

27. Organs which remain unused for a long time atrophy and become useless. The disbelievers mentioned here refused to employ their hearts and ears for the comprehension of truth, consequently their capacities for hearing and understanding were lost. It is only the natural consequence of wilful indifference which is described in the clause, Allāh has set a seal. As all laws proceed from God and every cause is followed by its natural effect under His Will, so the sealing of the hearts and the ears of disbelievers is ascribed to Him.

9. And of the people there are some who say, [a]'We believe in Allāh and the Last Day;' while they are not believers at all.[28]

10. They [b]would deceive[29] Allāh and those who believe, but they deceive none but themselves; only they perceive it not.

11. [c]In their hearts was a disease, so Allāh has increased their disease;[30] and for them is a grievous punishment because they lied.

12. And when it is said to them [d]'Create not disorder in the earth,' they say, 'We are only promoters of peace.'

13. Beware! it is surely they who create disorder, but they do not perceive it.

[a]2:178; 3:115; 4:40, 60; 6:93; 58:23. [b]4:143. [c]5:53; 9:125; 74:32. [d]2:28, 221.

28. Only God and the Last Day are mentioned, other Islamic beliefs being left out, because God and the Last Day are respectively the first and the last items in the Islamic formula of faith and a profession of belief in them ipso facto implies profession of belief in the other items. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān states that belief in the Last Day implies belief in angels as well as in the Divine Books (6:93).

29. Khāda'a-hū means, he sought or desired to deceive him but did not succeed in his attempt. Khāda'a-hū means, he succeeded in his attempt to deceive him; he forsook him or it (Baqā'). The former word is used about a man when he has not attained his desire and the latter when he has attained it (Lane).

30. God has shown so many Signs in support of Islām and it has become gradually so powerful that the hypocrites have become more and more afraid of Muslims and have consequently grown in their hypocrisy.

وَاِذَا قِيْلَ لَهُمْ اٰمِنُوْا كَمَآ اٰمَنَ النَّاسُ قَالُوْٓا اَنُؤْمِنُ كَمَآ اٰمَنَ السُّفَهَآءُ ؕ اَلَآ اِنَّهُمْ هُمُ السُّفَهَآءُ وَلٰكِنْ لَّا يَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿١٤﴾

15. And [a]when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe;' but when they are alone with their ring-leaders[32] they say, 'We are certainly with you; [b]we were only mocking.'

اَللّٰهُ يَسْتَهْزِئُ بِهِمْ وَيَمُدُّهُمْ فِيْ طُغْيَانِهِمْ يَعْمَهُوْنَ ﴿١٦﴾

16. [c]Allāh will punish[33] their mockery and will [d]let them continue[33A] in their transgression, wandering blindly.[34]

[a]2:77; 3:120; 5:62. [b]9:64-65. [c]9:79; 11:9; 21:42. [d]6:111; 7:187; 10:12.

31. The hypocrites regarded the Muslims as a pack of fools in that they suffered, as the hypocrites thought, useless sacrifice of life and property for a lost cause. They themselves are fools, says the verse, as the cause of Islām is destined to make progress and to prosper.

32. Shayāṭīn means, ring-leaders (Ibn-e-'Abbās, Ibn-e-Mas'ūd, Qatādah and Mujāhid). The Holy Prophet is reported to have said: 'A single rider is a Shaiṭān, a pair of riders is also a pair of Shaiṭāns, but three riders are a body of riders (Dāwūd). The tradition lends support to the view that Shaiṭān does not necessarily mean a devil.

33. Yastahzi'u bi-him means, will punish them. In Arabic punishment for an evil deed is sometimes denoted by the word used for the evil itself. "The penalty for an evil deed is an evil the like thereof" (42:41). The famous Arab poet 'Amr bin Kulthūm says: Alā lā Yajhalan Aḥadun 'Alainā, Fanajhal Fauqa Jahlal-Jāhilīna, i.e. Beware! none should dare employ ignorance against us, or we will show greater ignorance, i.e. we will avenge his ignorance (Mu'allaqāt).

33A. The words do not mean that God grants the hypocrites respite to let them increase in their transgression. Such a meaning is contradicted by (35:38), where it is stated that God grants disbelievers respite that they should reform themselves.

34. 'Umyun is the plural of A'mā which is derived from al-'Amā. Al-'Amah

17. These are they who [a]have bartered away guidance for error;[35] but their traffic has brought them no gain, nor are they rightly guided.

means, mental blindness and al-'Amā means, both mental and physical blindness (Aqrab).

35. (1) They have given up guidance and taken error instead; (2) both guidance and error were offered to them but they preferred error and refused guidance.

36. The word "fire" is sometimes used for war. "The kindler of fire" in the verse may signify either the hypocrites who conspired with disbelievers to wage war against Islām, or the Holy Prophet who under God's command kindled a Divine light. He is reported to have said: 'My example is like that of a person who kindles a fire' (Bukhārī).

37. The expression signifies that the hypocrites fomented wars in order to re-establish their lost influence but the actual result of these wars was the exposure of their hypocrisy and their consequent confusion and perplexity. The word Ẓulumāt has always been used in the Qur'ān in the plural, signifying moral and spiritual darkness. Sin and vice never exist in isolation. One vice attracts another and one misfortune draws another. The meaning is that the hypocrites are overtaken by manifold dangers and calamities.

38. As they turned a deaf ear to the Prophet's admonition and did not express their doubts to have them dispelled and had become insensitive to the progress that Islām was making before their very eyes, they are spoken of as deaf, dumb and blind.

39. Samā' means, anything which hangs overhead and gives shade; the sky or the heaven; a cloud or clouds (Lane).

40. This and the preceding verses refer to two classes of hypocrites: (1) Disbelievers who posed as Muslims; and (2) believers, bad in faith and worse in works, with leaning towards disbelief. The purport of the verse seems to be that the condition of the latter class of hypocrites is like that of those timorous people who, at a mere shower of rain with thunder and lightning, become alarmed and fail to benefit by it.

41. The hypocrites, described as weak believers, are very near to losing their sight. They have not actually lost it, but if they are repeatedly confronted with situations demanding courage and sacrifice symbolized by lightning and thunder, they are very likely to lose it—their faith. But the mercy of God has so ordained that lightning is not always accompanied by thunderbolt. Often it is only a brilliant flash, which lifts the veil of darkness and helps the wayfarer to move on. In case Islām seems to make progress, these hypocrites make common cause with the Muslims. But when lightning is accompanied by thunder, i.e. when the situation demands sacrifice of life or property the world becomes dark to them; they become dumbfounded and stand still, refusing to move on with the Faithful.

42. This verse contains the first commandment of God given in the Qur'ān. As the words show the commandment is addressed to all mankind and not to Arabs only, which indicates that Islām, from the very beginning, claimed to be a universal religion. It abolished the ideal of national religion and conceived mankind as one brotherhood.

43. The expression suggests that just as a building or a roof is a means of protection for those living in or under it, similarly the remoter parts of the universe serve as a protection for our planet (earth); and those who have studied the science of the stars, the clouds and other atmospheric phenomena, know how the other heavenly bodies, running their courses through the boundless expanse rising high above the earth on all sides, make for its safety and stability. It is also hinted here that the perfection of the material world depends upon the co-ordination between earthly and heavenly forces.

44. The subject of the incomparable excellence of the Qur'ān has been dealt with at five different places, i.e. in 2:24; 10:39; 11:14; 17:89 & 52:34, 35. In two of these five verses (2:24 & 10:39) the challenge is identical, while in the remaining three verses three separate and different demands have been made from disbelievers. At first sight this difference in the form of the challenge at different places seems to be incongruous. But it is not so. In fact, these verses contain certain demands which stand for all time. The challenge is open even today in all the different forms mentioned in the Qur'ān as it was in the time of the Holy Prophet.

Before explaining the various forms of these challenges it is worth noting that their mention in the Qur'ān is invariably accompanied by a reference to wealth and power, except in the present verse which, as already stated, does not contain a new challenge but only repeats the challenge made in 10:39. From this it may be safely concluded that there exists a close connection between the question of wealth and power and the challenge for the production of the like of the Qur'ān or a part thereof. This connection lies in the fact that the Qur'ān has been held out to disbelievers as a priceless treasure. When disbelievers demanded material treasures from the Holy Prophet (11:13), they were told that he possessed a matchless treasure in the form of the Qur'ān; and when they asked, Wherefore has not an angel come with him (11:13), they were told in reply that angels did descend upon him, for their function was to bring the Word of God and the Divine Word had already been vouchsafed to him. Thus both the demands—for a treasure and for the descent of angels—have been jointly met by the Qur'ān which is a matchless treasure brought down by angels, and the challenge to produce its like has been put forward as a proof of its peerless quality.

Now, take the different verses containing this challenge separately. The greatest demand is made in 17:89, where disbelievers are required to bring a book like the whole of the Qur'ān with all its manifold qualities. In that verse disbelievers are not required to represent their composition as the Word of God. They may bring it forward as their own composition and declare it to be the equal of, or, for that matter, better than, the Qur'ān. But as at the time when this challenge was made the whole of the Qur'ān had not yet been revealed, the disbelievers were not required to produce the like of the Qur'ān then and there; and the challenge thus implied a prophecy that they would never be able to produce the like of it, neither in the form in which it then was, nor when it became complete. Again, the challenge was not confined to the disbelievers of the Prophet's time alone, but extended to doubters and critics of all time. The reason why the disbelievers in 11:14 have been called upon to produce ten Sūrahs and not the whole of the Qur'ān is that the question in that verse did not relate to the perfection of the whole of the Qur'ān in all respects, but to that of only a portion of it. The disbelievers had objected to some parts of it being defective. Hence they were not required to bring a complete book like the whole of the Qur'ān, but only ten Sūrahs in place of those parts of the Qur'ān which they deemed to be defective, in order that the truth of their assertion might be tested. As for the selection of the specific number 10 for this purpose, it may be noted that since in 17:89 the whole of the Qur'ān was claimed to be a perfect Book, its opponents were called upon to produce the like of the whole of it; but as in 11:14 the point was that certain portions of it were objected to, so they were asked to choose ten such portions as appeared to them to be most defective and then produce a composition even like those portions. In 10:39 disbelievers were called upon to produce the like of only one Sūrah of the Qur'ān. This is because, unlike the above-mentioned two verses, the challenge in that verse was in support of a claim made by the Qur'ān itself and not in refutation of any objection of the disbelievers. In 10:38 the Qur'ān claimed to possess five very prominent qualities. In support of this claim, verse 10:39 throws out a challenge to those who deny or doubt it to produce a single Sūrah containing these qualities in the same perfect form in which they are contained in the 10th Sūrah. The fifth challenge to produce the like of the Qur'ān is contained in the verse under comment (2:24) and here also, as in 10:39, disbelievers have been called upon to bring forward a single Sūrah like that of the Qur'ān. This challenge is preceded by the claim that the Qur'ān guides the righteous to the highest stages of spiritual progress. The disbelievers are told that if they are in doubt about the Divine origin of the Qur'ān, then they should bring forward a single Sūrah that may be comparable to it in the spiritual influence it exercises over its followers. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 58-62.

25. But if you do it not—and never shall you do it—then guard against the Fire, [a]whose fuel[45] is men[46] and stones,

فَإِنْ لَّمْ تَفْعَلُوْا وَلَنْ تَفْعَلُوْا فَاتَّقُوا النَّارَ الَّتِيْ وَقُوْدُهَا النَّاسُ وَالْحِجَارَةُ ۖ

The above explanation will show that all these challenges calling upon disbelievers to produce the like of the Qur'ān are quite distinct and separate one from the other, and all of them stand for all time, none of them superseding or cancelling the other. But as the Qur'ān comprises sublime and lofty ideas, it was inevitable that a most beautiful diction and the chastest style should have been employed as the vehicle for the expression of those ideas; otherwise the subject-matter was liable to remain obscure and doubtful and the perfect beauty of the Qur'ān would have been marred. Thus, in whatever form and in whatever respect disbelievers have been challenged to produce a composition like the Qur'ān, the demand for beauty of style and elegance of diction comparable to that of the Qur'ān also forms a part of the challenge.

45. The word "fuel" may be taken in a figurative sense, meaning that the punishment of Hell is caused by idol-worship. So the idols are like fuel for hell-fire being a means of bringing it into existence. Or, "stones" mean idols which the idolaters worship as gods, the idea being that the idolaters will be humiliated by witnessing that their gods were cast into the fire.

46. The words an-Nās (men) and al-Ḥijārah (stones) may also be taken as

which is prepared for the disbelievers.

وَبَشِّرِ الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَعَمِلُوا الصّٰلِحٰتِ اَنَّ لَهُمْ جَنّٰتٍ تَجْرِيْ مِنْ تَحْتِهَا الْاَنْهٰرُ ؕ كُلَّمَا رُزِقُوْا مِنْهَا مِنْ ثَمَرَةٍ رِّزْقًا ۙ قَالُوْا هٰذَا الَّذِيْ رُزِقْنَا مِنْ قَبْلُ ۙ وَاُتُوْا بِهٖ مُتَشَابِهًا ؕ وَلَهُمْ فِيْهَآ اَزْوَاجٌ مُّطَهَّرَةٌ ۙ وَّهُمْ فِيْهَا خٰلِدُوْنَ ﴿٢٦﴾

26. And give glad tidings to those who believe and do good works, that [a]for them are gardens beneath which flow streams. Whenever they are given a portion of fruit therefrom, they will say, 'This is what was given us before,' and gifts mutually resembling shall be brought to them. And they will have therein pure [b]mates,[46A] and therein will they abide.[47]

indicating two classes of inmates of Hell; an-Nās may denote those disbelievers who retain something of the love of God, and al-Ḥijārah (stones), those who have no love left for God in their hearts. Such men are indeed no better than stones. The word is plural of Ḥajar which means, a stone; a rock; gold, and also one unequalled, i.e. big man; a leader (Lane).

46A. The Qur'ān teaches that every created thing stands in need of a mate for its full development. In Paradise righteous men and women will have pure mates for perfecting their spiritual development and completing their happiness. What kind of mates these will be, will be realized only in the Hereafter.

47. This verse gives a brief description of the rewards which the believers will have in the next world. Critics of Islām have raised all sorts of objections to this description. The criticism is based upon a complete misunderstanding of the Islamic teaching about heavenly blessings. The Qur'ān emphatically declares that it is beyond human mind to comprehend their nature (32:18). The Holy Prophet is reported to have said: "No eye has seen them, nor has any ear heard of them, nor can the mind of man conceive of them" (Bukhārī). The question naturally arises, why have the blessings of Heaven been given the names used for material things in this world? This is because the address of the Qur'ān is not merely to those people who are intellectually advanced. Therefore, it has used simple words which can be understood by all. While describing the heavenly blessings, the Qur'ān has used the names of things generally looked upon as good in this world, and believers are told that they would get all these things in a better form in the next world. It is to bring out this important contrast that familiar words have been used; otherwise there is nothing common between the joys of this world and the blessings of the next. Moreover, according to Islām, the next life is not spiritual in the sense that it will just consist of a mental state only. Even in the next life the human soul will have a kind of body, but that body will not be material. One can form some idea of this from the phenomenon of dreams. The scenes which a man witnesses in a dream cannot be called purely mental or spiritual, because in that state also he has a body and finds himself sometimes in gardens with streams, and eats fruits and drinks milk. It is difficult to say that the contents of dreams are only mental states. The milk enjoyed in a dream is no doubt a real experience, but no one can say that it is the material milk, found in this world which he drinks. The spiritual blessings of the next life will not be a mere subjective realization of the gifts of God which we enjoy in this world. What we have here is just a representation of the real and true gifts of God which man will find in the next world. Moreover, "gardens" represent faith; and "streams" good actions. Gardens cannot prosper without streams, nor can faith without good actions. Therefore, faith and actions are inseparable for the attainment of salvation. In the next world, gardens will remind the believers of their faith in this life and streams will remind them of their good works. They will know, then, that their faith and good works have not gone in vain. It is wrong to conclude from the words, this is what was given us before, that in Heaven the believers will be given such fruits as they had enjoyed in this world, because, as already explained, the two are not identical. The fruits of the next world will, in fact, be the images of the quality of their own faith. When they will eat them, they will at once recognize and remember that they are the fruits of the faith they had in this world; and it will be out of gratitude for this that they will say: This is what was given us before. This expression may also mean, 'what was promised to us.'

The words "mutually resembling" refer to the resemblance between the acts of worship performed by believers in this world and the fruits thereof in Heaven. The acts of worship performed in this life will appear to believers as fruits in the next. The more sincere and the more appropriate a man's worship, the more will he enjoy his portion of the fruits in Paradise and the better in quality will they be. It, therefore, lies in one's own power to improve the quality of one's fruits as one likes. The verse also signifies that the spiritual food for believers in Heaven will be suited to the taste of each and every individual and to his stage of progress and degree of spiritual development.

The words, they will abide, signify that the believers in Heaven will not be subject to any change or decay. Man dies only when he cannot assimilate food or when someone kills him. But since the food of Paradise will be perfectly suited to every individual and since man will have pure and peaceful companions, death and decay will automatically disappear.

The Faithful will also have pure mates in Heaven. A good wife is a joy and a comfort. The Faithful try to have good wives in this world, and they will have good and virtuous mates in the next. Yet these Joys of Heaven are not physical. For a fuller description of the nature and reality of the blessings of Paradise see also Chapters Aṭ-Ṭūr, Ar-Raḥmān and Al-Wāqi'ah.

48. Ḍarabal-Mathala means, he gave an illustration or a description; he made a statement; he propounded a parable (Lane, Tāj & 14:46).

48A. God has described Heaven and Hell in the Qur'ān in metaphors and similes. Metaphors and similes express depths of meaning which cannot adequately be expressed otherwise, and in things of the spirit they provide perhaps the only method by which ideas can be properly conveyed. The words used for describing Heaven may be as inadequate and insignificant as a gnat; which is considered by the Arabs and, in fact is, a very, very weak creature. The Arabs say: Aḍ'afu min Ba'ūḍatin, i.e. he is weaker than a gnat. Nevertheless they help to conjure up the picture. The believers know the words are only metaphorical and try to get to the depth of their meaning; but the disbelievers begin to find fault with them and increase in error and misguidance.

48B. Fauq means, above and signifies both 'greater' and 'smaller' and is used in the sense which befits the context (Mufradāt).

49. Aḍallallāhu means, (1) God adjudged him to be in error; (2) God forsook or abandoned him so that he went astray (Kashshāf); (3) God found or left him in error or let him go astray (Lane).

50. Amwāt is the plural of Mayyit which means, a thing dead, or without life. Thus the word is used both for a thing which so far has had no life and also for a thing which had life but is now dead and defunct. The word is also used about one who is dying or is nearing death but has not yet died (Lane).

51. Ḥayāt signifies, (1) the faculty of growth; (2) of sensation; (3) of intellect; (4) freedom from grief or sorrow; (5) everlasting life in the world to come; (6) advantage or profit or a means thereof; (7) state of activity and power (Lane).

52. The verse points to the supreme truth that man's life does not end with the extinction and dissolution of his physical body, as it is pregnant with too big an import to end with the latter's decay and death. If life had no great purpose God would not have created it and, after having created it, would not have made it subject to death unless there had been an afterlife. If death were the end of all life, then the creation of man would have been "a mere sport and pastime" and this would have constituted a great reflection on the wisdom of God. The fact that God, the Source of all wisdom and intelligence, has done all this shows that He has not created man to return to dust after a life of merely 60 or 70 years. On the contrary, He has created him for a better, fuller and everlasting life which he must live after he has shed the encumbrances of his physical tabernacle.

53. After death the human soul does not go at once to Heaven or Hell. There is an intermediate state called Barzakh in which it is made to taste some of the good or bad results of its deeds; and Resurrection, which will herald a full and complete requital, will take place later.

means, he turned to a thing or he directed his attention to it (Lane).

55. Sawwā-hu means, he made it uniform or even, congruous or consistent in its several parts; he fashioned it in a suitable manner; he made it adapted to the exigencies, or requirements of its case; he perfected it; or he put it into a right or good state (Lane).

56. In Arabic "seven" is generally used as a symbol of perfection and the word along with "seventy" or "seven hundred" signifies a large number. All these three words have been used in this sense in the Qur'ān (9:80; 15:45). Elsewhere, the words "seven heavens" have been substituted by "seven stages" (23:18).

56A. The sun, the moon and other heavenly bodies are of immense benefit to man. Modern science has made many discoveries in this connection—and many more may yet be made—all of which testify to the truth and comprehensiveness of the Quranic teaching. Science also continues to find more and more properties of things of this earth; many things which were formerly thought to be useless are now known to be highly serviceable to man.

57. Qāla is a common Arabic word meaning, he said. Sometimes, however, it is used in a figurative sense when, instead of a verbal expression, a state or condition amounting to a verbal expression is meant. The expression Imtala'ul-Ḥauḍu wa Qāla Qaṭnī (the tank became full and said, 'that will suffice') does not mean that the tank actually said so; only its condition implied that it was full.

The conversation between God and angels need not be taken in a literal sense as actually to have taken place. As stated above the word Qāla is sometimes used in a figurative sense to convey not actually a verbal expression, but simply a state or condition amounting to a verbal expression. The verse may thus simply mean that the angels by their state or condition implied a reply that has been here ascribed to them in words.

57A. Malā'ikah which is the plural of Malak is derived from Malaka which means, he controlled, or from Alaka meaning, he sent. The angels are called Malā'ikah because they control the forces of nature or because they bring Divine revelations to Heavenly Messengers and Reformers.

مَنْ يُّفْسِدُ فِيْهَا وَ يَسْفِكُ الدِّمَآءَ ۚ وَنَحْنُ نُسَبِّحُ بِحَمْدِكَ وَنُقَدِّسُ لَكَ ؕ قَالَ اِنِّيْٓ اَعْلَمُ مَا لَا تَعْلَمُوْنَ ۝٣٠

earth,' they said, 'Wilt Thou place therein such as will cause disorder in it, and shed blood?[58]—and we glorify[59] Thee with Thy praise and extol Thy holiness.'[60] He answered, 'I know what you know not.'[61]

58. The angels did not object to God's purpose or claimed superiority over Adam. Their question was prompted by God's announcement of His plan to appoint a vicegerent. A vicegerent is needed when order has to be maintained and laws enforced. The seeming objection of the angels meant that there would be people on earth who would create disorder and shed blood. Man having been endowed with great powers to do good and evil, the angels spoke of the darker side of his character but God knew that he could rise to such moral heights as to become the mirror of Divine attributes. To this bright side of his character the words "I know what you know not" refer.

59. The question of the angels was not by way of finding fault with God's work, but by way of seeking greater knowledge of the nature and wisdom of the appointment. For the meaning of Nusabbiḥu see 2981.

60. Whereas Tasbīḥ (glorifying) is used with regard to God's attributes, Taqdīs (extolling His holiness) is used concerning His actions.

61. Adam, who lived about 6000 years ago, is popularly believed to be the first man created by God upon earth. This view, however, is not corroborated by the Qur'ān. The world has passed through different cycles of creation and civilization, and Adam, the progenitor of the present human race, is only the first link in the present cycle, and not the very first man in God's creation. Nations have risen and fallen, civilizations have appeared and disappeared. Other Adams may have gone before our Adam; other races may have lived and perished, and other cycles of civilization may have appeared and disappeared. Muḥy-ud-Dīn Ibn-e-'Arabī, the great Muslim mystic says that once he saw himself in a dream performing a circuit of the Ka'bah. In the dream a man who claimed to be one of his ancestors appeared before him. "How long is it since you died," asked Ibn-e-'Arabī. "More than forty thousand years," the man replied. "But this period is much more than what separates us from Adam," said Ibn-e-'Arabī. The man replied, "Of which Adam are you speaking? About the Adam who is nearest to you or of some other?" "Then I recollected," says Ibn-e-'Arabī, "a saying of the Holy Prophet to the effect that God had brought into being no less than a hundred thousand Adams, and I said to myself, "perhaps this man who claims to be an ancestor of mine was one of the previous Adams" (Futūḥāt, ii, p.607).

32. And He taught Adam all[62] the [a]names,[62A] then He put the وَعَلَّمَ اٰدَمَ الْاَسْمَآءَ كُلَّهَا ثُمَّ عَرَضَهُمْ

[a]7:181; 17:111; 20:9; 59:24-25.

It is not claimed that the race which lived before Adam was entirely swept away before he was born. Most probably, there had remained a small degenerated remnant of the old race and Adam was one of them. God then selected him to be the progenitor of a new race and the precursor of a new civilization. Created, as it were, out of the dead he represented the dawn of a new era of life. As Khalīfah means a successor, it is clear that men had existed and lived on earth before Adam whom he succeeded, and we cannot say whether the original inhabitants of America, Australia, etc. are the progeny of this last Adam or of some other Adam gone before him.

Much has been said about the place where Adam was born or where he was raised as a Reformer. The popular view is that he was placed in Paradise but was later expelled therefrom and put somewhere on the earth. But the words "in the earth" contradict this view and definitely show that Adam lived on the earth and it was on the earth that he was raised as a Reformer. Most probably he was first made to live in Iraq but was later directed to move down to a neighboring land. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary" under this verse.

62. The word "all" used here does not imply absolute totality. It simply means all that was necessary. The Qur'ān uses this word in this sense elsewhere also (6:45; 27:17, 24; 28:58).

62A. Asmā' is plural of Ism which means, name or attribute; a mark or a sign of a thing (Lane & Mufradāt). Commentators differ as to what is here meant by the word Asmā' (names). Some think that God taught Adam the names of different things and objects, i.e. He taught him the principles of language. There is no doubt that man needed language in order to become civilized and God must have taught Adam its principles, but the Qur'ān indicates that there are Asmā' (names or attributes) which man must learn for the perfection of his morals. They are referred to in 7:181. This shows that man cannot attain to Divine knowledge without a correct conception and comprehension of God's attributes and that they can be taught only by God. So it was necessary that God should have, in the very beginning, given Adam (man) knowledge of His attributes so that he should know and recognize Him and attain His nearness and should not drift away from Him. According to the Qur'ān, man differs from angels in that while the former can be an image or reflex of al-Asmā'ul-Ḥusnā, i.e. all the perfect Divine attributes, the latter represent only a few of them. Angels have no will of their own, but only passively perform the functions allotted to them by Providence (66:7). On the other hand, man, endowed with volition and free choice, differs from angels in that he possesses capabilities which make him a perfect manifestation of all Divine attributes. Briefly, the verse signifies that God first implanted in Adam objects of these[62B] names before the angels and said, 'Tell Me the names of these, if you are right.'

free will and the needful capacity for the comprehension of various Divine attributes, and then gave him the knowledge of those attributes. Asmā' may also mean the qualities of the different things in nature. As man was to make use of the forces of nature, God endowed him with the capacity and power to know their qualities and properties.

62B. The pronoun hum (these) shows that the objects referred to here are not inanimate things; for in Arabic this form of pronoun is used only for rational beings. The meaning of the expression, therefore, would be that God granted to the angels a vision of the outstandingly righteous persons from among the progeny of Adam who were to become the manifestation of Divine attributes in the future, and were then asked whether they themselves could manifest the Divine attributes like them, to which they signified their inability. This is what is meant by the words, Tell Me the names of these, occurring in the present verse.

63. As the angels were conscious of their natural limitations, they frankly confessed that they were unable to reflect all God's attributes as man could do, i.e. they could reflect only such of His attributes as He, in His eternal wisdom, had granted them the power to reflect.

64. When the angels confessed their inability to manifest in themselves all the Divine attributes that Adam could manifest, the latter, in obedience to the Divine Will, manifested the different natural capabilities ingrained in him and revealed to the angels their extensive character. Thus Adam proved the necessity of the creation of a being who might secure from God the faculty of volition or the power of will by means of which he might voluntarily choose the way of goodness (or, of evil) and might thereby reveal the glory and greatness of God.

65. Adam having become an image of the attributes of God, and having attained the rank of a Prophet, God ordered the angels to serve him. The Arabic expression Usjudū does not mean—'fall prostrate before Adam,' because the Qur'ān definitely prohibits prostrating before anything but God (41:38) and a command to that effect could not have been given to angels. The command means, 'prostrate yourselves before Me as a mark of thanksgiving for My having created Adam.'

66. Illā (but) is used to signify 'exception.' In Arabic Istithnā' (exception) is of two kinds: (1) Istithnā' Muttaṣil, i.e. an exception in which the thing excepted belongs to the same class or species to which the things from which an exception is sought to be made belong, (2) Istithnā' Munqaṭi', i.e. an exception where the excepted thing belongs to a different class or species. In the verse under comment the word illā denotes the latter kind of exception, Iblīs not being one of the angels.

67. The word Iblīs is derived from Ablasa which means, (1) his good or virtue decreased; (2) he gave up hope or despaired of the mercy of God; (3) became broken in spirit; (4) was perplexed and unable to see his way; and (5) he was prevented from attaining his wish. Based on the root meaning of the word, Iblīs is a being which contains little of good and much of evil and which, on account of its having despaired of God's mercy owing to its disobedience, is left perplexed and confounded and unable to see its way. Iblīs is often considered identical with Satan, but is in some cases different from him. Iblīs, it must be understood, was not one of the angels, because, whereas he has been here described as disobeying God, the angels have been described as ever 'submissive' and 'obedient' (66:7). God was angry with Iblīs because he too was commanded to serve Adam but he disobeyed (7:13). Moreover, even if there were no separate commandment for Iblīs, the one for angels must be taken to extend to all beings because angels being the custodians of the different parts of the universe, the commandment given to them automatically extends to all beings. As stated above, Iblīs is really an attributive name given, on the basis of the root meaning of the word, to the Evil Spirit opposed to the angels. He has been so named because he possesses the attributes enumerated above, particularly the quality of being deprived of good and of being left not. He refused and deemed himself too big; and he was of the disbelievers.

وَكَانَ مِنَ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿٣٥﴾

36. And We said, 'O Adam, [a]dwell thou and thy wife in the garden,[68] and eat therefrom plentifully wherever you will,[68A] but approach not this tree,[69] lest you be of the wrongdoers.'

وَقُلْنَا يٰٓاٰدَمُ اسْكُنْ اَنْتَ وَزَوْجُكَ الْجَنَّةَ وَكُلَا مِنْهَا رَغَدًا حَيْثُ شِئْتُمَا ۪ وَلَا تَقْرَبَا هٰذِهِ الشَّجَرَةَ فَتَكُوْنَا مِنَ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿٣٦﴾

bewildered in the way and of despairing of God's mercy. That Iblīs was not the Satan spoken of in 2:37 is apparent from the fact that the Qur'ān mentions the two names side by side wherever the story of Adam is given, but everywhere a careful distinction is observed between the two. Wherever it speaks of the being who, unlike the angels, refused to serve Adam, it invariably mentions the name Iblīs, and wherever it speaks of the being who beguiled Adam and became the means of his being turned out of "the garden" it mentions the name 'Satan.' This distinction, which is most significant and which has been maintained throughout the Qur'ān, in at least ten places (2:35, 37; 7:12, 21; 15:32; 17:62; 18:51; 20:117, 121; 38:75) clearly shows that Iblīs is different from the 'Satan' who beguiled Adam and who was one of Adam's own people. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān says that Iblīs belonged to a secret creation of God and, unlike the angels, was capable of obeying or disobeying God (7:12, 13).

68. The word Jannah (garden) occurring in this verse does not refer to Heaven or Paradise but simply to the garden-like place where Adam was first made to live. It cannot refer to Heaven; first, because it was on the earth that Adam was made to live (2:37); secondly, Heaven is a place from which no one, who once enters it, is ever expelled (15:49), while Adam was made to quit the Jannah (garden) spoken of in this verse. This shows that the Jannah or garden in which Adam first dwelt was a place on this very earth which was given this name on account of the fertility of its soil and the abundance of its verdure. Recent researches go to show that the place was the Garden of Eden which lay near Babylon in Iraq or Assyria (Enc. Brit. under "Ur").

68A. The expression, eat therefrom plentifully wherever you will, indicates that the place where Adam lived had not yet come under anybody's jurisdiction and was what may be termed "God's land" which was given to Adam who was thus made, as it were, the lord of all he surveyed.

69. According to the Bible, the forbidden Shajarah (tree) was the tree of the knowledge of good and evil (Gen. 2:17). But according to the Qur'ān, after having eaten of the forbidden fruit, Adam and Eve became naked which signifies that, unlike knowledge which is a source of goodness, the tree was a source of evil, which made Adam exhibit a weakness. The Quranic view is evidently correct, because to deprive man of knowledge was to defeat the very purpose for which he had been brought into being. The Qur'ān and the Bible seem, however, to agree on the point that the tree was not a real one, but only a symbol, because no tree with either of the above characteristics, i.e. making a man naked or giving him knowledge of good or evil, is known to exist on the face of the earth. So the tree must represent something else. Shajarah also means a quarrel. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān makes mention of two kinds of Shajarah: (1) Shajaratu Ṭayyibah (good tree) and (2) Shajaratu Khabīthah (evil tree) for which see 14:25 & 27. Pure things and pure teachings are likened to the former, and impure things and impure thoughts to the latter. In view of these explanations, the verse would signify, (1) that Adam was enjoined to avoid quarrels; (2) that he was warned against evil things.

فَاَزَلَّهُمَا الشَّيْطٰنُ عَنْهَا فَاَخْرَجَهُمَا مِمَّا

37. But Satan[70] caused them both to [a]slip by means of it and drove them out of the state in which they were. And We said, [b]'Go forth hence; some of you are enemies of others and [c]for you there is an abode in the earth[71] and a provision for a time.'

70. The first two clauses of the verse mean that a satanic being enticed Adam and his spouse from the place in which they were placed and thereby deprived them of the comfort they enjoyed. As explained in 2:35 the being who beguiled and brought trouble on Adam was Shaiṭān and not Iblīs, who is spoken of as refusing to serve Adam. So Shaiṭān does not here refer to Iblīs, but to someone else from among the people of Adam's time who was his enemy. The inference is further supported by 17:66 according to which Iblīs could have no power over Adam. The word Shaiṭān is of much wider significance than Iblīs, for whereas Iblīs is the name given to the Evil Spirit who belonged to the jinn and refused to serve Adam, thereafter becoming the leader and representative of the forces of evil in the universe, Shaiṭān is any evil or harmful being or thing, whether a spirit or a human being or an animal or a disease or any other thing. Thus Iblīs is a 'satan,' his comrades and associates are 'satans,' enemies of truth are 'satans,' mischievous men are 'satans,' injurious animals are 'satans' and harmful diseases are 'satans.' The Qur'ān, the Hadith and Arabic literature are full of instances in which the word 'satans' has been freely used about one or all of these things.

71. The Qur'ān lends no support to the idea of anybody ascending to the heavens alive, for the verse clearly fixes the earth as the life-long abode of man and rejects the idea that Jesus or, for that matter, anybody else ever went

72. Khauf denotes fear about the future.

73. Ḥuzn generally relates to the fear about what is past.

74. Islām does not believe in the eternity of Hell, but regards it as a sort of penitentiary where sinners will be made to live for a limited period for spiritual treatment and cure. See 1351.

75. "Israel" is another name of Jacob, son of Isaac. This name was bestowed on Jacob by God later in life (Gen. 32:28). The original Hebrew word is a compound one, made up of Yasarā and Ail and means: God's prince, warrior or soldier (Concordance by Cruden & Hebrew-English Lexicon by W. Gesenius). The word Israel is used to convey three different senses: (1) Jacob personally (Gen. 32:28); (2) progeny of Jacob (Deut. 6:3-4); (3) any righteous and God-fearing person or people (Hebrew-English Lexicon).

76. After Abraham the "covenant" was renewed with the Israelites. This second "covenant" is mentioned at several places in the Bible (Exod. ch. 20; Deut. chaps. 5, 18, 26). When the "covenant" was being made and the glory of God was being manifested on Mount Sinai, the Israelites were so terrified to see "the thunderings and the lightnings and the noise of the trumpet and the mountain smoking" (Exod. 20:18) that accompanied this manifestation that they exclaimed to Moses, saying: "Speak thou with us and we will hear; but let not God speak with us, lest we die" (Exod. 20:19). These impudent words sealed their fate; for thereupon God said to Moses that, in future no Law-giving Prophet, as he was, would appear from among them. Such a Prophet would in future appear from among the brethren of the Israelites, i.e. the Ishmaelites. Thus in this verse God reminds the Children of Israel that He had made a "covenant" with Isaac and his seed after him to the effect that if they fulfilled their "covenant" with Him and obeyed all His commandments, He would continue to bestow His favours on them; but if they did not fulfil it, they would be deprived of His favours. Now, as the Israelites utterly failed to keep the "covenant," God raised the Promised Prophet from among the Ishmaelites as He had already promised, and henceforth the "covenant" was transferred to the followers of the new Prophet.

77. Muṣaddiq is derived from Ṣaddaqa which means, he held or declared him or it to be true (Lane). When the word is used in the sense of "holding a thing to be true," it is either followed by no preposition or by the preposition bā'. But when it is used in the sense of "fulfilling" as in the present verse, it is followed by the preposition lām (2:92 & 35:32). So here it means "fulfilling" and not "confirming" or "declaring to be true." The Qur'ān fulfils the prophecies that were contained in the previous Scriptures regarding the advent of a Law-giving Prophet and a universal Scripture. Wherever the Qur'ān speaks of itself as being Muṣaddiq of the previous Scriptures, it does not confirm their teachings but claims to have come in fulfilment of their prophecies. Nevertheless, it accepts the Divine origin of all the revealed Books before it. But it does not look upon all their present teachings to be true in their totality; for parts of them have been tampered with and much that was meant for a specific period has now become obsolete.

78. Here the Jews are forbidden (1) to mix the true with the false by quoting verses from their Scriptures and putting wrong interpretations on them; and (2) to suppress or hide the truth, i.e. suppress such prophecies in their Scriptures as refer to the Holy Prophet.

79. Rāki‘ means, one who bows down before God (Lisān). The Arabs used the word for one who worshipped God alone to the exclusion of idols (Asās).

80. Birr (good) means, behaving benevolently towards relations and others; truthfulness; fidelity; righteousness; obedience to God (Aqrab). The word also means extensive goodness or beneficence (Mufradāt).

81. 'Book' here refers to the Bible, but the clause, while you read the Book, does not imply that all the contents of the Bible have been accepted as true.

82. Ṣabr means, to adhere steadily to what reason and law command and to restrain oneself from what reason and law forbid and from manifesting grief, agitation and impatience (Mufradāt).

83. This verse along with the one that follows may be taken to be addressed either to the Jews or to the Muslims. In the former case, it constitutes a continuation of the address to the Israelites, meaning that they should not be hasty in rejecting the Holy Prophet but should try to find out the truth with patience and prayer. As taken to be addressed to Muslims it gives them a message of hope and encouragement. If they acted with patience and prayer, they need have no fear.

[a]2:224, 250; 11:30; 18:111; 29:6; 84:7. [b]See 2:41. [c]2:123; 3:34; 5:31; 6:87; 7:141; 45:17. [d]2:124; 31:34; 82:20.

84. The verse signifies that the Israelites were superior to the peoples of only their own age. Where the Qur'ān desires to convey the idea of permanent superiority of a people over all nations, it uses other expressions such as in (3:111), where Muslims have been mentioned as "the best people."

85. Shafā'ah is derived from Shafa'a which means, he provided a thing which was alone with another; joined a thing to its like (Mufradāt). Thus the word has the significance of likeness or similarity; also it means, interceding or praying for a person that he may be shown favour and his sins may be passed over on the ground that he is connected with the intercessor, it being also implied that the petitioner is a person of higher position than the one for whom he pleads and also has deep connection with the person with whom he intercedes (Mufradāt & Lisān). Shafā'ah (intercession) is governed by the following conditions: (1) He who intercedes must have a special connection with the person with whom he wishes to intercede and enjoys his special favour, for without such connection he dare not intercede nor can intercession be fruitful. (2) The person for whom intercession is to be made must have a true and real connection with the intercessor, for none would think of interceding for a person unless the latter has real relationship with the former. (3) The person in whose favour intercession is sought must generally be a good person who has made an honest effort to win the pleasure of God (21:29), only he has fallen into sin in a moment of weakness. (4) Intercession can only be made with God's express permission (2:256; 10:4). Shafā'ah as conceived by Islām is, in fact, only another form of repentance, because Taubah (repentance) signifies it, [a]nor shall ransom[86] be taken from it, nor shall they be helped.

وَاِذْ نَجَّيْنٰكُمْ مِّنْ اٰلِ فِرْعَوْنَ يَسُوْمُوْنَكُمْ سُوْٓءَ الْعَذَابِ يُذَبِّحُوْنَ اَبْنَآءَكُمْ وَيَسْتَحْيُوْنَ نِسَآءَكُمْ ؕ وَفِيْ ذٰلِكُمْ بَلَآءٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ عَظِيْمٌ ۝٥٠

50. And remember the time when We [b]delivered you from Pharaoh's[87] people[88] who afflicted you with grievous torment,[88A] [c]slaying your sons and sparing your women; and in that there was a great trial for you from your Lord.

وَاِذْ فَرَقْنَا بِكُمُ الْبَحْرَ فَاَنْجَيْنٰكُمْ وَاَغْرَقْنَآ اٰلَ فِرْعَوْنَ وَاَنْتُمْ تَنْظُرُوْنَ ۝٥١ reforming a broken connection or tightening up a loose one. So whereas the door of repentance becomes closed with death, the door of Shafā'ah remains open. Moreover, Shafā'ah is a means of the manifestation of God's mercy, and because God is not a judge but Master, there is nothing to stop Him from extending His mercy to whomsoever He pleases.

86. 'Adl (ransom) means, equity or justice; equal compensation; fair and equitable ransom (Aqrab).

87. Pharaoh was not the name of a particular monarch. The rulers of the Nile Valley and Alexandria were called Pharaohs. Moses was born in the reign of Pharaoh Rameses II, and had to leave Egypt with the Israelites in the reign of his son, Merenptah II. Rameses II, is called the Pharaoh of the Oppression and his successor Merenptah II, the Pharaoh of Exodus (Enc. Bib. & Peake's Commentary on the Bible).

88. Āl (people) is derived from the verb Āla which gives the sense of returning or governing or exercising control. The word thus means, the family or party of a man, or followers of a leader, or subjects of a ruler to whom they constantly return or who governs or exercises control over them (Lane).

88A. Pharaoh had inflicted upon the Israelites grievous torments by imposing upon them hard and disgraceful labour. He also had given orders that their sons be slain and their daughters spared. In this way he sought to destroy not only their manhood but to kill in them manly qualities.

89. The incident mentioned in this verse relates to the time when, under God's command, Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt into Canaan. The Israelites left secretly by night and when Pharaoh learnt of their flight, he pursued them with his hosts and was drowned in the Red Sea. In order to appreciate fully the nature and significance of this incident which constituted a great Divine Sign, it is necessary to read the verse under comment along with other relevant verses such as vv. 20:78; 26:62-64; 44:25. The following facts emerge from these verses: (a) When Moses struck the sea with his rod as the Qur'ān says, or stretched out his hand over the sea as the Bible says, it was the time of the ebb-tide and the sea was receding, leaving a dry bed. (b) Moses was commanded by God to cross quickly the dry bed to the opposite bank, which he did. (c) But when the hosts of Pharaoh reached the sea, it was the time of high-tide and in their zeal to overtake the Israelites they took no notice of it and at once jumped into the sea. (d) It seems that, being heavily equipped with big chariots and other heavy armaments the progress of the army of Pharaoh was greatly retarded so that while they were yet in the midst of the sea, the high tide returned and they were all drowned. The striking of the water of the sea with his rod by Moses had no cause and effect connection with the actual parting of the sea. It was merely a Sign or a Divine intimation for Moses that it was the time of the ebb-tide and that the Israelites should hasten to cross. God had so arranged that when Moses reached the sea the tide was about to recede, so that as soon as he struck the sea with his rod in obedience to Divine command, it began to recede and a dry path was made for the Israelites. The striking of the sea water with his rod by Moses and the recession of the sea coincided. This constituted a miracle because God alone knew when the sea would recede and He had commanded Moses to strike its waters at the time of recession.

Historians differ as to the exact place from where Moses crossed the Red Sea from Egypt into Canaan. Some are of the view that on his way from the territory of Goshen, which is also called the Valley of at-Tamthilāt or Wādī Tumilāt and where the capital of the Pharaohs was situated (Enc. Bib. vol.4, col. 4012, under "Rameses"), Moses passed by the Gulf of Timsāḥ (Enc. Bib., cols. 1438 and 1439). Others think that he went much further to the north and going round Zoan crossed over to Canaan near the Mediterranean Sea (Enc. Bib., col. 1438). But what is most probable is the fact that from Tal Abī Sulaimān, which was the capital of the Pharaohs in Moses's time, the Israelites at first went to north-east to the Gulf of Timsāḥ but finding that a net of gulfs barred their way, they turned south and crossed the Red Sea near the town of Suez where it is hardly more than 2 to 3 miles wide, and started for Qadas (Enc. Bib., col. 1437). "The Israelites fled with him (Moses) across the Goshen marshes into the Sinaitic peninsula. The crossing of the "Red Sea" (yam sūph, "sea" or "lake of reeds") was probably the crossing of the southern end of a lake a few miles N.W. of what is now called the Red Sea. A wind laid bare a wide stretch of shore, and when an Egyptian force pursued the fugitives, their chariot-wheels stuck fast in the wet soil, and the water returned upon them when the wind shifted. Writers differ as to the route taken by the Israelites. Some think that they moved southward to the mountainous range of (the modern) Sinai, and then along the eastern arm of the Red Sea, now known as the Gulf of 'Akaba, to its northernmost point at Ezion-Geber. Others

90. Moses, the Founder of Judaism, who delivered the Israelites from the tyranny of Pharaoh, was the greatest Israelite Prophet. According to biblical data he lived about 500 years after Abraham and about 1,400 years before Jesus. He was a Law-giving Prophet; the other Israelite Prophets that came after him were only the followers of his system.

91. See 7:143.

92. Man generally is the slave of his environments. This is particularly true of a subject people, who generally imitate the manners and customs of their rulers. The Israelites had lived under the bondage of Pharaohs for a long time, and naturally had imbibed the idolatrous faith of the Egyptians. When they left Egypt with Moses and came across an idol-worshipping people on the way, they requested him to sanction a similar worship for them (7:139).

93. The "Tablets" on which the Ten Commandments given to Moses were written. See 7:146, 151, 155.

94. Furqān means, arguments; morning or dawn; support (Lane).

The verse means that God gave Moses not only the Book or the Commandments written on the Tablets, but also such clear Signs and arguments, and brought about such events, as led to clear discrimination between truth and falsehood.

وَاِذْ قَالَ مُوْسٰى لِقَوْمِهٖ يٰقَوْمِ اِنَّكُمْ

55. And when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, you have indeed wronged yourselves by taking the calf for worship; turn ye therefore to your Maker, and kill your evil desires;[95] that is best for you in the sight of your Maker.' Then He turned towards you with compassion. Surely, He is Oft-Returning with compassion and is Merciful.

وَاَنْتُمْ تَنْظُرُوْنَ ۝٥٦

56. And remember when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe thee [a]until we see Allāh face to face;' then the thunderbolt overtook you, while you witnessed with your own eyes the consequences of your conduct.

ثُمَّ بَعَثْنٰكُمْ مِّنْۢ بَعْدِ مَوْتِكُمْ لَعَلَّكُمْ
تَشْكُرُوْنَ ۝٥٧

57. Then We [b]raised you up after your death,[96] that you might be grateful.

[a]4:154. [b]2:260; 6:123.

95. Anfusa-kum (your evil desires) means, your kith and kin; your evil desires. Nafs which is the singular of Anfus also means, passion; desire. The Israelites were commanded to purge their souls of evil desires through mortification. The biblical statement that they were commanded 'to slay every man his brother, every man his companion and every man his neighbour' (Exod. 32:27) is not supported by the Qur'ān according to which they were pardoned (4:154). Even their leader Sāmirī was not killed (20:98).

96. The verse may signify that this unreasonable demand of the Israelites so arrogantly expressed brought about their spiritual and not physical death. This significance finds corroboration in the next verse wherein God says: Then We raised you up after your death, i.e. you regained respect and honour after you had lost it. Maut means, extinction of the power of growth (57:18); the loss of the feeling power (19:24); the loss of the power of reasoning (6:123); grief which embitters the life of a man (14:18); physical death (Lane).

59. And remember the time [c]when We said, "Enter this town[100] and eat therefrom—wherever you will—plentifully; and enter the gate

[a]7:161. [b]7:161; 20:81. [c]7:162.

97. See Exodus, 40:34-38.

98. Mann means a favour or gift; anything obtained without trouble or difficulty; honey or dew (Aqrab). The Manna has also been referred to in a saying of the Holy Prophet as: "The truffle is one of the things included in the Manna" (Bukhārī). See also Lane under "Turanjabīn."

99. Salwā is (1) a whitish bird resembling a quail and found in some parts of Arabia and the neighbouring countries; (2) whatever renders a person contented and happy; honey (Aqrab). The sending down of Manna and Salwā has been mentioned at three places in the Qur'ān, in the present verse and in vv.2:58 and 7:161, and at all these three places the fact has been followed by the injunction: 'Eat of the good things that We have provided for you.' This shows that whereas the food which was provided to the Israelites in the wilderness of Sinai was wholesome, palatable and of good taste, it consisted not of one but of several things; Manna (truffle) and Salwā (quails) forming the major part of them. See Exodus, 16:13-15.

100. "Town" need not refer to any particular town. It may signify any town on the way from Sinai to Canaan that may be near; or the nearest town. As the Israelites were eager to live in towns owing to the facilities and amenities of life they afforded and owing also to their previous mode of living, they were bidden to go to some neighbouring village where they would combine the life of the desert with that of a habitation and would be free to eat wherever they liked, as is usual in a desert place where there is no private ownership. But as this change was to bring them into contact with other people and was likely to affect their morals they were at the same time bidden to be careful about themselves and to be submissive to God.

61. And remember the time [b]when Moses prayed for water for his people and We said, 'Strike the rock with thy rod;' and there gushed forth from it twelve springs,[101] so that

وَاِذِ اسْتَسْقٰى مُوْسٰى لِقَوْمِهٖ فَقُلْنَا اضْرِبْ بِّعَصَاكَ الْحَجَرَ ؕ فَانْفَجَرَتْ مِنْهُ اثْنَتَا عَشْرَةَ عَيْنًا ؕ قَدْ عَلِمَ كُلُّ اُنَاسٍ

[a]7:163. [b]7:161.

[101] That at present there is no trace of the springs at that spot is nothing to be wondered at, because it is not yet definitely known in what particular region Moses performed his journey. Moreover, it is a matter of common experience that springs sometimes cease to flow and their mouths become closed abruptly in the mountains. The event referred to here occurred thousands of years ago and it is well known that sometimes a spring gushes forth, but soon the flow of water ceases and the spring runs dry. Often springs once flowing become so dry that no trace of them is left. Even as late as the end of the 15th century twelve springs actually flowed at this place. "The rock stands within the border of Arabia and some of his (the Prophet's) countrymen must needs (sic) have seen it if he himself had not, as it is most probable he had. And in effect he seems to be in the right. For one, who went into those parts in the end of the fifteenth century, tells us expressly that the water issued from twelve places of the rock, according to the number of the tribes of Israel" (Al-Koran by Sale, page 8). Moreover, as there were twelve Israelite tribes with Moses, God must have caused to flow as many springs for them. One spring could not meet their needs as their number was very large—according to the Bible they were 600,000 (Num. 1:46).

مَّشْرَبَهُمْ ؕ كُلُوْا وَاشْرَبُوْا مِنْ رِّزْقِ اللّٰهِ وَلَا تَعْثَوْا فِي الْاَرْضِ مُفْسِدِيْنَ ﴿٦١﴾

62. And remember when you said, 'O Moses, surely, we will not remain content with one kind of food; pray, then, to thy Lord for us that He may bring forth for us of what the earth grows—of its herbs and its cucumbers and its wheat and its lentils and its onions.' He said, 'Would you take in exchange that which is worse for that which is better? Go down to some town and there is for you what you ask.'[102]

The miracle of Moses on this occasion did not lie in bringing about something against the known laws of nature, but in the fact that God revealed to him the specific spot where water was just ready to flow on a blow with his rod. It is within the experience of geologists that sometimes water flows at a small depth underneath hillocks or rocks and begins to gush forth the moment the rock is struck with something heavy or pointed.

The words Iḍrib bi-'Aṣākal-Ḥajara may also mean: "Go forth or hasten with thy community to the rock," 'Aṣā metaphorically meaning, "a community," and Iḍrib meaning, "go forth or hasten." They say, Ḍarabal-Arḍa or Ḍaraba fil-Arḍi, i.e. he went forth or hastened in the land (Lane).

102. Having lived for a long time in bondage and in a state of dependence, the Israelites had become cowardly and indolent. So God intended them to stay in the desert for some time and to live on game and wild herbs in order that they might shed their cowardice and indolence by living an independent life in the desert. Thus revitalized, they were to be led to the Promised Land and made rulers of Palestine. The Israelites, however, failed to understand the real purpose of God or, having understood it, failed to appreciate it and foolishly insisted upon living in a town. God wanted to prepare them for rule over the Promised Land but those unfortunate people hungered after husbandry. So they were told to go down to a town where they would get the desired things.

103. The word Qatl besides its primary sense of actual killing means, to attempt or intend to kill; to beat; to curse; to have nothing to do with, and to neutralise the blighting influence of a thing; and the expression Yaqtulūnan-Nabiyyīn does not signify that the Israelites actually slew the Prophets, because, up to the time of Moses no Prophet is known to have been slain by them. As a matter of fact, Moses was the first Prophet who was sent to the Israelites as a nation. He and his brother, Aaron, are the only persons to whom these words can be applied, but obviously they were not killed by the Israelites, although they were sometimes bent upon killing them (Exod. 17:4). Hence, the word Qatl in the verse cannot possibly mean "actual killing." It only means that they severely opposed the Prophets and would have killed them if they could. See also 3:22 & 40:29.

104. Ṣābī is one who forsakes his own religion for a new one. Technically, however, the word Sabians refers to certain religious sects that were found in parts of Arabia and countries bordering on it. The name was applied to (1) the star-worshipping people living in Mesopotamia (Gibbon's Roman Empire, Murūjudh-Dhahab & Enc. Rel. Eth., viii under "Mandaeans"); (2) a people who lived near Mosul in Iraq and believed in one God and in all Divine Prophets but possessed no revealed Book. They claimed to follow the religion of Noah (Jarīr & Kathīr). They should not, however, be confused with the Sabians mentioned by certain commentators of the Bible as people living in ancient Yemen.

وَاِذْ اَخَذْنَا مِيْثَاقَكُمْ وَرَفَعْنَا فَوْقَكُمُ الطُّوْرَ ؕ خُذُوْا مَآ اٰتَيْنٰكُمْ بِقُوَّةٍ

64. And remember the time when [c]We took a covenant from you and [d]raised high above you the Mount,[105]

[a]4:137; 6:93. [b]2:113, 278; 6:49; 10:63. [c]2:84, 94; 4:155. [d]7:172.

The verse, as mistakenly understood, does not signify that belief in God and in the Last Day alone is sufficient for salvation. The Qur'ān emphatically declares that belief in the Holy Prophet is most essential (4:151-152; 6:93) and forms an integral part of belief in God, and also that belief in the Hereafter includes belief in Divine revelation as well (4:151-152; 6:93). Elsewhere, Islām alone has been unequivocally declared to be acceptable to God as a religion (3:20, 86). The Qur'ān here confines itself to a mention of belief in God and the Last Day, not because belief in revelation and in the Holy Prophet is not essential, but because the former two beliefs include the latter two, the four being essentially inseparable. In fact, the verse is intended to demolish the mistaken Jewish belief that they were "the favoured nation of God" and, therefore, were alone entitled to salvation. It signifies that it did not matter whether one was apparently a Jew, a Christian, a Sabian or, for that matter, a Muslim; if the faith was confined only to the lip, it was a dead thing, without life and without any motive power in it. The verse may also be taken as embodying a prophecy and as a safe criterion to test the truth of Islām. The prophecy is that Islām shall triumph because it is a true religion. The criterion lies in the fact that the prophecy was made at a time when Islām was fighting for its very life. The verse may also be taken as signifying that all those who claim to be believers whether they are Jews, Christians or Sabians or, for that matter, belong to any religion—if their faith in God and the Last Day is sincere and honest and they do good deeds which is the quintessence of a true religion, i.e. Islām, no fear shall come upon them nor shall they grieve.

105. The words do not mean that Mount Sinai was physically lifted up to hang over the heads of the Israelites. They only mean that the covenant was taken at a time when the Israelites were standing at the foot of the Mount. They may also refer to the scene when the Mount Sinai was terribly shaken with an earthquake, while the Israelites were camping at its foot (Exod. 19:2). On such an occasion the shaking of a high mountain peak appears as it were hanging over the heads of those standing near it.

106. Raḥmah (mercy) in contrast to Faḍl (grace) is generally spoken in respect of such acts of God as relate to religious or spiritual matters.

107. The word "apes" has been used figuratively meaning that the Israelites became abject and mean like the monkeys, the transformation being not in body or form but in character and spirit. "They were not actually transformed into apes, only their hearts were changed" (Mujāhid). "God has used the expression figuratively" (Kathīr). Had the Qur'ān meant their physical transformation into apes the word Khāsi'ah would have been used and not Khāsi'īn which is used for rational beings. By the use of this word it is intended to point out that just as apes or monkeys are abject and despised animals, similarly the Jews will always remain humiliated in the world and, in spite of their great resources in wealth and education, will never be able to gain any stronghold on the earth; the root meaning of the word signifying abjectness and humiliation as well as grovelling in the dust. R. 9.

73. And remember the time when you killed[109] a person[109A] and differed among yourselves about it, and Allāh would bring to light what you were hiding.[109B]

108. The Israelites had lived for a long time among the Egyptians who had great veneration for the cow. Thus reverence for this animal had crept into their minds also. This is why, when they made an idol for themselves, they made it in the shape of a calf (Qur'ān 2:52 & Exod. 32:4). In order that their minds should have been purged of the feeling of veneration for the cow, they were repeatedly commanded to sacrifice it (Num. 19:1-9; Lev. 4:1-21; 16:3, 11). It seems that they had a particular cow, which served as a pet among them, and they had a misgiving that the order pertained to it. So they repeatedly asked Moses to specify the cow which God meant to be slaughtered, and as a result of their questioning some conditions were added to specify the animal.

109. Qataltum means, you sought, attempted, claimed, or made up your mind, to kill (40:29), or you made him appear as dead; you almost killed him. They say Qatala-hū, i.e. he rendered him like one killed physically or morally (Lane). The famous saying of 'Umar, viz. Uqtulū Sa'dan, has been taken to signify, render Sa'd like one who is, to all intents and purposes, dead.

109A. Nafsan used as Nakirah, i.e. in an undefined form, according to Arabic grammar may refer to a very important personage (Muṭawwal).

In the foregoing verses some of the evil practices and crimes of the Jews were mentioned. This verse refers to their crowning guilt, i.e. they sought to kill Jesus on the Cross and thus to show that according to the Bible he was a false prophet (Deut. 21:23). In this nefarious attempt they utterly failed. Jesus was taken down from the Cross alive but like one dead. For the historical fact that Jesus did not die on the Cross but was taken down alive like one dead. See 2000.

109B. The clause signifies that a time will come when the truth about Jesus's death will come to light and the mask which had so long been hanging over the incident will be lifted.

74. Then We said, 'Compare[110] this incident with some other similar ones' and you will discover the truth. Thus does [a]Allāh give life to the dead[110A] and show you

[a]2:180.

110. Ḍarb meaning the like of a thing (Lane), the verb Ḍaraba is used in different tenses in 13:18; 16:75 & 43:58 as signifying "comparison." So the expression Iḍribū-hu Bi-ba'ḍihā may be interpreted as "compare the condition of Jesus in which he was taken down from the Cross as almost dead with the condition of persons who were considered dead while in reality they were not dead but only appeared as such; and you will discover the truth about the supposed death of Jesus."

110A. The clause may signify: This is how God gave Jesus a new lease of life after he was almost dead, Mautā being the plural of Mait which means, one like dead or near death (Lane). Here the word Mautā would be taken in this sense because according to the Qur'ān those actually dead never come back to life (21:96 & 23:101).

The verse may also be rendered as: Then We said, "Smite him (the murderer) for a part of his offence. Thus doth Allāh give life to the dead and show you His Signs that you may understand." According to this meaning this and the preceding verse will refer to the murder of a Muslim by the Jews at Medina. On his arrival at Medina the Holy Prophet had entered into a treaty of peace and mutual good relations with the Jews. But the growing prosperity and success of Islām gradually roused their jealousy and some of their leaders, Ka'b bin Ashraf being foremost among them, began secretly to excite their people against Muslims. A short time after the Battle of Badr a Muslim lady happened to go to the shop of a Jew to make some purchases. The shopkeeper behaved very insultingly towards her. The helpless lady cried for help. A Muslim who happened to be nearby went to her help and in the scuffle which followed the shopkeeper was killed, whereupon the Jews fell upon him and murdered him. When the case came to be investigated none of the miscreants who had taken part in the heinous act would admit the guilt and every one of them sought to shift the responsibility for it to others. This murder of a Muslim was not an isolated mischievous act on the part of the Jews. Their behaviour daily had grown insulting and provocative and they were always on the look out to create fresh disturbances (Hishām), and also secretly plotted the assassination of the Holy Prophet himself (Iṣābah). Ka'b bin Ashraf was the arch-enemy and the chief instigator of all these disturbances and plots. He had even gone to Mecca and with his powerful eloquence had made the Quraish, who were smarting under their ignominious defeat at Badr, take a

Then [a]your hearts became hardened[111] after that, till they were like stones or harder still, for of stones indeed there are some out of which gush forth streams, and of them there are some out of which flows water when they cleave asunder. And indeed of them there are some that humble themselves solemn oath with the skirts of the Ka'bah in their hands, that they would know no rest until they had destroyed Islām and its Founder. Ka'b also got widely circulated most scurrilous poems against the ladies of the Holy Prophet's family. So, for his repeated acts of treachery and mischief and as a punishment for the death of the innocent Muslim he was ordered to be put to death. The sentence of death was only a partial punishment of the offence, the rest of the punishment being reserved for the Hereafter. By using the word Qataltum in the plural number, the Qur'ān holds the entire Jewish community of Medina responsible for the murder. For the sentence of death, however, the ring-leader was marked out, the pronoun hu referring to Ka'b. According to this meaning of the verse the words, Thus doth Allāh give life to the dead signify that retaliation is an effective form of giving life to the dead, for in this way the would-be assassins are prevented from further murders. That retaliation is a most potent means of giving life to the dead is alluded to in (2:180). Moreover, the Arabs of the "Days of Ignorance" regarded a murdered person whose blood was not avenged as dead and regarded as living the person whose blood was fully avenged. Says the famous Arab poet Ḥārith bin Ḥilzah: "In Nabashtum mā Baina Milḥata waṣ-Ṣāqib, Fīhal-Amwātu wal Aḥyā'u, i.e. if you dig out the graves between Malḥah and Ṣāqib, you will find therein dead as well as living, i.e. those whose murder has been avenged.

111. The murder of the innocent Muslim referred to in the preceding verses sealed the fate of the Medinite Jews who thereafter became more and more hardened, their hearts becoming like stones, even worse. The verse goes on to say that even lifeless things like stones are of some use, but the Jews have become so depraved that, far from performing any act of virtue out of a desire to be virtuous, they have not even involuntarily done anything that might be called virtuous. They have become worse than stones, for even from stones there comes out water which people profit by.

112. The remarks do not apply to the whole Jewish nation; for some of the Israelites were, no doubt, swayed by the fear of God. Of these the Qur'ān says, of them (the hearts) there are some that humble themselves for fear of Allāh, the pronoun hā standing for Qulūb (hearts) and not for Ḥijārah (stones). The Qur'ān contains several instances of what is termed Intishāruḍ-Ḍamā'ir, i.e. similar pronouns occurring in the same verse standing for different nouns (48:10).

113. The verse mentions another class of Jews who always acted hypocritically. When they mixed with Muslims, they chimed in with them from worldly motives, confirming the prophecies contained in their Scriptures about the Holy Prophet. But when they mixed with their own people, other members of the community would reproach them for their enlightening the Muslims on what God had revealed to them, i.e. for letting the Muslims know the prophecies about the Holy Prophet which were contained in their own Scriptures.

114. There were Jews who composed books or parts thereof and then gave them out as the Word of God. This malpractice was common among the Jews. In addition, therefore, to the canonical Books of the Bible, there are a number of books which are supposed by the Jews to have been revealed, so that it has now become impossible to distinguish the revealed Books from those not revealed.

115. After recounting some malpractices of the Jews, the Qur'ān proceeds to explain the root cause of their arrogance and hard-heartedness. These evil practices of the Jews, the Qur'ān points out, are due to their wrong notion that they were immune from punishment (Jew. Enc. under 'Gehenna'), or, if they will at all be punished, the punishment will be very slight and of very short duration. At the time of the Holy Prophet, a section of the Jews thought that their punishment would not last more than forty days. Others reduced it to seven days (Jarīr, under 2:81). "It is a received opinion among the Jews at present that no person (from among the Jews), be he ever so wicked, or of whatever sect, shall remain in Hell above eleven months or at most a year, except Dathan and Abiram and atheists (from among the Jews) who will be tormented there to all eternity" (Sale).

common enemy and all disputes were to be referred to the Holy Prophet for decision (Muir's 'Life of Mahomet' & 'Sīrat' by Mirzā Bashīr Aḥmad, M.A.).

118. There lived in Medina in the time of the Holy Prophet three Jewish tribes, the Banū Qainuqā', the Banū Naḍīr and the Banū Quraiẓah; and two pagan tribes, the Aus and the Khazraj. Two of the Jewish tribes, Banū Qainuqā' and Banū Quraiẓah, sided with the Aus, and Banū Naḍīr with the Khazraj. Thus, whenever these pagan clans were at war with each other, the Jewish tribes were automatically involved. But, if during a war any Jews were taken prisoner by the pagans, the former would collect money by subscription and ransom them. They considered it improper for a Jew to remain in bondage with a Gentile. The Qur'ān objects to this practice by saying that their Faith not only forbids the enslavement of Jews, but also prohibits mutual warfare and murder in which they openly indulged and there could be nothing worse than to accept a portion of a Scripture and reject the rest; for, when one accepts a portion of a Scripture, it is proof of the fact that one is convinced of

The verse signifies that Jews used to disclose to the pagan Arabs the fact that there were prophecies in their Scriptures about the advent of a Prophet who would spread the truth all over the world (Deut. 18:18 & 28:1-2). But when that Prophet actually appeared, even those of them who had seen the Signs of God being fulfilled in his person turned away from him. Or the meaning may be that before the advent of the Holy Prophet the Jews used to pray fervently to God to raise a Prophet who should cause the true Faith to triumph over false Faiths (Hishām, i. 150). But when the Prophet for whom they had prayed actually came and the ascendancy of truth over falsehood became manifest, they refused to accept him; consequently bringing on their heads the curse of God.

123. Jibrīl is a compound word, made up of Jabr and Īl, and means—a brave man of God, or a servant of God. Jabr in Hebrew is Geber which means, 'a servant, and Īl means the Mighty; the Powerful' (Hebrew English-Lexicon by William Geseneus; Bukhārī, chap. on Tafsīr; and Aqrab). According to Ibn-e-'Abbās the other name of Jibrīl is 'Abdullāh (Jarīr). Gabriel being the chief among the angels (Manthūr) was the bearer of the Quranic Revelation. See also The Larger Edition of the Commentary. According to Commentators of the Holy Qur'ān Jibrīl is synonymous with Rūḥul-Qudus and Rūḥul-Amīn. According to the Bible also the function of Gabriel is to convey Messages of God to His servants (Dan. 8:16; 9:21 & Luke 1:19). The Qur'ān, as the present verse points out, assigns the same function to Gabriel. But in some later Jewish writings he is described as "the angel of fire and thunder" (Enc.

Bib. under Gabriel). In the Holy Prophet's time the Jews looked upon Gabriel as their enemy and as an angel of wars, calamities and hardships (Jarīr & Musnad).

124. Mīkāl is also one of the chief angels. The word is considered as being a combination of Mīk and Īl which means, who is like God (Jew. Enc. & Bukhārī.) i.e. there is none like God. The Jews looked upon Michael as their favourite angel (Jew. Enc.) and as the angle of peace and plenty, rain and herbage (Kathīr) and is considered to be associated chiefly with the work of sustaining the world.

125. Angels constitute an important link in the spiritual chain and he, who breaks even one link of the spiritual chain or manifests against any single unit of the spiritual system, in fact, severs his connection with the whole system. Such a one deprives himself of the favours and blessings which are bestowed upon the true servants of God and renders himself deserving of the punishment decreed for transgressors.

126. Talautu-hū means, I followed him (Lane).

127. 'Alā gives the sense of fī, i.e. "in" or "during" and "against" (Mughnī). The particle is also used in the Qur'ān in the sense of "in conformity with" (2:113); assigning a cause (2:186); in the sense of fī (28:16) and min (83:3). Talā 'Alaihi also means, he lied against him (Tāj, Muḥīṭ & Rāzī).

128. Siḥr means, a crafty device; mischief; enchantment; producing what is false in the form of truth; any event of which the cause is hidden and which is imagined to be different from what it really is (Lane). Thus every falsehood, deceit or crafty device which is meant to hide the real object from public view is included in Siḥr.

129. The word "two angels" here signifies two holy men (12:32), because the two angels are here mentioned as teaching something to the people and angels do not live among men and do not have free intercourse with them (17:95; 21:8).

130. Hārūt and Mārūt are both descriptive names, the former being derived from Harata, (i.e. he tore up—Aqrab) means, one who tears up; and the latter derived from Marata, (i.e. he broke) means, one who breaks. These names signify that the object of the appearance of these holy men was to 'tear

So men learnt from them that by which they made a distinction between man and his wife, but they harmed no one thereby, except by the command of Allāh; on the contrary, these people (the opponents of the Holy Prophet) are learning that which would harm them and do them no good.[130A] And they have asunder' and 'break' the glory and power of the empire of the enemies of the Israelites. These holy men told the new members, at the time of initiation, that they were a sort of trial from God, serving to differentiate between the good and the bad. They confined the membership of their society to the males only. The verse signifies that the Jews in the time of the Holy Prophet indulged in the same mischievous devices and practices which characterized their forefathers in the days of Solomon. It further says that the mischief-mongers in Solomon's time were those rebellious men who called him a disbeliever. The verse clears Solomon of the accusation of disbelief. It adds that the mischief-mongers in Solomon's time taught their associates such signs as conveyed to them meanings quite different from those generally understood, for the purpose of deceiving people and concealing their real designs. The verse alludes to those secret plots which the enemies of Solomon hatched against him and by which they sought to break up his Empire. It is implied that the Medinite Jews are now resorting to the selfsame vile tactics against the Holy Prophet but they will never succeed in their evil designs.

130A. When the Jews saw that the power of Islām was steadily expanding and opposition to it in Arabia had completely broken down and they could not arrest or retard its progress, they began to excite outsiders against it. Oppressed and persecuted by Christian rulers they had taken refuge in Persia and had shifted their religious centre from Judah to Babylonia (Hutchinson's History of the Nations, p. 550). Gradually, they came to exercise great influence at the court of the Persian Monarchs and began to hatch plots against Islām. When Chosroes II received a letter from the Holy Prophet inviting him to accept Islām, they succeeded in instigating him to issue orders to Bādhān, the Governor of Yemen, which was then a province of Persia, to arrest and send the Holy Prophet in chains to the Persian court. It is to these plots and machinations of the Jews in the Prophet's time that the verse alludes. Their attention is invited to the fact that their forefathers had also hatched plots first against Solomon when some members of their community set up against him societies in which secret signs and symbols were taught (1 Kings, 11:29-32; 1 Kings, 11:14, 23, 26; II Chron. 10:2-4). The second occasion when they resorted to secret societies was during their captivity in Babylon in the time of King Nebuchadnezzar. The holy men referred to in the verse were Haggai, the Prophet, and Zechariah, the son of Iddo (Ezra, 5:1). These holy men confined membership of their society to males and told the new members at the time of initiation that they were a sort of trial from God and that the Israelites should not, therefore, refuse to believe what they said. When Cyrus, King of Media and Persia, rose to power, the Israelites entered into a secret agreement with him which greatly facilitated his conquest of Babylon. In return for this service Cyrus not only allowed them to return to Jerusalem but also helped them in rebuilding the Temple of Solomon (Historians' History of the World, ii. 126). The verse hints that the efforts of the Jews on two previous occasions had met with different results. On the first occasion their conspiracy being directed against Solomon, had ended in the total loss of their prestige and finally in their banishment to Babylon. On the second occasion, they took a similar course under two inspired personages and were successful. Hence, in order to indicate whether the efforts of the Jews against the Holy Prophet would meet with failure, as they did in the days of Solomon, or with success as in Babylon, the Qur'ān says, the opponents of the Holy Prophet are learning that which would harm them and do them no good, hinting that they will not be successful as their forefathers were in Babylon.

107. [b]Whatever message[131A] We abrogate[132] or cause to be

[a]3:75. [b]16:102.

131. The word Rā'inā belongs to the measure of Mufā'alah which generally gives the sense of reciprocity, denoting two parties standing almost on the same level, and may mean, "have regard for us that we may have regard for you." Or being traced to the root Rā'in which means, a foolish or conceited fellow, the word signifies: 'O fool' or 'O conceited fellow.' As this expression involved disrespect to the Holy Prophet, God forbids Muslims to use such words, and advises them to use language which is respectful and unequivocal, such as the word Unẓurnā meaning 'wait for us.' After mentioning the intrigues which the Jews of Arabia had carried on with outsiders to ruin the mission of the Holy Prophet, the Qur'ān proceeds to illustrate in this verse such of their machinations as they resorted to in order to belittle the Holy Prophet and sow dissension and discord among Muslims. An apparently minor illustration is selected to emphasize the fact that where the spirit of a people is concerned, sometimes very small things bring about dangerous results which undermine among them the spirit of discipline and respect for authority.

131A. Āyah means, message, sign, command or a verse of the Qur'ān (Lane).

132. It is mistakenly inferred from this verse that some verses of the Qur'ān have been abrogated. The conclusion is patently erroneous and unwarranted. There is nothing in this verse to indicate that the word Āyah refers to Quranic verses. Both in the preceding and the following verses, a reference is made to the People of the Book and their jealousies against the new Revelation which shows that the Āyah spoken of in this verse as being abrogated, refers to the previous Revelations. It is pointed out that the previous Scriptures contained two kinds of commandments: (a) Those which, owing to changed conditions and to the universality of the new Revelation, required abrogation. (b) Those containing eternal truths which needed resuscitation so that people might be reminded of the forgotten truth. It was, therefore, necessary to abrogate certain portions of those Scriptures and bring in their place new ones, and also to restore the lost ones. So, God abrogated some portions of the previous Revelations, substituting them with new and better ones, and at the same time re-introduced the missing portions by similar ones. This is the meaning which is consistent with the context and the general spirit of the Quranic teaching. The Qur'ān has abrogated all previous Scriptures; for, in view of the changed conditions of mankind, it has brought a new Law which is not only better than all the old Laws, but is also meant for all men for all times. An inferior teaching with a limited mission must give place to a superior teaching with a universal mission. In the verse the word Nansakh (We abrogate) relates to the word Bi-Khairin (one better) and the word Nunsihā (We cause to be forgotten) relates to the word Bi-Mithlihā (the like thereof), meaning that when God abrogates a certain thing He brings a better one in its place and when He causes a thing to be forgotten, He resuscitates it. It is admitted by Jewish scholars themselves that after the Israelites were carried away in captivity to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, the whole of the Pentateuch was lost (Enc. Bib.).

133. This verse mentions another artifice which the Jews employed to overthrow the mission of the Holy Prophet. They asked him absurd and silly questions as had no bearing on religion. This they did to inoculate Muslims

[a]See 2:63. [b]5:69. [c]5:69.

The verse alludes to the three important stages of perfect righteousness, i.e. Fanā' (self-annihilation); Baqā' (regeneration); and Liqā' (Union with God). The words, "submits himself completely to Allāh," mean that all our powers and organs and whatever belongs to us should be surrendered completely to God and devoted to His service. This state is known as Fanā' or death which a true Muslim must bring on himself. The second clause "and he is the doer of good" alludes to the state of Baqā' or regeneration, for when a man gets himself lost in the love of God and all his worldly designs and desires are extinguished, he is, as it were, granted a new life which may be called Baqā' or regeneration. He then lives for God and for the service of man. The concluding words describe the third and the highest stage of goodness—the stage of Liqā' or union with God which is also termed as "soul at rest," or Nafsu Muṭma'innah, in the Qur'ān (89:28).

136. Shai' means, a thing; anything good; concern; what is willed (Lane).

Nothing is more foreign to the whole spirit of Islām than opposition to truth. Islām teaches that all faiths possess certain truths and a religion is called true not because it has a monopoly of truth but because it possesses the whole truth and is free from all forms of untruth. While claiming to be a perfect and complete religion, Islām frankly acknowledges the truths and virtues other faiths possess.

137. The verse constitutes a strong indictment of those who carry their religious differences to such extremes that they do not even refrain from perpetrating outrages against the places of worship belonging to other creeds. They hinder people from worshipping God in their sacred places and even go so far as to destroy their temples. Such acts of violence are denounced here in strong terms and a lesson of tolerance and broad-mindedness is inculcated. The Qur'ān recognizes for all men the free and unrestricted right to worship God in a place of worship, for a temple or a mosque is a place dedicated to the worship of God, and the person who prevents other men from worshipping Him in it, in fact, contributes to its ruin and desolation.

138. The verse embodies a prophecy that Islām will spread first in the East and then, in the Latter Days it will begin to penetrate in the West.

139. The words "son of God" metaphorically used in Jewish religious literature in the sense of "a beloved servant of God" or "a Prophet" subsequently came to bear a literal connotation (Luke 20:36; Matt. 5:9, 45, 48; Deut. 14:1; Exod. 4:22; Gal. 3:26; etc.). If God has a son, He must be subject to sexual desire and need a wife and be divisible, because the son is a part of the father's body. Again, He must be subject to death because the procreation of species, which attribution of a son to God implies, is the characteristic of perishable things. Islām repudiates all such ideas; for according to it God is Holy and free from all defects.

Holy is He! Nay, everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Him. [a]To Him are all obedient.

[a]30:27. [b]6:102. [c]3:48; 6:74; 16:41; 36:83; 40:69. [d]6:38; 20:135; 21:6; 43:54. [e]5:20; 6:49; 17:106; 33:46.

140. This attribute not only constitutes a contradiction of the Christian dogma of the godhead of Jesus but also effectively repudiates the Hindu theory that soul and matter are primeval and eternal. (1) God is the Creator of the heavens and the earth which means that He did not require the help of a son, and for that matter of anybody else, for creating the universe. (2) He is the Originator of the universe, i.e. He created all things out of nothing, without a pre-existing model and without pre-existing matter. (3) He is All-Powerful, i.e. whenever He decrees that a certain thing should come into being, it does come into being in conformity with His decree and design. The verse does not necessarily mean, as is sometimes erroneously understood, that when God decrees that a certain thing should come into being, it comes into being all at once. What it means is that when God decrees a thing, nothing can thwart His decree.

141. It may be noted that whenever disbelievers are spoken of as demanding a Sign, the word "Sign" means either a Sign of their own devising or a Sign of punishment (6:38; 13:28; 20:134, 135; 21:6; 29:51).

142B. Kalimāt is the plural of Kalimah which means, a commandment (Mufradāt).

143. Imām means, any object that is followed, whether a man or a book (Mufradāt).

144. Mathābah signifies, a place paying a visit to which entitles one to reward; or resort of men (Mufradāt). The Ka'bah, as some traditions say and as hinted by the Qur'ān itself, was originally built by Adam (3:97) and was, for sometime, the centre of worship for his progeny. Then in the course of time people became separated into different communities and adopted different centres for worship. Abraham then rebuilt it and it continued to remain a centre of worship for his progeny through his son Ishmael. But with the lapse of time it became virtually converted into a house of idols which numbered as many as 360—almost the same as the number of days in a year. At the advent of the Holy Prophet, however, it was again made the centre of worship for all nations, the Holy Prophet having been sent as a Messenger to all mankind, to unite those, who had become separated after Adam, into one common human brotherhood.

145. The Ka'bah, and, for that matter, the town of Mecca, is declared to be a place of peace and security. Mighty empires have crumbled and large tracts of land laid waste since the dawn of history, but the peace of Mecca has never been materially disturbed. The religious centres of other Faiths have never claimed, and have, in fact, never enjoyed, such peace and immunity from danger. Mecca has, however, ever remained a place of security and safety. No alien conqueror has ever entered it. It has always remained in the hands of those who have held it in reverence.

146. Was Abraham the founder or only the rebuilder of the Ka'bah is a question that has given rise to much discussion. Some hold that Abraham was the first builder of the place, others trace its origin to Adam. The Qur'ān (3:97) and authentic Traditions favour the view that even prior to the erection of a building on this site by Abraham some sort of structure did exist, but it had fallen into ruins and only a trace of it had remained. The word al-Qawā'id in the verse shows that the foundations of the House were there which Abraham and Ishmael had raised. Moreover, Abraham's prayer at the time he had separated from the child Ishmael and his mother at Mecca, viz. Our Lord, I have settled some of my children in an uncultivable valley near Thy Sacred House (14:38), shows that the Ka'bah had existed even before Abraham had settled his wife and son in the Valley of Mecca. The Hadith also supports this view (Bukhārī). Historical records too lend support to the view that the Ka'bah is of antique origin. Historians of established authority and even some hostile critics of Islām, have admitted that the Ka'bah is an ancient place and has been held sacred from time immemorial. "Diodorus Siculus, Sicily (60 B.C.), speaking of the region now known as Ḥijāz, says that it was 'specially honoured by the natives' and adds, 'an altar is there built of hard stone and very old in years, ... to which the neighbouring peoples thronged from all sides" (Translation by C. M. Oldfather, London, 1935, Book III, ch. 42 vol. ii. pp. 211-213)... 'These words must refer to the holy house of Mecca, for we know of no other which ever commanded the universal homage of Arabia ... Tradition represents the Ka'bah as from time immemorial the scene of pilgrimage from all quarters of Arabia.' See 'The Larger Edition of the Commentary,' pp. 180-182.

147. The verse serves as a summary of the subject-matter of the entire Sūrah which constitutes not only its enlargement but treats the various subjects in exactly the same order in which they have been mentioned in this verse, i.e.

first come the Signs, then the Book, then the Wisdom of the Law, and last of all the Means of national progress (See Introduction to the Sūrah).

It may be of interest to note here that the Qur'ān speaks of two separate prayers of Abraham—one about the progeny of Isaac and the other about that of Ishmael. The former prayer is mentioned in 2:125 and the latter in the verse under comment. In his prayer about the progeny of Isaac, Abraham asks that Imāms or Reformers may be raised from among them, but he makes no mention of their special work or status—they are ordinary Divine Reformers who will follow one another for the reformation of the Israelites. In his prayer in the present verse, however, he prays to God to raise among his progeny a great Prophet with a specific mission. This difference indeed constitutes a marvellously true picture of the two branches of the House of Abraham. In making mention of the two prayers of Abraham in vv. 125-130 the Sūrah alludes to the fact that Abraham did not only pray for the prosperity of the children of Isaac but also for the posterity of Ishmael, his first-born. The offspring of Isaac lost the gift of Prophethood on account of their evil deeds. The Prophet promised and prayed for in the present verse must, therefore, belong to the other descendants of Abraham who were the children of Ishmael. In order to point out that the expected and promised Prophet was to be an Ishmaelite, the Qur'ān has quite appropriately made mention of the construction of the Ka'bah by Abraham and Ishmael and of the prayers offered by Abraham for the posterity of his eldest son. To this natural conclusion Christian critics generally bring forward two objections: (1) That the Bible makes no mention of any promise having been made by God to Abraham concerning Ishmael, and (2) that, admitting that God did make any such promise, there is no proof of the fact that the Prophet of Islām was descended from Ishmael.

As regards the first objection, even if the Bible be shown to contain no prophecy about Ishmael, it does not mean that such a prophecy was never made. Moreover, if the biblical evidence can be taken to establish the existence of a promise about Isaac and his sons, why should not the evidence of the Qur'ān and, for that matter, of the children of Ishmael, be accepted to establish the fact that promises were held out by God to Ishmael and his sons also. But the Bible itself does contain references to the future prosperity of the sons of Ishmael similar to those it contains about the sons of Isaac (Gen. 16:10-12; 17:6-10; 17:18-20). As a matter of fact, the promise made to Ishmael does not materially differ from that made to Isaac—they were both to be blessed, both were to be made fruitful, the descendants of both were to multiply exceedingly and both were to be made great nations, and kingdom and dominion are promised to the progeny of both. So when the nature of the promise made to both the brothers does not substantially differ, the kind of reward granted to the children of Isaac will have also to be admitted for the children of Ishmael. This fact has been admitted by some very eminent Christian scholars (The Scofield Reference Bible, p. 25).

In reply to the second objection that even if the covenant be understood to include the sons of Ishmael, it has yet to be proved that the Holy Prophet belonged to the House of Ishmael, the following points may briefly be noted: (1) The Quraish, the tribe to which the Holy Prophet belonged, always believed and declared themselves to be the descendants of Ishmael and this claim was recognized by all the people of Arabia. (2) If the claim of the Quraish and, for that matter, that of other Ishmaelite tribes of Arabia, to Ishmaelite descent had been false, the real descendants of Ishmael would have protested against such a false claim; but no such objection is known to have ever been raised. (3) In Gen. 17:20 God had promised to bless Ishmael, to multiply his progeny, to make him a great nation and the father of twelve princes. If the people of Arabia are not his descendants, where is the promised nation? The Ishmaelite tribes of Arabia are indeed the only claimants in the field. (4) According to Gen. 21:8-14 Hagar had to leave her home in order to satisfy the vanity of Sarah. If she was not taken to Ḥijāz, where are her descendants found, and which is the place of her banishment? (5) The Arab geographers are all agreed that Paran is the name given to the hills of Ḥijāz (Mu'jamul-Buldān). (6) According to the Bible the generations of Ishmael "dwelt from Havilah unto Shur" (Gen. 25:18), and the phrase "from Havilah unto Shur" designates the opposite extremes of Arabia (Bib. Cyc. by J. Eadie, London, 1862). (7) The Bible calls Ishmael 'a wild man' (Gen. 16:12) and the Word A'rābī, i.e. 'a dweller of the desert' conveys almost the same sense. (8) Even Paul has admitted Hagar's connection with Arabia (Gal. 4:25). (9) Kedar was a son of Ishmael and it is admitted that his descendants settled in the southern part of Arabia (Bib. Cyc. London, 1862). (10) Prof. C. C. Torrey says: "The Arabs were Ishmaelites according to the Hebrew tradition ... The 'twelve princes' (Gen. 17:20) subsequently named in Gen. 25:13ff, represent Arabian tribes or districts; notice especially Kedar, Duma (Dumat al-Jandal), Teima. The great nation is the people of Arabia" (Jewish Foundation of Islām, p. 83). 'The Arabs, from physical characteristics, language, the occurrence of native traditions ... and from the testimony of the Bible are mainly and essentially Ishmaelites' (Cyclopaedia of Biblical Literature, New York, p. 685). (II) 'Let us always blame the foul inclination of the sons of Hagar, and specially the people (the tribe) of Kuraish who are like animals' (Leaves from Three Ancient Qur'āns, edited by the Rev. Mingana, D. D., Intro. xiii).

148. The different forms of the word Safiha, Safaha and Safuha give different meanings, Safiha meaning, he was ignorant or foolish or light-witted. When the word is used with Nafsa-hū as its seeming object as in this verse, it does not actually become transitive but simply looks so (Lisān & Mufradāt). The words also mean: "Who has ruined his soul."

149. As there is no time fixed for death, one should pass every moment of his life in complete submission to God. The verse may also mean that a true believer should always be so perfectly resigned to God's will and should so completely win His pleasure that God may, out of His limitless bounty, so arrange that death may come to him at a time when he is completely resigned to His will.

150. Ishmael was the uncle of Jacob, and yet the children of Jacob here include Ishmael among their "fathers" which shows that the word Ab (father) also sometimes means uncle. Jacob's sons, the Israelites, held Ishmael in great respect.

151. In corroboration of what the Qur'ān says about Jacob's will to his sons, Rodwell quotes the following from Midrash Rabbah: "At the time when our father Jacob quitted this world, he summoned his twelve sons and said to them, 'Hearken to your father Israel' (Gen. 49:2). Have you any doubts in your hearts concerning the Holy One, blessed be He. They said, Hear, O Israel, our father, as there is no doubt in thy heart, so neither is there in ours. For the Lord is our God, and He is one" (Mider. Rabbah on Gen. par. 98, & on Deut. par. 2). Compare also Targ. Jer. on Deut. 6:4.

152. Ḥanīf means, (1) one who turns away from error to guidance (Mufradāt); (2) one who steadily follows the right faith and never swerves from it; (3) one inclining in a perfect manner to Islām and continuing firm therein (Lane); (4) one who follows the religion of Abraham (Aqrab); (5) one who believes in all Prophets (Kathīr).

153. The word children here refers to the twelve tribes of Israel named after the twelve sons of Jacob—Ruben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin, Dan, Naphtali, Gad and Asher (Gen. 35:23-26: 49:28).

154. It indeed redounds to the great credit of Islām that it is the only religion which recognizes the Prophets of all nations, whereas other religions confine Prophethood to their own respective spheres. Naturally, the Qur'ān mentions only the names of those Prophets who were known to the Arabs to whom the Message of Islām was first given; but it makes a general remark to the effect that, there is no people to whom a Warner has not been sent (35:25). The words, "We make no distinction between any of them," mean that a Muslim makes no difference between the different Prophets in respect of their Prophethood. The words should not be construed to mean that all the Prophets are of the same spiritual rank. Such an idea is against 2:254.

155. Muslims are here told that if Jews and Christians agree with them in holding that Religion is not an hereditary matter, but consists in accepting all revealed guidance, then there is no basic difference between them, otherwise their ways stand apart and a wide gulf separates them, responsibility for the schism and the resulting hostility in this case lying with Jews and Christians and not with Muslims.

156. Ṣibghah means, dye or colour; kind or mode or nature of a thing; religion; code of laws; baptism. Ṣibghatullāh signifies God's religion; the nature with which God has endowed men (Aqrab). Religion is so called because it colours a man like a dye or colour. Ṣibghah is used here as an object of a verb which is understood. According to Arabic Grammar, sometimes when it is intended strongly to induce a person to do a certain thing, the verb is omitted and only the object is mentioned. Therefore, words like Na'khudhu (we have adopted) or Nattabi'u (we have followed) will be taken

159. In the foregoing several verses a pointed reference was made to the fact that in pursuance of a Divine plan the Patriarch Abraham had settled his wife Hagar and son Ishmael in the bleak and barren Valley of Mecca. When Ishmael grew up, Abraham rebuilt the Ka'bah with his assistance and while rebuilding it prayed to God to raise among the Arabs a great Prophet, who should be humanity's Guide and Leader for all time. When, however, in the fulness of time that great Prophet appeared, God's eternal plan came into operation and the Ka'bah was made the Qiblah for the whole of mankind. But while at Mecca, the Holy Prophet, in conformity with his old practice and also by Divine command, turned his face in Prayer to the Temple at Jerusalem which was the Qiblah of the Israelite Prophets. In Medina also he kept facing towards Jerusalem. But after a few months he was commanded by Divine revelation to turn his face towards the Ka'bah. This was objected to by the Jews. The verse under comment furnishes a reply to their objections and also sheds some light on the inwardness of the command for the change of the direction of the Qiblah. But the Qur'ān never abruptly gives any new commandment. It invariably begins by preparing the ground for its acceptance by giving arguments in its favour and anticipates and answers objections that are likely to arise against it. As the commandment regarding the change of the Qiblah was likely to disturb the mental poise of some people, so in this verse the ground is being prepared by making a general observation to the effect that the selection of a particular direction for worship does not really matter. What matters is the spirit of obedience to God and of unity among the Faithful. The clause, To Allāh belong the East and the West, signifies that the selection of the East or the West is not of much importance, and because the real object is God only, the adoption of a particular direction is primarily meant for the purpose of creating a sense of unity. The verse also implies that some day the Ka'bah will fall into the possession of the Muslims.

160. Al-Wasaṭ means, occupying the middle position; good and exalted in rank (Aqrab). The word is used here in the sense of good and exalted. In 3:111 you may be guardians over the people and the Messenger of Allāh may be a guardian[161] over you. And We did not appoint[162] the Qiblah which thou didst follow, except that We might know him who follows the Messenger of Allāh from him who turns upon his heels.[163] And this is also Muslims have been called the best people.

كَانَتْ لَكَبِيْرَةً اِلَّا عَلَى الَّذِيْنَ هَدَى اللّٰهُ ؕ

161. Muslims are here told that each generation of theirs should guard and watch over the next generation. Being the best people, it is incumbent upon them to be always on their guard against falling away from the high standard of life expected of them, and to see that each succeeding generation also follows the path pursued by those who enjoyed the ennobling company of the Holy Prophet. Thus, the Holy Prophet was to be a guardian over his immediate followers, while they in turn were to be guardians over their successors, and so on. The words may also mean that, as decreed, Muslims are to become the leaders of men and by their good deeds are to become recipients of God's special favours, and thus other people will be forced to the conclusion that they follow a true religion. In this way they (Muslims) will bear witness to the truth of Islām for other people, just as the Holy Prophet was a witness of its truth for them.

162. It appears from these words that the Holy Prophet had adopted the Temple at Jerusalem as his Qiblah by God's command; but as it was meant by God to be only a temporary Qiblah and was to be subsequently replaced by the Ka'bah which was to be the Qiblah for all mankind for all times, the command with regard to the temporary Qiblah was not included in the Qur'ān. This shows that all such commandments as possessed temporary application were not included in the Quranic revelation; only those of a permanent nature were included in it. The theory that the Qur'ān contains some verses that now stand abrogated is quite unfounded.

163. The Arabs were greatly attached to the Ka'bah, the ancient house of worship at Mecca. It was their national Temple which had come down to them from the days of Abraham. It, therefore, proved a severe trial for them when they were asked at the very inception of Islām to abandon it in favour of the Temple at Jerusalem which was the Qiblah of the People of the Book (Bukhārī & Jarīr). And later on at Medina the change of the Qiblah from the Temple at Jerusalem to the Ka'bah proved a great trial for both Jews and Christians. Thus the change proved a trial for both the "People of the Book" and the Muslims and also for the Meccan idolaters.

145. Verily, We see thee turning thy face often to heaven;[164] surely, then, will We make thee turn[165] to the Qiblah which thou likest. So, [a]turn thy face towards the Sacred Mosque; and wherever you be, turn your faces towards it.[166] And they to whom the Book has been given know that this is the truth from their Lord;[167] and Allāh is not unmindful of what they do.

164. While at Mecca, the Holy Prophet under Divine command turned his face in Prayers towards the Temple at Jerusalem. But, as in his heart of hearts, he desired the Ka'bah to be his Qiblah and he also had a sort of intuition that eventually his wish will be satisfied, he generally chose such a place for worship where he could keep both the sacred Temple at Jerusalem and the Ka'bah before him. When, however, he emigrated to Medina, in view of the position of the town, he could only face towards the Temple at Jerusalem. With the change of the Qiblah his inner desire naturally became intensified, and though, out of deference to God's command, he did not actually pray for the change, yet he anxiously and eagerly looked towards heaven for a command to that effect.

165. Nuwalliyannaka also means, "We will make thee master and guardian." The expression embodied a double prophecy, viz. that eventually the Ka'bah will become the Qiblah of all peoples and that its possession will also pass over to the Holy Prophet.

166. The words signify that though in ordinary circumstances, the Muslims are enjoined to turn their faces to the Ka'bah when saying their Prayers, yet direction is of secondary importance. The change was intended to bring about and maintain unity and uniformity in the Muslim brotherhood.

167. See Gen. 21:21; John 4:21. Isa. 45:13, 14, & Deut. 32:2.

And even if thou shouldst bring every Sign to those who have been given the Book, [a]they would never follow thy Qiblah nor wouldst thou follow their Qiblah, nor would some of them follow the Qiblah of others.[168] [b]And if thou shouldst follow their desires after the knowledge that has come to thee, then thou shalt surely be of the transgressors.

[a]109:3, 7; [b]6:57; 13:38. [c]6:21. [d]2:175; 5:16, 6:92.

168. This verse points to the hostility of Jews and Christians not only to Islām but also to one another. The Jews had Jerusalem as their Qiblah (Kings 8:22-30; Dan. 6:10; Ps. 5:7 & Jonah, 2:4), while the Samaritans, a disowned section of the Jews, who also followed the Mosaic Law, had adopted a certain mountain in Palestine, named Gerizim, as their Qiblah (Commentary on the New Testament by W. Walsham How, D.D.). The early Christians, followed the Qiblah of the Jews (Enc. Brit., 14th edition, v. 676 & Jew. Enc. vi. 53). The Christians of Najrān worshipped in the Holy Prophet's Mosque at Medina, with their faces turned to the East (Zurqānī, iv. 41). Thus the Jews, the Samaritans, and the Christians followed different Qiblahs owing to their mutual jealousy and enmity. In these circumstances it was vain to expect them to follow the Qiblah of the Muslims.

169. The pronoun it (or him) may be taken as referring either to the change of the Qiblah or to the Holy Prophet. The clause means that the People of the Book know on the basis of the prophecies found in their revealed Scriptures that a Prophet will appear among the Arabs who will have special relation with the Ka'bah.

170. Ya'rifūna-hū is derived from 'Arafa which means, he knew or recognized or perceived a thing. Though the word is also used about such knowledge as is derived through the physical senses, it is particularly used of such knowledge as is obtained by pondering and meditating (Mufradāt).

148. [a]It is the truth from thy Lord; be not, therefore, of those who doubt.

[a]3:61; 6:115; 10:95. [b]3:134; 5:49; 35:33; 57:22. [c]See 2:145.

171. The verse contains, in a few words, all the ingredients of a successful life: A Muslim should first fix for himself a definite goal. Then he should not only devote his whole attention to it and strain every nerve to attain it and vie with other Muslims in a spirit of healthy competition and try to excel them but should also help such of his comrades, as may happen to stumble, to rise up and continue the race. The word Muwallī-hā also means, "which he makes dominant over him," i.e. a man first sets up an objective and then makes it a dominating factor in his life.

172. When the Ka'bah was made the Qiblah it became essential for Muslims that they should have Mecca, in which it was situated, in their possession. They are enjoined in this verse to bend all their energies to its conquest and the Holy Prophet is commanded to keep his attention centred on this objective in all his campaigns, the word Kharajta also meaning "thou goest out for battle" (Lane). The word also signifies that the conquest of Mecca was the personal responsibility of the Holy Prophet. Moreover, whereas in v.145 the command pertains to the change of the Qiblah, in 150, 151 it refers to the conquest of Mecca, the infinitive Khurūj particularly meaning, to issue forth for battle.

173. The words imply that Mecca was sure to fall one day into the hands of the Muslims. Its conquest by the Muslims had also been predicted in the Qur'ān in 17:81, and 28:86. The prophecy contained in Deut. 33:2 was also Allāh is not unmindful of what you do.

151. And [a]from wheresoever thou comest forth, turn thy face towards the Sacred Mosque;[174] and wherever you be, turn your faces towards it that people may have no argument against you,[175] except those who are unjust—so [b]fear them not, but fear Me—and [c]that I may perfect My favour upon you,[176] and fulfilled when the Holy Prophet entered Mecca as a conqueror at the head of ten thousand Muslims.

174. The Muslims were also enjoined never to lose sight of the supreme objective of conquering Mecca.

175. The words, that people may have no argument against you, mean that if the Muslims failed to conquer Mecca, the objection would quite legitimately be raised by the enemies of Islām that the Holy Prophet had not fulfilled the prayer of Abraham (2:130), and, therefore, he could not claim to be the Promised Prophet. Moreover, the House to which the Muslims were commanded to turn their faces in Prayers was, while under the control of the heathen Meccans, full of idols. If the idols had remained in the Ka'bah, the Muslims would have been accused of worshipping them. This objection could only be effectively answered if the Holy House, which had been originally dedicated to the worship of One God, had been cleared of idols. Hence the commandment to substitute the Ka'bah for the Temple of Jerusalem as the Qiblah was naturally followed by the injunction about the conquest of Mecca.

176. The words mean that with the taking of Mecca God's favour on the Muslims would become complete, for it would mean the subjugation of all Arabia and the entering of thousands of men into the fold of Islām. The result amply justified the above prophecy; for the conquest of Mecca was rapidly followed by the conversion to Islām of thousands of Arabs. Another reason why the conquest of Mecca was followed by a general influx of Arabs into Islām was that although the Arabs followed no revealed Book, yet the prophecy of Abraham that Mecca would not be conquered by the followers of any false Prophet, and any people attempting it would meet with destruction, was known to them. They had only recently seen a remarkable illustration of the fulfilment of that prophecy in the miraculous destruction of the Abyssinian invader, Abraha, and his powerful army.

177. With a slight change in the arrangement of the words this verse refers to the work of the Holy Prophet in exactly the same words in which Abraham prayed to God about the appearance of a Prophet among the Meccans (2:130), which clearly shows that Abraham's prayer had found fulfilment in the person of the Holy Prophet.

178. Remembrance of God on the part of man means, to remember Him with love and devotion, to carry out His commands, to bear in mind His attributes, to glorify Him and offer prayers to Him. And remembrance of man on the part of God signifies, God's drawing man near to Himself, bestowing favours upon him and making provision for his welfare.

179. Ṣabr means, (1) to persevere in something; (2) to endure afflictions with fortitude and without complaint or murmur; (3) to hold fast to the Divine Law and the dictates of reason; (4) to refrain from doing what the Divine Law and reason forbid (Mufradāt).

180. The verse contains a golden principle of success. First, a Muslim should patiently persevere in his endeavours, never relaxing his efforts to achieve his object and never losing heart, at the same time avoiding what is harmful, and sticking fast to all that is good. Secondly, he should pray to God for success; for He alone is the Source of all good. The word Ṣabr (patient, perseverance) precedes the word Ṣalāt (Prayer) in the verse in order to emphasize the importance of observing the laws of God which are sometimes flouted in ignorance. Ordinarily, Prayer can be effective only when it is accompanied by the use of all the necessary means created by God for the attainment of an object.

181. Aḥyā' is the plural of Ḥayy which, among other things, means: (1) One whose lifework does not go in vain; (2) one whose death is avenged. The verse comprises a great psychological truth which is calculated to exercise tremendous influence on the life and progress of a people. A people, who do not properly honour the memory of their martyrs and do not take steps to remove the fear of death from their hearts, seal their own fate.

182. This verse constitutes fitting sequel to the preceding one. Muslims should be prepared not only to lay down their lives in the cause of Islām but should also be prepared to suffer all sorts of afflictions which will be imposed on them as a trial.

183. God is the Master of all we possess, including our ownselves. If the Owner in His infinite wisdom deems fit to take away anything from us, we have no ground for complaint or demur. So every misfortune that befalls us should, instead of depressing us, spur us to make yet greater efforts to achieve still better results in life. Thus the formula contained in this verse is not a mere verbal incantation but a wise counsel and a timely warning.

أُولٰٓئِكَ عَلَيۡهِمۡ صَلَوٰتٌ مِّن رَّبِّهِمۡ وَرَحۡمَةٌ ۖ وَأُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلۡمُهۡتَدُونَ ١٥٨

159. Surely, Aṣ-Ṣafā and Al-Marwah[184] are among the [a]Signs of Allāh. It is, therefore, no sin for him who is on pilgrimage to the House, or performs ‘Umrah, to go round the two. And whoso does good beyond what is obligatory,[185] surely then, Allāh is Appreciative of good deeds and All-Knowing.

184. Aṣ-Ṣafā and Al-Marwah are the names of two hills near the Ka‘bah in Mecca, the first-mentioned being the nearer of the two. These hills stand as a memorial to Hagar’s great patience and extraordinary loyalty to God on the one hand and to God’s special care of her and her son, Ishmael, on the other. A visit to these hills deeply impresses the pilgrim with the love, fidelity to and power, of God.

185. The words, whoso does good beyond what is obligatory, do not refer to Ḥajj (Greater Pilgrimage), which under certain conditions is obligatory on every Muslim once in a life-time, but to ‘Umrah (Lesser Pilgrimage) which is not obligatory but only supererogatory. The words may also be considered to refer to any additional pilgrimage which a Muslim may perform, after he has performed the obligatory one.

186. The reference is to the Jews who concealed the prophecies contained in their Scriptures about the Holy Prophet.

188. The Qur'ān takes the universe as a whole to prove its theme. The objects of nature taken individually do not furnish such conclusive evidence of the existence of God as the whole universe taken collectively. The earth may be said to owe its existence to a fortuitous concourse of atoms, and a similar reason may be given for the origin of the sun and the moon and so on. But when the universe as one united whole and the deep order that permeates it are taken into consideration, it becomes impossible for one to escape the conclusion, that this universe has not come into existence accidentally. Indeed, the consummate harmony that pervades it forcefully points to the fact that the whole system has been created and is being directed by One Intelligent Being Who is All-Powerful and All-Knowing. Moreover, by laying special emphasis on the study of the phenomena of nature, the attention of disbelievers is also drawn to the fact that they could not possibly hope to succeed in their designs against the Holy Prophet, because the whole universe is controlled by God and is working in his favour and in furthering his cause.

189. While dealing with the subject of idolatry the Qur'ān has used four words: Nidd (like or equal); Sharīk (co-partner or sharer); Ilāh (worthy of worship); and Rabb (sustainer). While the first two words are used only about objects of worship other than God, the last two are used about God also. The word Nidd (like or equal) refers to such objects of worship as are supposed to be like God or equal to Him, but are contrary or opposed to Him.

190. Love of God is the essence of all religious teaching and no religion has laid so much emphasis on Divine love as Islām has done. The Holy Prophet was so much engrossed in God that he was spoken of by the pagan Arabs as having fallen in love with Him. No other subject has been so completely and so repeatedly dealt with in the Qur'ān as God's beauty and beneficence and such of His attributes as create an irresistible love and longing in the human soul for the Supreme Being.

191. The verse constitutes a stern warning to those who blindly follow their leaders and, being led astray by them, reject God's Messengers.

192. Good actions must accompany true faith. With this verse begins a discussion of the second part of Abraham's prayer regarding the work of the Promised Prophet, i.e. the teaching of the laws of the Sharī'ah and of the wisdom underlying them. Henceforward ordinances about Prayer, Fasting, Pilgrimage and Zakāt are given and so are the laws relating to social matters; and as food plays an important part in the formation of a man's character, regulations concerning it are mentioned first. All food according to Islām should be: (1) Ḥalāl, i.e. allowed by the Law; and (2) it should also be Ṭayyib, i.e. good, pure, wholesome and agreeable. Under the second condition sometimes even lawful things become forbidden.

193. The prohibition against following Satan, coming immediately after the commandment with respect to food, alludes to the influence which physical actions exercise on the moral and spiritual conditions of man. The use of unlawful and unwholesome food tends to impair man's moral faculties and impede his spiritual development. See also 23:52.

194. Satan first prompts man to do such deeds as do not appear to be manifestly bad and the influence of which is confined to the doer alone. Then step by step he makes him a hardened sinner, making him lose all sense of modesty.

195. It is indeed strange, but nevertheless regrettable, that in matters of religion which so deeply concern his eternal life man is often content to follow blindly in the footsteps of his elders. But in worldly matters where only the interests of this life are at stake, and that too partially, he takes meticulous care to see that he adopts the right course, and does not blindly follow others.

196. The Holy Prophet delivered the Divine Message to disbelievers. He is the crier. They heard his voice but made no effort to grasp its meaning. His words fell, as it were, on deaf ears, with the result that their spiritual faculties became wholly vitiated and they stooped low to the level of animals and beasts (7:180; 25:45), which only hear the cry of the crier but do not understand what he says.

197. The injunction contained in the words, "eat of good, pure and wholesome things (Ṭayyibāt) indicates that Muslims are not allowed to use things which may, in any way, injure their physical or moral or spiritual health, though they may be allowed by the Sharī'ah.

198. The very name of this foul animal contains an allusion to the prohibition of its flesh. The word is a combination of Khinz and Arā; the first part meaning, 'very foul' and the second, 'I see', meaning, 'I see it very foul'……In Hindi, this animal is known by the name Sū'ar which exactly means the same as the Arabic Khinzīr, i.e. 'I see it very foul'.....In Hindi this animal is also known as bad meaning 'bad' or 'foul' which is probably a translation of the original Arabic word.

199. Ithm means, anything unlawful, i.e. a sin; anything which renders a person deserving of punishment (Aqrab); anything that pricks the mind as something evil (Mufradāt). The four things mentioned in this verse are not the only things prohibited in Islām. Islām prohibits the use of many other things also which are divided into grades or categories, some of them being "unlawful" and others Mamnū' (forbidden). The verse under comment mentions only the "unlawful things." The forbidden things have been stated by the Holy Prophet and are mentioned in the Ḥadīth. The use of Ḥarām or an unlawful thing has direct bearing on the moral development of man but it is not so with a forbidden thing which stands on a lower level of importance, though both are prohibited. Among the things declared unlawful in this verse, the blood and the flesh of a dead animal as food are evidently injurious and have been recognized as such by most authorities on medicine. The flesh of swine has been proved to be injurious, besides man's physical health, to his moral and spiritual health. The swine eats filth and takes delight in living in dirty places. It has indecent habits and possesses the evil trait of sex-perversion. Tape-worms, scrofula, cancer and encysted trichina are known to be more prevalent among pork-eating peoples. The use of pork also causes trichinosis.

200. The words signify that as fire cannot satisfy thirst, but rather increases it, so the things of this world cannot bring peace of mind and contentment but rather the reverse of them.

201. The words mean that the disbelievers are, as it were, possessed of great endurance to bear the torment of the fire of Hell. These words have been used ironically.

203. The verse gives a gist of Islamic teaching. It begins with the basic Islamic beliefs and doctrines which are the source and basis of all actions and on the rightness of which depends the rightness of human actions—belief in God, in the Last Day, in angels, Revealed Books and Divine Prophets. After this some of the more important ordinances relating to man's actions are mentioned.

179. O ye who believe! [a]equitable retaliation in the matter of the slain is prescribed for you: the free man for the free man, and the slave for the slave, and the female for the female. But for him who is granted any remission by his injured brother, pursuing the matter for the realization of the blood-money shall be done with fairness, and the murderer shall pay him the blood-money in a handsome manner. This is an alleviation from your Lord and a mercy. And whoso transgresses thereafter, for him there shall be a grievous punishment.[204]

204. The verse comprises a very important principle of civil law, i.e. equality of man and necessity of awarding proportionate punishment to all offenders without distinction, unless an offender is forgiven by the relatives of his victim under circumstances that are calculated to lead to improvement and betterment of conditions.

The words "is prescribed for you" show that retaliation for the slain is obligatory. Failure to inflict the punishment prescribed by Law on the offender is tantamount to violation of the Divine commandment. The duty, however, of punishing the culprit devolves not on the heirs of the murdered person but, as the plural 'Alaikum (for you) shows, on the authorities responsible for the maintenance of law and order. The former, however, have been given the option to forgive. So whereas on the one hand the concerned authorities are bound to punish the offender according to the requirements of law, having no right to pardon him of their own accord, on the other the heirs of the murdered person are not entitled to take the law into their own hands and inflict the punishment on the guilty person themselves. In awarding the punishment the verse makes no distinction between offenders. The words used are of a general nature and apply to all offenders who might be guilty of murder, no matter of what rank or station in life or of what religion. Any person, irrespective of his caste or creed and of his station, must be put to death for the murder of any other person, unless pardoned by the relatives of the victim and unless also the pardon has the sanction of the competent authorities. The sayings of the Holy Prophet are explicit on this point (Mājah, ch. on Diyāt). The Companions of the Holy Prophet are all agreed that a Muslim may be put to death for murdering a non-belligerent disbeliever (Ṭabarī, v. 44). The Holy Prophet himself ordered a Muslim murderer to be put to death for the murder of a non-belligerent non-Muslim (Quṭnī). The words, the freeman for the freeman and the slave for the slave and the female for the female, do not mean that a freeman should not be punished with death for the murder of a slave or that a woman should not be put to death for killing a member of the opposite sex, etc. The social position of a person or the sex of a party also cannot be considered a bar to the application of this law. The peculiar construction, i.e. "the freeman for the freeman,……" has been adopted to refer to, and abolish, a certain custom of the Arabs whereby they used to take into consideration the sex and the social status of the murderer and the murdered person when determining punishment. The commandment contained in this verse seeks to abolish that obnoxious custom. In fact, the law of retaliation, as stated in this verse, is confined to the clause, equitable retaliation in the matter of the slain is prescribed for you, which forms a complete sentence in itself, giving a full and complete meaning. The ensuing expression, the freeman for the freeman and the slave for the slave and the female for the female, is something extra, not forming part of the law. It only contains a repudiation of the Arab custom referred to above and illustrates, by giving three instances, how the law is to be administered. Such an expression is known as Jumlah Isti'nāfiah in Arabic Grammar, and is technically introduced with a view to answering a question which is suggested by the preceding clause to which it is added without any intervening conjunction. The question answered in such an expression is often understood and not expressed (Mukhtaṣar). The Holy Prophet is reported to have said: "Whoever kills his slave shall be put to death" (Mājah). At another place he says: "The blood of all Muslims is alike in respect of the law of retaliation" (Nasa'ī).

180. And there is life for you in the law of retaliation, O men of understanding, that you may enjoy security.[204A]

204A. The Islamic law of retaliation provides a very effective means to put a stop to murder and safeguard human life. A man, who shows a callous disregard for human life loses all title to live as a member of human society. Pardon or remission is permissible only where the circumstances are such that it is likely to improve matters and bring about good results for all parties concerned (42:41). Thus, while, on the one hand, Islām has made due provision for the suppression of crime, it has, on the other, kept open the door for the display of the noble qualities of benevolence and mercy. The fact that, despite efforts to the contrary, the death penalty is still found on the Statute books of most countries in one form or another constitutes a sufficient proof of the wisdom of the Islamic ordinance. Even the most enthusiastic protagonists of the abolition of Capital Punishment have not yet been able to suggest a suitable alternative to it. They have had to admit that a long term of imprisonment as an alternative is "horrible" and is "not an ideal substitute" (Capital Punishment in the Twentieth Century by E. Roy Calvert, G. P. Putnam, London, 1930).

205. Verses 4:12, 13 fix the shares of all those persons who should succeed to a deceased person's property. These verses have been mistakenly understood by some Commentators to abrogate the verse under comment, which, in fact, lays down an additional and very necessary provision, and refers only to bequests made in favour of individuals not legally entitled to a share in the testator's property, or for charitable purposes, or for war conditions. It does not refer to bequests made in favour of legal heirs which subject has been dealt with in 4:12, 13. There is no question, therefore, of the abrogation of this verse by those verses which lay down the rules of inheritance and also recognise the validity of any bequests that may have been made. Each operates in its own sphere and draws strength from the other. The bequests thus made, however, should not exceed one third of the property left as is mentioned in a saying of the Holy Prophet related by Sa'd bin Abī Waqqāṣ (Bukhārī, Kitābul-Janā'iz); this being the utmost limit to which the testator can exercise his discretion, and that only in case he leaves abundant wealth as the word Khair (much wealth) shows. Verse 5:107, according to which a dying Muslim could make a bequest and which was, by common consent, revealed after vv. 4:12, 13, further supports the view that the verse under comment is not abrogated by vv. 4:12, 13. In fact, the whole theory of abrogation has no foundation.

184. O ye who believe! fasting is prescribed for you, as it was prescribed for those before you,[206] so that you may guard against evil.

205A. This indicates that the previous verse contemplates some directions which are obligatory and a contravention of which would be sinful. Obviously, what is meant is a direction that the estate shall be administered in accordance with the law of inheritance. If the testator gives such a direction, then the sin of any contravention would lie on those who are guilty of the contravention.

205B. A will may comply with legal requirements and may yet be unfair in some of its provisions. For instance, if a person leaves a large number of heirs, it may entail a hardship on them if he wills away as much as the full one-third for charitable or other lawful purposes. Or, out of the permissible 1/3 the testator may have made unfair dispositions, neglecting or overlooking just claims. It would in such a case be permissible, indeed meritorious, to bring about a fair adjustment between the heirs and the legatees affected.

206. Fasting, as a religious institution, in whatever form or detail, is to be found in all Faiths. "By the greater number of religions, in the lower, middle and higher cultures alike, fasting is largely prescribed; and when it is not required it is nevertheless practised to some extent by individuals in response to the promptings of nature" (Enc. Brit.). It is the common experience of saints and seers that a certain degree of severance from physical relations or worldly connections is essential for spiritual advancement and has a powerful purifying effect on the mind. Islām, however, has introduced a new orientation and a new spiritual significance in this institution. According to it fasting

مَّرِيْضًا اَوْ عَلٰى سَفَرٍ فَعِدَّةٌ مِّنْ اَيَّامٍ

185. The prescribed fasting is for a [a]fixed number of days, but whoso among you is sick or is on a journey shall fast the same number of other days; and for those who are able to fast only with great difficulty[207] is an expiation—the feeding of a poor man. And whoso does good of his own accord it is better for him. And fasting is good for you, if you only knew.

شَهْرُ رَمَضَانَ الَّذِيْٓ اُنْزِلَ فِيْهِ الْقُرْاٰنُ

186. The month of Ramaḍān[207A] is that in which the Qur'ān[207B] was constitutes a symbol of complete sacrifice. One who fasts not only abstains from food and drink which are the chief means of sustenance and without which one cannot live, but also from going in unto one's wife which is the means of assuring one's progeny. Thus he who fasts really evinces his readiness, if need be, to sacrifice his all for the sake of his Lord and Creator.

207. This meaning of the Arabic expression in the text is supported by another reading of Yuṭīqūna-hū which is Yuṭayyiqūna-hū meaning, they can do so only with great difficulty (Jarīr). The verse mentions three classes of believers to whom concession is allowed: the sick; those on a journey and those too weak to fast except with danger to their health. The expression may also mean: "Those who are unable to fast" (Lisān and Mufradāt). The whole sentence has also been taken to signify: "Those, who can afford, should, besides fasting, feed a poor man as an act of piety;" the pronoun hū in Yuṭīqūna-hū standing for "the feeding of a poor man."

207A. Ramaḍān is the ninth month of the lunar year. The word is derived from Ramaḍa. They say Ramaḍaṣ-Ṣā'imu, i.e. the inside of the man fasting became very hot with thirst owing to fasting (Lane). The month is so named because (1) fasting in this month produces heat and burning due to thirst; (2) worship in this month burns away the traces of sin in man (ʻAsākir & Mardawaih); and (3) because his devotions in this month produce in the heart of man the necessary warmth of love for his Creator and his fellow-beings. The name Ramaḍān is of Islamic origin, the former name of the month being Nātiq (Qadīr).

207B. Al-Qur'ān is derived from Qara'a which means, he read; he revealed[208] as a guidance for mankind with clear proofs of guidance and [a]discrimination. Therefore, whosoever of you is present at home in this month, let him fast therein. But whoso is temporarily sick or is on a journey, shall fast the same number of other days.[209] [b]Allāh desires ease for you and He desires not hardship for you, and He desires that [c]you may complete the number, and that you may exalt Allāh for His having guided you and that you may be grateful.

وَالْفُرْقَانِ ۚ فَمَنْ شَهِدَ مِنْكُمُ الشَّهْرَ
فَلْيَصُمْهُ ۖ وَمَنْ كَانَ مَرِيضًا أَوْ عَلَىٰ سَفَرٍ

conveyed or delivered a message; he collected the thing. Thus Qur'ān means: (1) a book which is meant to be read. The Qur'ān is the most widely read book in the world (Enc. Brit.); (2) a book or message which is meant to be conveyed and delivered to the world. The Qur'ān is the only revealed Book whose Message is absolutely unrestricted; for whereas all other revealed Books are meant for specific times and specific peoples, the Qur'ān is meant for all times and all peoples (34:29); (3) a book which comprises all truths; the Qur'ān is indeed a storehouse of knowledge which comprises not only all eternal truths contained in the previous revealed Books (98:4), but also all such truths as mankind may stand in need of at any time and in any circumstances (18:50).

208. It was on the 24th of Ramaḍān that the Holy Prophet received his first revelation (Jarīr); and the whole revelation was rehearsed every year to the Holy Prophet by the angel Gabriel in this month. This practice continued till the very last year of the Prophet's life when the whole of the Qur'ān was rehearsed to him twice by the Archangel Jibrīl in this month (Bukhārī). Thus in a way even the whole of the Qur'ān may be said to have been revealed in the month of Ramaḍān.

209. The sentence is not an unnecessary repetition; for whereas in the previous verse it formed part of the verse that was meant to prepare the ground for the commandment to fast, in this verse it forms part of the actual commandment. The Qur'ān, however, wisely refrains from defining the terms "sickness" and "journey," leaving them to be defined by the common usage of the people and the attending circumstances.

187. And when My servants ask thee about Me, say, [a]'I am near.[210] [b]I answer the prayer of the supplicant when he prays to Me. So they should hearken to Me and believe[211] in Me, that they may follow the right way.'

188. It is made lawful for you to go in unto your wives on the night of the fast. They are a sort of garment[212] for you and you are a sort of garment for them. Allāh knows that you have been acting unjustly to yourselves, wherefore He has turned to you with mercy and afforded you relief.[213] So you may now go in unto them and seek what Allāh has ordained

[a]11:62; 34:51; 50:17. [b]27:63.

210. When the Faithful come to know of the blessings of the month of Ramaḍān and of fasting therein they naturally become eager to derive as much spiritual benefit from it as possible. It is to this hankering of the soul of a believer to which the verse supplies an answer.

211. The words, believe in Me, do not refer to belief in the existence of God; for, this idea is included in the preceding clause, they should hearken to Me, it being impossible that one should hearken to God and obey His commandments without believing in His existence. The words, believe in Me, therefore, refer to the belief that God hears and accepts the prayers of His servants.

212. How beautifully in these brief words the Qur'ān has described the rights and status of woman and the object and significance of marriage and conjugal relations. The real object of marriage, the verse purports to say, is the comfort, protection and embellishment of the parties, for such are the uses of a garment (7:27 & 16:82). It definitely is not merely the satisfaction of sexual urge. Husband and wife also safeguard each other against evil and scandal.

213. The expression 'Afallāhu 'An-hu means, God corrected his mistake and set right his affairs; bestowed honour upon him. It also means, God afforded him relief (Muḥīṭ).

الْفَجْرِ ۖ ثُمَّ اَتِمُّوا الصِّيَامَ اِلَى الَّيْلِ ۚ وَلَا تُبَاشِرُوْهُنَّ وَاَنْتُمْ عٰكِفُوْنَ ۙ فِي الْمَسٰجِدِ ۭ تِلْكَ حُدُوْدُ اللّٰهِ فَلَا تَقْرَبُوْهَا ۭ كَذٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ اللّٰهُ اٰيٰتِهٖ لِلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَّقُوْنَ ۝۱۸۷ for you; and eat and drink until the white thread becomes distinct to you from the black thread of the dawn. Then complete the fast till nightfall[214] and do not go in unto them while you remain in the mosques[215] for devotion. These are the limits set by Allāh, so approach them not. Thus does Allāh make His commandments clear to men that they may become secure against evil.

وَلَا تَاْكُلُوْٓا اَمْوَالَكُمْ بَيْنَكُمْ بِالْبَاطِلِ وَتُدْلُوْا بِهَآ اِلَى الْحُكَّامِ لِتَاْكُلُوْا فَرِيْقًا مِّنْ اَمْوَالِ النَّاسِ بِالْاِثْمِ وَاَنْتُمْ تَعْلَمُوْنَ ۝۱۸۸ ع ۲۳ ۷

189. And [a]do not devour your property[215A] among yourselves by false means[216] and offer it not as bribe to the authorities that you may devour a part of the wealth of other people wrongfully while you know.

214. At places where days and nights are unusually long (e.g. near the Poles) day and night should be calculated to be of twelve hours' duration (Muslim, ch. Ashrāṭus-Sā'ah).

215. In I'tikāf which constitutes, as it were, the consummation of the spirit of fasting, intercourse with wives and preliminaries thereto are not allowed even at night time.

215A. In order to emphasize communal or national unity the Qur'ān often refers to other Muslims' property as "your property." So here also other Muslims' property is spoken of as "your property."

216. The commandment relating to fasting enjoined Muslims to refrain from eating and drinking within specified periods with a view to attaining piety and righteousness. This was the most opportune time to remind them that unlawful eating, i.e. unlawful acquisition of wealth, must all the more be scrupulously avoided. Incidentally, the verse forcefully condemns the practice of giving and taking bribe.

190. They ask thee about the new moons. Say, [a]'They are means for measuring time,[217] for the general convenience of people and for the Pilgrimage.' And it is not righteousness that you come into houses by the backs[218] thereof; but [b]truly righteous is he who fears God. And you should come into houses by the doors thereof; and fear Allāh that you may prosper.

217. Islām has made use of both the lunar and solar systems for measuring time. Where worship is to be performed in different parts of the day the solar system of reckoning time is used, as in the five daily Prayers or for the beginning and the breaking of the daily fast; and where worship is to be completed within a particular month or part thereof, the lunar system is used, as in selecting the month of fasting or the appointment of the time of Pilgrimage, etc. Thus Islām has made use of both the systems; so the solar system is as much Islamic as the lunar system.

218. The clause points to a very important principle that the real purpose in prescribing different acts of worship is the intrinsic usefulness thereof and not that every change of time should have attached to it an act of worship. Therefore the question, arising from the over-eagerness of the Faithful, that, like fasting, there may be prescribed other acts of worship in other months also, was like approaching a house not through its door but by "the back thereof." The primary thing is worship and time is only secondary, but those who put the question wanted to make time a primary, and worship merely a secondary thing. This was like putting the cart before the horse. The reference also seems to be to a practice of the pagan Arabs that when they had once started on Pilgrimage to Mecca, if for any reason they had to come back, they would enter their houses from their backs by scaling over the walls. The verse condemns such practices, pointing out that they do not constitute virtue which is a spiritual concept, and implies that appropriate means should be adopted for the achievement of one's objective (Bukhārī, ch. on Tafsīr).

[a]4:76; 8:40; 9:13; 22:40; 60:9, 10. [b]2:218. [c]8:40. [d]8:40.

219. This is one of the earliest verses in which permission to fight was given to Muslims, the very first verse revealed in this connection being 22:40. The verse under comment contains the gist of the conditions which should govern a religious war: (a) Such a war should be undertaken with the object of removing obstacles placed in the way of Allāh, i.e. for the establishment of the freedom of religious belief and practice. (b) It is to be waged only against those who first take up arms against Muslims. (c) The Muslims should lay down arms as soon as the enemy desists from fighting.

220. This verse relates to conditions when war has actually broken out. Obviously, it enjoins Muslims to fight against only such disbelievers as are the first to take up arms against them.

221. The words signify that Mecca being the centre and the most sacred place of Islām, no non-Muslim should be allowed to remain in it.

222. This verse also shows that Muslims are allowed to fight in self-defence only when war is inflicted upon them by the other party and to continue it till complete freedom of religion is established. The Holy Prophet could not have entered into a number of treaties of peace with disbelievers if the Divine commandment had been to continue fighting until all disbelievers had embraced Islām. For a detailed note on Jihād see 1956-1960.

So, whoso transgresses against you, punish[225] him for his transgression to the extent to which he has transgressed against you. And fear Allāh and know that Allāh is with those who fear Him.

223. 'Udwān means, (1) hostility; (2) wrongful conduct; (3) punishment for wrongful conduct; and (4) approach to a person by way of justification or excuse against him (Mufradāt & Lane).

These four verses (191-194) embody the following rules about war: (a) War is to be resorted to only for the sake of God and not for any selfish motive, nor for aggrandisement or the advancement of national or other interests. (b) Muslims can go to war only against those who attack them first. (c) Even after the enemy has initiated the attack, they are enjoined to keep warfare within limits and not to extend it beyond the immediate objective. (d) They are to fight against only the regular army and not to attack or molest non-combatants. (e) During the course of fighting immunity is to be afforded to all religious rites and ceremonies. (f) To attack religious places or to do any kind of harm to them is absolutely forbidden, so that no fighting is allowed even in their neighbourhood. (g) If the enemy uses a place of worship as a base for attack, only then Muslims may return the attack in or near it. (h) Fighting is to continue only so long as interference with religious freedom lasts. See also 8:40; 9:4-6; 22:40, 41; etc.

224. The Sacred Months are Dhul-Qa'dah; Dhul-Ḥijjah; Al-Muḥarram and Rajab. In these months all fighting is disallowed. The commandment is intended to safeguard the sanctity of the Ka'bah and the Sacred Months.

225. See 33.

And complete the pilgrimage[227] and the ‘Umrah[228] for the sake of Allāh; but [b]if you are kept back,[229] then make whatever offering is easily available; and do not shave your heads until the offering reaches its destination. And whoever among you is sick or has an ailment of the head, should make an expiation either by fasting or almsgiving or a sacrifice. But when you are

226. As for the successful prosecution of war money is required, the believers are exhorted to spend freely in the cause of Allāh as any hesitancy to do so would result in national ruin.

227. With this verse begins the subject of Ḥajj (Pilgrimage). Jihād and Ḥajj seem to be correlated and both constitute a form of sacrifice which a true and sincere believer has to undergo in the way of Allāh, a subject which began with 2:178. The Pilgrimage is the last stage in the spiritual development of man, the other stages such as Prayer, Fasting and Jihād having already been discussed.

228. The ‘Umrah or the Lesser Pilgrimage consists in entering into a stage of Iḥrām in the way mentioned above, circuiting the Ka‘bah seven times, running between Ṣafā and Marwah and offering a sacrifice which, however, is not obligatory. The ‘Umrah may be performed at any time of the year, whereas the Ḥajj or the Greater Pilgrimage is performed only during the month of Dhul-Ḥijjah.

229. The words, if you are kept back, refer to a state of affairs when a would-be pilgrim is prevented by disease, or a state of war, or by some other cause, from visiting the Ka‘bah to perform the Ḥajj or the ‘Umrah.

اسْتَيْسَرَ مِنَ الْهَدْيِ ۚ فَمَنْ لَّمْ يَجِدْ

safe, then he, who would avail himself of the ‘Umrah together[230] with the Pilgrimage, should make whatever offering is easily obtainable. But such of you as cannot find an offering should fast three days during the Pilgrimage,[231] and seven when you return home; these are ten complete. This is for him whose family does not reside near the Sacred Mosque.[232] And fear Allāh and know that Allāh is severe in punishing.

230. The ‘Umrah and the Ḥajj may be combined in two ways: (a) The pilgrim who intends to perform the ‘Umrah alone should enter into the state of Iḥrām and perform its rites and finish it. Then on the eighth day of Dhul-Ḥijjah he should again enter into the state of Iḥrām and perform the prescribed rites of Ḥajj. This form of combining the ‘Umrah and the Ḥajj is technically called Tamattu‘ which literally means, "availing oneself of a thing." (b) The pilgrim may perform the ‘Umrah and the Ḥajj simultaneously. He should, in this case, enter into the state of Iḥrām with that intention and should remain in that state till the end of the Pilgrimage. This combination of Ḥajj and ‘Umrah is called Qirān which literally means, "the putting together of two things." In both Tamattu‘ and Qirān it is obligatory to offer the sacrifice. In the verse under comment the word Tamattu‘ is not used in the technical sense and covers Qirān also.

231. Fasting is mentioned in the clause, should fast three days during the Pilgrimage, is distinct and separate from the fasting mentioned above. The first-mentioned fasting is meant for those who cannot shave their heads while this fasting is meant for those who are unable to offer sacrifice in case of Tamattu‘. The three days spoken of are preferably the 11th, 12th and 13th of Dhul-Ḥijjah. The remaining seven fasts may be observed after one has returned home.

232. The words mean that the permission to combine Ḥajj and ‘Umrah is meant not for the residents of Mecca but for those who come from outside. By some, however, the words "the Sacred Mosque" have been extended to include the whole of Ḥaram, i.e. the sacred territory in and around Mecca.

And whatever good you do, Allāh knows it. And furnish yourselves with necessary provisions for your journey and surely, the best provision is righteousness. And fear Me alone, O men of understanding.

199. It is no sin for you that [c]you seek the bounty[234] of your Lord. But when you pour forth from ‘Arafāt,[235] remember Allāh at Mash‘arul-Ḥarām,[236]

[a]2:190; 9:36. [b]3:98; 22:28. [c]62:11.

233. Rafath includes all foul, immodest and lewd talk as well as acts relating to sex. Fusūq signifies transgression against the laws of God and disobedience of lawful authority, whether spiritual or temporal. And Jidāl means, disputes and quarrels with co-travellers, companions and neighbours.

234. As the object of Pilgrimage is that the greatest possible number of Muslims should take part in it, therefore, the Qur’ān permits pilgrims to engage in commerce and trade. Those, who cannot take hard cash with them, may carry merchandise and thereby earn money to meet the expenses of the journey.

235. ‘Arafāt is a plain or valley near Mecca where pilgrims halt in the latter part of the ninth day of Dhul-Ḥijjah. It is nine miles from Mecca, and the halt technically known as Wuqūf forms an important rite of the Pilgrimage. ‘Arafāt is a compound word meaning, the sacred place or means of perception or knowledge.

236. Mash‘arul-Ḥarām is a small hill in Muzdalifah, which lies between Mecca and ‘Arafāt. Here the Holy Prophet said the evening and the night Prayers and remained engaged in prayer all night before the rising of the sun.

وَاذْكُرُوْهُ كَمَا هَدٰىكُمْ ۚ وَاِنْ كُنْتُمْ

201. And when you have performed [b]the acts of worship prescribed for you, [c]celebrate the praises of Allāh as you used to celebrated the praises of your fathers, or with even greater devotion. And [d]of men there are some who say, 'Our Lord, grant us good things in this world;' and such a one shall have no share in the Hereafter.

[a]2:153, 204; 8:46; 62:11. [b]2:129. [c]See 2:153. [d]4:135; 42:21.

The place is specially meant for meditation and prayer in Pilgrimage. It is about six miles from Mecca.

237. If thumma is taken to mean "and," and "the return" spoken of in this verse is taken to refer to the return from 'Arafāt, then an-Nās would mean "other people;" but if it is taken to mean "then" and "the return" spoken of here is taken to refer to the return from Mash'arul-Ḥarām, then an-Nās would signify "all people" and both these meanings are supported by rules of the Arabic language.

238. Before the advent of Islām the Quraish and the Banū Kinānah known as Ḥums did not accompany other pilgrims to 'Arafāt, but stopped short at Mash'arul-Ḥarām, waiting to join other people returning from 'Arafāt. In this and the preceding verse, they are bidden not to stop short at Mash'arul-Ḥarām but to go up to 'Arafāt and do as other people do. After returning from 'Arafāt to Mash'arul-Ḥarām, pilgrims should proceed to Minā where sacrifices are offered and the state of Iḥrām comes to an end.

202. And [a]of them there are some who say: 'Our Lord, grant us good in this world as well as good in the world to come,[239] and save us from the torment of the Fire.'

اُولٰٓئِكَ لَهُمْ نَصِيْبٌ مِّمَّا كَسَبُوْا ؕ وَاللّٰهُ سَرِيْعُ الْحِسَابِ ﴿٢٠٣﴾

وَاذْكُرُوا اللّٰهَ فِيْٓ اَيَّامٍ مَّعْدُوْدٰتٍ ؕ فَمَنْ تَعَجَّلَ فِيْ يَوْمَيْنِ فَلَآ اِثْمَ عَلَيْهِ ۚ وَمَنْ تَاَخَّرَ فَلَآ اِثْمَ عَلَيْهِ ۙ لِمَنِ اتَّقٰى ؕ وَاتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ وَاعْلَمُوْٓا اَنَّكُمْ اِلَيْهِ تُحْشَرُوْنَ ﴿٢٠٤﴾

204. And [b]remember Allāh during the appointed number of days,[240] but whoso hastens to leave in two days, it shall be no sin for him; and whoso stays behind, it shall be no sin for him either. This direction is for him who fears Allāh. So fear Allāh[241] and know that you shall all be brought together before Him.[242]

239. The verse mentions that class of men whose efforts and aspirations are not confined to this world only. They seek the good things of this world and also the good things of the next. Ḥasanah also means, success (Tāj). The prayer is very comprehensive and the Holy Prophet very often made use of it (Muslim).

240. These are the 11th, 12th and 13th day of Dhul-Ḥijjah during which the pilgrims are required, so far as possible, to stay at Minā and pass their time in glorifying God. They are called Ayyāmut-Tashrīq, i.e. the days of brightness and beauty.

241. The underlying object of the Pilgrimage is the attainment of Taqwā (righteousness), the very word with which the Qur'ān began its commandments about Ḥajj in 2:198, thus emphasizing that mere outward observance of certain rites is meaningless unless they are accompanied by the spirit of righteousness which should underlie all actions of man.

242. The different objects and places which play an important part in Pilgrimage are spoken of in the Qur'ān as Sha'ā'irullāh (2:159; 5:3; 22:33) or the Signs of God, which signifies that they are intended to serve only as symbols to impress upon the minds of pilgrims their inward significance. The Ka'bah, round which thousands of pilgrims perform the circuit and towards which all Muslims turn while offering their Prayers wherever they may happen to be, recalls to their minds Divine Unity and the Majesty of God. It also reminds them of the unity of mankind. The act of running between Ṣafā and Marwah calls to the minds of pilgrims the story, full of pathos, of Hagar and Ishmael, reminding them how God provides for His helpless servants even in the solitude of a great wilderness. Minā, derived from Umniyyah (an object or a desire), reminds the pilgrim that he goes there with the "object" or the "desire" of meeting God. Mash'arul-Ḥarām meaning, the sacred symbol, hints that the final stage is near. 'Arafāt reminds him that he has reached the stage of realisation, and Iḥrām reminds him of the Day of Resurrection. Like the shroud of a dead body, the pilgrim wears only two unsown sheets, one for the upper part of the body and the other for the lower part; and he also remains bare-headed. This condition reminds him that he has, as it were, risen from the dead. The pilgrims gathered together at 'Arafāt present the spectacle of the Day of Resurrection—men suddenly risen from the dead in their white shrouds and assembled in the presence of their Lord. The sacrificial animals are reminders of the great sacrifice offered by Abraham of his son Ishmael, and the sacrifice embodies the lesson in symbolic language that man should ever be ready, not only to sacrifice himself but also his wealth and property and even his children, in the way of God.

243. There are persons whose eloquence and feigned love for fellow-beings would deceive the listener, but at heart they love and seek only their own interests and vehemently dispute with others for their smallest rights, supposed or real; not giving any proof of that spirit of sacrifice which is essential for real human progress.

244. Ḥarth means, (1) a piece of land ploughed for sowing, or actually progeny of man; and Allāh loves not disorder.

207. And when it is said to him, 'Fear Allāh,' pride incites him to further sin.[245] So Hell[246] shall be his sufficient reward; and surely, it is an evil place of rest.[247] sown with some crop; (2) crop or produce of land whether field-crop or garden-crop; (3) gain, acquisition or earning; (4) reward or recompense; (5) worldly goods; (6) wife or wives, because a wife is like tilth in which seed is sown to produce crop in the form of children (Lane).

245. All his efforts are directed towards injuring the interests of other people and furthering his own.

246. Lexicographers agree that Jahannam has no root in Arabic. The word may have been derived from Jahuma which means, he became frowning or contracted or ugly in the face. If that be so the letter nūn in Jahannam would be something additional (Muḥīṭ). Thus Jahannam means, a place of punishment which is dark and waterless and which makes the face of its inmates ugly and contracted.

247. A false sense of dignity and prestige is his chief stumbling block, his vanity inciting him to further acts of sin, till it virtually encompasses him on all sides. Such a one paves his own way to Hell.

248. In contrast to the people mentioned in the previous verses there is a class of men whose sole concern is to seek the pleasure of Allāh as if they had given away their souls for that very purpose.

249. Kāffah means, (1) all together; (2) wholly or completely; (3) repulsing the enemy and (4) restraining oneself or others from sin and digression (Mufradāt).

250. The phrase, "coming of God," is used by the Qur'ān elsewhere also (16:27; 59:3) and signifies God's punishment.

251. The word al-Ghamām has been used by the Qur'ān to express both mercy (7:161) and punishment (25:26).

252. The reference is to the Battle of Badr, when God helped the believers by sending down clouds and rain (Bukhārī), as was promised to them (25:26), and also sent down angels (8:10) who inspired the believers with courage and filled the hearts of the disbelievers with fear (8:13). Some of the disbelievers are reported to have actually seen the angels on that day (Zurqānī).

253. This does not mean that God is unnecessarily severe in punishment, but that Divine punishment is bound to be felt severely.

Mankind were one community,[254] then they differed among themselves, so Allāh raised Prophets as [b]bearers of good tidings and as warners, and sent down with them the Book containing the truth that He might judge between the people wherein they differed. But then they began to differ about the Book, and none differed[255] about it

[a]3:38; 24:39; 35:4; 40:41. [b]4:166; 6:49; 18:57.

254. Before the advent of a Prophet all men are like one people in the sense that they are all unbelievers. But when a Prophet appears, they, in spite of their mutual differences, form one united front against him. The expression, "mankind were one community" or identical words have been used, besides the present verse, at seven places in the Qur'ān. In 10:20; 21:93 and 23:53 they signify "national unity" and in 5:49; 16:94; 42:9; 43:34 and in the verse under comment "identity of ideas."

255. The "difference" referred to in the verse at two separate places signifies two different kinds of disagreement. Before the advent of a Prophet people differ among themselves about their idolatrous practices. But after his appearance, they begin to differ with regard to his claims. The Prophet does not create differences. The differences are already there; they merely assume a new form after his appearance. Before a Prophet appears, the people, in spite of their mutual differences, look like one people; they become divided into two distinct camps—believers and disbelievers,—after he appears. Viewed collectively, the verse describes five different stages through which mankind has passed. In the beginning there was unity among the people, all forming one community. With the increase in population and the extension of their interests and the complexity of their problems, they began to differ among themselves. Then God raised Prophets and revealed His Will. Every new revelation was made a cause of discord and differences, particularly by the people to whom the Divine Message was addressed. God finally raised the except those to whom it was given, after clear Signs had come to them, out of envy towards one another. Now has Allāh, by His command, guided the believers to the truth in regard to which they (the unbelievers) differed; and Allāh guides whomsoever He pleases to the right path.

Holy Prophet with His last Book and a universal mission, calling upon all humanity to rally round his banner. Thus a circle was completed and the world which began with unity is designed to end in unity.

256. Acceptance of the Message of Islām was no bed of roses, and Muslims were warned that they would have to pass through fiery ordeals, trials and tribulations before they could hope to achieve their sublime ideal.

256A. Ḥattā also means, "so that" (Mughnī). The word has also been used in this sense in 63:8.

257. The pathetic cry for help embodied in the words, When will the help of Allāh come, does not denote despair or despondency because an attitude of despair on the part of a Prophet of God and his followers is inconceivable, being inconsistent with true faith (12:88). The words in reality constitute a prayer—a way of earnestly beseeching God to expedite His help.

258. The verse signifies that whatever is spent should have been honestly acquired. What is spent must be good also in the sense that it should be acceptable to the receiver and should satisfy his need and that the object on which it is spent is also worthy and laudable.

259. Muslims hated war not because they were afraid of it, but because they did not like to shed human blood; also because they thought that a peaceful atmosphere was much more conducive to the spread and propagation of Islām than a state of war.

260. The believers were told that if disbelievers violated the sanctity of the Sacred Months, they should not hesitate to punish them in the Sacred Months, for thus alone could the sanctity of a sacred thing be safeguarded (2:195). Commentators generally state, and in fact there are also traditions to this effect, that on one occasion the Holy Prophet sent 'Abdullāh bin Jaḥsh to bring news about a party of the Quraish proceeding to Mecca. When 'Abdullāh and his companions reached a place called Nakhlah, they met a small party. 'Abdullāh attacked the party, killing one of them and capturing two. The date on which this happened was doubtful, some considering it to be one within the Sacred Month and others not. The news reached Mecca, the Quraish took advantage of the doubt and protested that the Muslims had violated the Sacred Month. The verse under comment was revealed on that occasion.

261 Khamarush-Shai'a means, he veiled or covered up or concealed the thing. Wine is called Khamr because it covers or obscures or affects the intellect or the senses, or because it agitates and excites the brain so as to make it lose its power of control. The word is specifically used for wine prepared from grapes but signifies all intoxicants (Lane). "Alcoholism is an important factor in the causation of disease; and in all diseases alcoholics are bad patients. In epidemics the mortality among drinkers is excessive; and the general power of resistance to disease, injury, and fatigue is diminished.....Alcoholism lessens the chance of life; the English life-insurance companies found that the presumptive length of life of non-drinkers was about twice that of drinkers. The close relationship of alcoholism and crime is well-known; and the statistics of Baer, Kurella and Gallavardin and Sichart show that from 25 to 85 per cent of all malefactors are drunkards... "The evil effects of alcoholism are evident in the drunkard's posterity...Epilepsy, insanity, idiocy and various forms of physical, mental and moral degeneracy are very disproportionately prevalent among the offsprings of alcoholics" (Jew. Enc.). "The effects of consumption of alcohol are almost all due to its action upon the nervous system. In the advanced stage of drunkenness, the intellectual processes of judgment and control are suspended." (Enc. Brit.). "There is universal testimony as to the close relationship between excessive drinking and breaches of the moral law and the law of the State. This is a direct consequence of the paralysis of the higher faculties, intellectual and moral, and the resulting free play given to the lower inclinations" (Enc. Rel. Eth.).

262. Aisarar-Rajulu means, man became well off. Maisar is so called because the gambler seeks to become rich quickly and easily without undergoing the trouble of earning wealth by hard work. "The vicious tendency of gambling has never been called in question. It is essentially anti-social; it sears the sympathies, cultivates hard egoism and so produces a general deterioration of character. It is a habit intrinsically savage....Its motive is carefully disguised covetousness. It is an attempt to get property without paying the price for it. It is a violation of the law of equivalents. It is a kind of robbery by mutual agreement just as duelling which is murder by mutual agreement. It is begotten of covetousness; it leads to idleness. It is, moreover, an appeal to chance. To make chance the arbiter of conduct is to subvert the moral order and stability of life. It concentrates attention upon lucre and thereby withdraws attention from worthier objects of life" (Enc. Rel. Eth.).

263. Ithm means, sin; punishment of sin; the harm that might result from sin (Lane).

264. It is characteristic of Islām that it never condemns a thing wholesale but freely and frankly admits even the smallest good that may be found in it. Islām prohibits certain things not because it considers them to be devoid of all good, for there is nothing in the world, which is wholly bad, but because their evil outweighs their good. While prohibiting the use of intoxicants and games of chance because of their great harm, Islām has not failed to acknowledge the few advantages they possess.

265. 'Afw means, (a) what exceeds or remains over and above one's requirements, and the spending of what does not cause hardship to the giver; (b) the best portion of a thing; (c) giving without being asked (Aqrab). Ordinary believers are required to spend what remains after their own legitimate needs have been met, and the higher class of believers are expected to spend the best portion of their possessions. If, however, the clause be applied collectively to all believers, it would mean that in times of war they should retain for themselves only such portion of their possessions as may suffice to meet their bare necessities of life.

266. The bringing up of orphans is a very delicate affair and also an important social duty. Orphans should be brought up in a manner most conducive to their physical, moral and spiritual welfare. They should be treated as members of the family—the exhortation being contained in the words, "they are your brethren."

267. The question of marriage with "idolatrous women" is intimately connected with the subject of war, for it is during war that, being away from their homes for a considerable time, believers are liable to be tempted to contract marriages with such women. This, the Qur'ān positively prohibits, as also the giving of believing women in marriage to idolatrous men. The prohibition is based on religious as well as on moral and social grounds. An idolatrous husband is bound to exercise an extremely baneful influence, not only on his wife but also on the children born of this union; and an idolatrous wife is sure to ruin the up-bringing of the offspring. Moreover, when a believing man has an idolatrous wife or vice versa, their ideas, beliefs and outlook on life being widely different, there can possibly exist no harmony or concord between the two and consequently no peace in the family. In Islām slavery carries no stigma of inferiority; and a Muslim bondwoman would in every respect be a better spouse for a Muslim freeman than an idolatress and vice versa. Slaves commanded great respect in Muslim society for their faith and righteousness. Bilāl, Salmān and Sālim, very respected Companions of the Holy Prophet, were all freed slaves.

268. After laying down, in brief, the law about intermarriages, reference to marital relations and conjugal obligations became necessary.

270. See 244.

271. Annā means, (1) how; (2) when; and (3) where. (Aqrab).

272. This verse constitutes an eloquent testimony to the inimitably pure and dignified language of the Qur'ān. An extremely delicate subject has been dealt with in a most decent and discreet manner and the whole philosophy of marriage and conjugal relations has been given in one brief sentence, i.e. Your wives are a sort of tilth for you. A woman is indeed like a tilth in which the seed of progeny is sown. A wise husbandman selects the best soil, prepares the best tilth, secures the best seed, and chooses the best time and manner of sowing it. So should a believer do, for on the harvest which he is to reap in the form of children depends not only his own but also his community's entire future. It is to this supreme fact that the words so pointedly refer. Thus the likening of woman to tilth throws a flood of light on the morality of eugenics and sex.

273. The word 'Urḍah meaning a butt or an obstacle, it is indeed an act of blasphemy that one should use the name of Allāh Who is the Fountainhead of all goodness, to abstain from doing good deeds. Again, it is a gross violation of the sanctity of Allāh's name that it should be used as a butt or target for profane or purposeless oaths. This and the following verse serve as a sort of introduction to 2:227, in which the subject of swearing to keep away from one's wife has been pointedly stated.

274. Taking an oath is a serious matter, but some men are in the habit of swearing without meaning anything. Such oaths as are taken thoughtlessly or as a matter of habit or those taken in a sudden fit of anger do not call for expiation.

275. After the two introductory and intervening verses in which the subject of taking oaths has been dealt with, the Qur'ān now reverts to the original subject of conjugal relations. The verse speaks of those men who vow abstinence from their wives without actually divorcing them. It is, interesting to note that while approaching the subject of divorce, the Qur'ān first speaks of menstruation (2:223) which is a sort of temporary and partial, though unreal, separation. Then (as in the present verse), it speaks of real though indefinite separation. And then, in the succeeding verses, it speaks of real though revocable divorce. And finally (2:231) it speaks of irrevocable divorce. A really wonderful order designed to put as many obstacles as possible in the way of divorce, which Islām recognizes and retains as a sort of necessary evil. Islām allows four months at the most to a person who swears not to approach his wife. During this period, he must either get reconciled to his wife and restore conjugal relations, or separation will be effected between the two. Islām would in no case permit indefinite separation without divorce, leaving the woman "suspended," as it were. Īlā' signifies an oath of separation according to which a woman in the "Days of Ignorance" would remain in a suspended state. She could neither marry another person nor could have conjugal relations with her husband.

وَ اِنۡ عَزَمُوا الطَّلَاقَ فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ سَمِيۡعٌ عَلِيۡمٌ ﴿۲۲۸﴾

228. And if they decide upon [a]divorce,[276] then surely Allāh is All-Hearing, All-Knowing.

And [b]the divorced women shall wait concerning themselves for three courses;[277] and it is not lawful for them that they conceal what Allāh has created in their wombs, if they believe in Allāh and the Last Day; and their husbands have the greater right to take them back during that period, provided they desire reconciliation.[278] And they

[a]2:230; 33:50; 65:2. [b]2:235; 65:5.

276. With this verse begins the discussion of the Islamic law of divorce. According to this law, the husband possesses the right to divorce his wife, when legitimate necessity arises. But the right is to be exercised only on very rare occasions and in exceptional circumstances.

277. Qurū' is plural of Qur' or Qar' which means, a time; menstruation; period or state of purity preceding and following a menstrual discharge, i.e. the period between two menstruations; termination of a menstruation; the period of menstruation and that of purity taken together, i.e. the whole month the time or state when a woman leaves her state of purity and enters that of menstruation (Muḥīṭ & Mufradāt). Abū Bakr and 'Umar among the Companions of the Holy Prophet and Abū Ḥanīfah and Aḥmad bin Ḥanbal among the Imāms of Jurisprudence held the view that Qur' means menstruation and not the period of purity. On the contrary, 'Ā'ishah and Ibn-e-'Umar among the Companions, and Mālik and Shāfi'ī among the Imāms of Jurisprudence held the opposite view (Muḥīṭ). Opinions being so balanced, it is open to a Muslim to take either of the two views, but a collective survey of relevant arguments, which need not be stated here, leads one to the conclusion that of the two the first-mentioned view seems to be more akin to reason. If however, one would like to be on the safe side, it is open to him to take the word Qur' to signify the period of menstruation and purity taken together, i.e. the whole month.

278. In view of the fact that divorce is the most hateful of all lawful things in the sight of God (Dāwūd), it has been hedged round by many checks and limitations: (a) A husband can divorce his wife only when she is clean, i.e. in a state of purity, and he has had no sexual knowledge of her in her period of purity. (b) After the pronouncement of divorce the wife must wait for three menstruations, i.e. about three months, which period is called 'Iddat or the period of waiting. This is because this period gives the husband sufficient time to consider all the implications of his action and to allow his love for her, if there is yet a dormant spark lying smouldering somewhere, to reassert itself. (c) A divorced woman, if pregnant, must not conceal this fact from her husband, for the expected birth of a child is calculated to go a long way in bringing about reconciliation between the couple. (d) For complete and irrevocable separation there should be three divorces. After the pronouncement of the first as well as the second divorce and before the expiry of the period of waiting, the husband enjoys the privilege of taking his wife back, if he so desires. Even after the period of waiting is over, the couple can become reunited in the case of the first and second divorce by renewing the marriage tie.

279. As far as personal rights are concerned, the husband and the wife stand on a par, but as pointed out in 4:35 men have a supervisory authority on account of the physical advantage they possess and the financial responsibility that they carry for providing for the household.

280. This verse contains the fifth check on divorce. A man who seeks separation from his wife must pronounce divorce on three separate occasions, each in a separate period of purity when he has not gone in unto her during that period. The pronouncement of divorce twice or thrice at one and the same time is not permissible as is hinted in the word Marratān (twice) which signifies a thing happening on two separate occasions and not two things happening at one and the same time. The Holy Prophet treated such collective pronouncements, whatever their number, as only one divorce (Tirmidhī & Dāwūd). According to Nasa'ī, the Holy Prophet was extremely angry when one day he was told that a person had made all the three pronouncements of divorce at one and the same time and said, "Is the Book of God going to be made a plaything while I am yet among you?" After the pronouncement of the first two divorces, the husband can take back the divorced wife within 'Iddat, i.e. the period of waiting, with or without her consent; but after the period of waiting is over, he can take her back only with her consent and that after remarrying her. After the third divorce, however, the husband forfeits this right and the couple are finally separated. A Companion of the Holy Prophet once asked him saying, "The Qur'ān has here spoken of two divorces only, whence comes in the third?" The Holy Prophet referred him to the words, or send them away with kindness, meaning thereby that after the first two divorces the husband could retain and remarry her if she was also agreeable to the marriage; but if he wanted irrevocable separation, he should "send her away," i.e. divorce her a third time (Jarīr and Musnad). The point is further made clear in the succeeding verse. Thus the word Tasrīḥ here signifies Ṭalāq, i.e. divorce.

281 When a person divorces his wife, he forfeits the dower-money he has given her; and if at the time of divorce he has not yet given her the dower-money, he must make the payment before the divorce becomes effective. Again, he is not allowed to take back anything he might have given her in the form of gifts and presents.

282. If, however, it is the wife who demands separation, technically known as Khula', she must get it through a Qāḍī or judge as the words "you fear," in the plural number, hint. In this case she has to part with, in full or in part, her dowry as well as the gifts she might have received from her husband, as agreed upon by the parties or decided by the judge. The case of Jamīlah, wife of Qais bin Thābit, provides a good illustration of the exercise of the right of Khula' by women. She demanded separation from her husband. Qais, on the ground that she did not like him, i.e. their temperaments being different she could not get on with him. She was granted Khula' by the Holy Prophet, but she had to return to her husband the orchard he had given her (Bukhārī).

transgress them not; and whoso transgresses the limits prescribed by Allāh, it is they that are the wrongdoers.

And if he divorces[283] her the third time, then she is not lawful for him thereafter, until she marries another husband; and, if he also divorces her, then it shall be no sin for them to return to each other, provided they are sure that they would be able to observe the limits prescribed by Allāh. [a]2:229; 65:5. [b]See 2:230.

283. This verse refers to the third and final divorce after which the husband loses all right of reunion with his wife unless the divorced woman marries another man and establishes conjugal relations with him, and is then formally divorced by him or he dies, leaving her free to marry another man. By the inclusion of this provision in the law of divorce Islām has, on the one hand, enhanced the sanctity of the marriage tie which must not be trifled with; and, on the other, it has afforded yet another, though extremely remote, opportunity to the couple who once had lived as husband and wife to become reunited if they so desire.

283A. The expression Balaghal-Ajala means, he approached the end of the period; or he reached the end of, or completed, the period. According to consensus of scholarly opinion, the first meaning applies here (Qurṭubī).

284. As is apparent from the context, the divorce spoken of here refers to

233. And when you divorce women and they reach the end of their period, prevent them not from marrying their husbands,[285] if they agree between themselves in a decent manner. This is an admonition for him among you who believes in Allāh and the Last Day. It is more blessed for you and purer; and Allāh knows but you know not.

the revocable divorce. After such divorce has been pronounced there are only two courses open to the husband. He may either retain his wife and treat her with kindness or may part with her in a good and becoming manner. He is not allowed to maltreat her and keep her in a state of suspense.

285. The word "husbands" mentioned in this verse may refer either to former husbands or to prospective ones. In the former case, the clause, and when you divorce women, would be taken as referring to the first or second divorce. In case the word "husbands" stands for prospective husbands, the above phrase would refer to the third or final divorce. The guardian of a divorced woman cannot prevent her from remarrying her former husband nor the former husband can prevent her from marrying a new husband.

And the man to whom the child belongs shall be responsible for their (the mothers') maintenance and clothing according to usage. [c]No soul is burdened beyond its capacity. Neither shall a mother be made to suffer[286] on account of her child, nor shall he to whom the child belongs[287] be made to suffer on account of his child and the same is incumbent on the father's heir.[288] If they both decide upon weaning the child by mutual consent and consultation,[288A] there is no blame on them. And if you desire to engage a wet-nurse for your children, there shall

286. The expression, lā Tuḍārra, is both in the active and the passive voice; the clause may, therefore, mean that: (1) the mother shall not make the father suffer on account of her child; and (2) the mother shall not be made to suffer on account of her child; and both meanings are equally applicable here.

287. The words Maulūdulla-hū (he to whom the child belongs) have been used here in preference to the simpler word Wālid (father), in order to point to the inherent right of the father to possess the child and to his natural responsibility for its maintenance.

288. One who inherits the property of a deceased person is duty bound to bring up the children the latter may leave behind.

288A. The suckling of the child should last for two years at the maximum. But it is allowable to discontinue it before the end of this period, if the father and the mother both agree on this course. The verse also implies that the child is not to be weaned before the end of two years without the consent of its mother.

289. The 'Iddat or the period of waiting in the case of widows is four months and ten days, which roughly corresponds to four alternate periods of menstruation and purity combined. Islām has prescribed a longer period in the case of a widow as a mark of respect for her feelings at the death of her husband and has thus added to the dignity and sanctity of the marriage tie.

290. The words, concerning anything that they do with regard to themselves, obviously refer to re-marriage. Elsewhere the Qur'ān says, And arrange marriages for your widows (24:33).

حَتّٰى يَبْلُغَ الْكِتٰبُ اَجَلَهٗ ؕ وَاعْلَمُوْۤا اَنَّ

237. It shall be no sin for you if you divorce women while you have not touched them, nor settled for them a dowry. But provide[292] for them—the rich man according to his means and the poor man according to his means—a provision in a becoming manner. This is an obligation upon the virtuous.

291 It is forbidden to a man to make an open proposal of marriage to a widow within her prescribed period of waiting. He may drop a hint indirectly suggestive of his intention. But he must on no account make an open suggestion or a formal proposal or even a secret proposal concerning marriage. A widow, too, is prohibited from giving her consent to such a proposal within the prescribed period. She must patiently wait for four months and ten days, out of deference to the memory of her departed spouse and in order also that her possible pregnancy may become apparent, because a pregnant woman is not allowed to marry until she is delivered of the child.

292. This would be an exceptional case. But cases do sometimes happen where after a marriage contract has been completed, circumstances arise or become known which render the consummation and continuation of the marriage difficult or undesirable. This and the next verse make provision for such cases.

وَاِنْ طَلَّقْتُمُوْهُنَّ مِنْ قَبْلِ اَنْ تَمَسُّوْهُنَّ وَقَدْ فَرَضْتُمْ لَهُنَّ فَرِيْضَةً فَنِصْفُ مَا فَرَضْتُمْ اِلَّآ اَنْ يَّعْفُوْنَ اَوْ يَعْفُوَا الَّذِىْ بِيَدِهٖ عُقْدَةُ النِّكَاحِ ؕ وَاَنْ تَعْفُوْٓا اَقْرَبُ لِلتَّقْوٰى ؕ وَلَا تَنْسَوُا الْفَضْلَ بَيْنَكُمْ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ بِمَا تَعْمَلُوْنَ بَصِيْرٌ ﴿۲۳۸﴾

238. And if you divorce them before you have touched them, but have settled upon them a dowry, then half[293] of what you have settled shall be due from you, unless they remit, or he, in whose hand is the tie of marriage,[294] should remit.[294A] And that you should remit is nearer to righteousness. And do not forget to do good to one another. Surely, Allāh sees what you do.

فَاِنْ خِفْتُمْ فَرِجَالًا اَوْ رُكْبَانًا ۚ فَاِذَآ اَمِنْتُمْ فَاذْكُرُوا اللّٰهَ كَمَا عَلَّمَكُمْ مَّا لَمْ

[a]23:10; 70:35. [b]4:102. [c]4:104.

293. If the divorce occurs after the dowry has been fixed but before the husband has gone in unto his wife, the husband shall pay half of the fixed dowry.

294. The clause, he in whose hand is the tie of marriage, may signify either the husband or the guardian of the divorced woman, because whereas after marriage the tie of marriage is in the hands of the husband, before marriage the guardian of the woman holds it.

294A. Ya'fū may mean, "remits or increases." The wife (or her guardian) may remit the whole or a part of what is due to her, or the husband may pay more than what is due from him. But the husband is certainly desired to make a greater show of generosity.

295. After marriage one is apt to become a little lax in Prayers. Besides, family life multiplies the cares of both men and women. Hence, the necessity of urging married people to be more regular and punctual in their Prayers.

296. The view that it is 'Aṣr Prayer is supported by some of the sayings of the Holy Prophet (Bukhārī). It seems to be the Prayer, which happens to fall within busy hours when one is in the middle of engrossing preoccupations. But each Prayer in a sense is "the middle Prayer."

297. Observance of five daily Prayers is the most important commandment.

241. And [a]those of you who die and leave behind wives shall bequeath to their wives provision for a year[298] without their being turned out. But if they themselves go out, there shall be no blame upon you in regard to any proper thing which they do concerning themselves. And Allāh is Mighty and Wise.

وَلِلْمُطَلَّقٰتِ مَتَاعٌۢ بِالْمَعْرُوْفِ ۗ حَقًّا

242. And for the divorced women also there should be a [b]provision[299] according to what is fair—an obligation on the God-fearing.

كَذٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ اللّٰهُ لَكُمْ اٰيٰتِهٖ لَعَلَّكُمْ

243. Thus does Allāh make His commandments clear to you that you may understand.

[a]2:235. [b]2:242; 65:8.

In no circumstances should a Muslim neglect his Prayers as long as he is sane and conscious. Even when he is moving about in a state of extreme fear, he must not fail to say his Prayers and should perform them on horseback or on foot, whether running or sitting or lying, as the case may be.

298. The period of waiting laid down for a widow in 2:235 is four months and ten days in which time she can, as of right, claim residence and maintenance from the heirs of her deceased husband. The period of one year mentioned here is only a concession or a favour for a widow in addition to her right of residence and maintenance mentioned in 2:235. The concession forms no part of her share in the inheritance, nor is it an obligatory injunction.

299. Just as the preceding verse bestowed an additional favour on widows, the present one bestows an additional favour on divorced women. The injunction is particularly essential in the case of divorced women, because in moments of bitterness, which is the inevitable aftermath of a dissolved marriage, people are liable to be unjust and cruel towards their divorced wives.

300. When, being persecuted by Pharaoh, the Israelites left Egypt and crossed over to Asia, Moses wanted them to enter the Promised Land, but they were afraid of the people that dwelt there and refused to march ahead (5:25).

301 The Bible represents the number of the Israelites migrating from Egypt as six hundred thousand. Recent researches favour the Quranic view according to which they were only several thousand (History of the People of Israel, by Ernest Renan. p. 145, 1888, and History of Palestine and the Jews, i. 174, by John Kitto). See also 2:61.

302. The Israelites left Egypt because their further stay in that country would have meant their total annihilation. Pharaoh had recourse to all sorts of means to destroy their manhood. See 2:50.

303. The reference is to the wandering in the wilderness of Sinai of the Israelites who had refused to march with Moses into Canaan until they perished in the wilderness and a new generation arose who, inspired with a new life, marched into the Promised Land under Joshua. Elsewhere the Qur'ān says, "Then we raised you up after your death" (2:57).

304. The address is to the Muslims. They are told that a people who do not shed fear of death and are not prepared to sacrifice their all for the preservation of their national existence and honour, do not deserve to live. This is the secret of national progress which the Qur'ān inculcates.

305. The Qur'ān speaks of spending money in the cause of Allāh as giving a loan to Him, meaning thereby that money spent for the promotion of righteous causes should not be regarded as money wasted.

They said, 'What reason have we that we should not fight[306] in the way of Allāh when we have been driven forth from our homes and our sons?' But when fighting was ordained for them, they turned back except a small number of them. And Allāh knows the transgressors well.

306. The incident mentioned indicates an improvement in the condition of the Israelites at the time to which this verse relates compared with the time of Moses himself. In 5:25 the Qur'ān relates that when Moses exhorted his followers to fight the enemy in the cause of Allāh, they replied, Go thou and thy Lord and fight, and here we sit. On the contrary, in the present verse they are reported to have said, What reason have we that we should not fight in the cause of Allāh when we have been driven forth from our homes and our sons. The improvement, however, was only verbal rather than real; for when the time of actual fighting came, many of them wavered and refused to fight. The incident thus serves as a grim warning to Muslims to beware of treading the same path.

307. Ṭālūt is the attributive name of an Israelite king who lived about two hundred years before David and about the same number of years after Moses.

لَهُ الْمُلْكُ عَلَيْنَا وَنَحْنُ أَحَقُّ بِالْمُلْكِ مِنْهُ وَلَمْ يُؤْتَ سَعَةً مِّنَ الْمَالِ ۚ قَالَ إِنَّ اللَّهَ اصْطَفَاهُ عَلَيْكُمْ وَزَادَهُ بَسْطَةً فِي الْعِلْمِ said, 'How can he have sovereignty over us while we are better entitled to sovereignty than he, and he is not given abundance of wealth?' He said, 'Surely, Allāh has chosen him

Some Commentators of the Qur'ān have wrongly identified Ṭālūt with Saul. The description of the Qur'ān fits in more with Gideon (Judg. chs. 6-8) than with Saul. Gideon lived in about 1250 B.C. and the Bible calls him a "mighty man of valour" (Judg. 6:12) which is the same as Ṭālūt. According to some Christian writers incidents related in this passage refer to two different periods which are separated from each other by the long interval of 200 years, and refer to this passage as an instance, as they say, of historical anachronisms to be found in the Qur'ān. The passage does indeed refer to two different periods, but there is no anachronism in it. The Qur'ān has here referred to both these periods. Its object in doing so is to show how the unification of the different tribes of Israel began in the time of Gideon, (i.e. Ṭālūt), two hundred years before David, and was finally consummated in the time of David. The words "after Moses" in the preceding verse indicate that the incident belongs to an early period when the Israelites as a nation had just begun to take definite shape in history. For two hundred years after Moses they were divided into different tribes and had no king and no fighting force. In 1256 B.C., owing to their iniquity, God delivered them into the hands of the Midianites who plundered and ravaged them for seven long years, and they were compelled to take refuge in caves (Judg.6:1-6). "Upon this they cried to God and He raised among them a Prophet; and an angel of the Lord appeared to Gideon, appointed him king and promised him Divine help. Then Gideon said to God, "Oh my Lord wherewith shall I save Israel? Behold, my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house" (Judg.6:15). This tallies with the description given in the verse under comment about Ṭālūt. What makes the identification of Ṭālūt with Gideon still more certain is the fact that it was in the time of Gideon and not that of Saul that the Israelites were tried by means of water, and the description of the trial as given in the Bible (Judg.7:4-7) is the same as that of the Qur'ān. From Judg.7:6, 7, we learn that after the aforesaid trial there remained with Gideon only 300 men. It is interesting to note that a Companion of the Holy Prophet is reported to have said, "We were 313 men in the Battle of Badr, and this number corresponds to the number of men who followed Ṭālūt" (Tirmidhī, ch. on Siyar). The Ḥadīth lends support to the conclusion that Ṭālūt was no other than Gideon. What further confirms the identity of Ṭālūt with Gideon is the fact that this word is derived from a root which in Hebrew means "to fell" (Enc. Bib.) or "to hew" (Jew. Enc.). Thus Gideon means "one who cuts down his adversary and fells him to the ground" and the Bible itself speaks of Gideon as a "mighty man of valour" (Judg. 6:12). See also 'The Larger Edition of the Commentary.'

249. And their Prophet said to them, 'The sign of his sovereignty is that there shall be given you a heart[308] wherein there will be tranquillity from your Lord and a legacy[309] of good left by the family of Moses and the family of Aaron—the angels bearing it. Surely, in this there is a Sign for you if you are believers.'

308. Tābūt means, (1) a chest or box; (2) chest or breast or bosom or the ribs with what they contain, as the heart, etc. (Lane); (3) the heart which is the storehouse of knowledge, wisdom and peace (Mufradāt). Commentators have differed about the significance of the word Tābūt and the Bible mentions it as an ark or chest, and the description given in the Qur'ān definitely shows that the word has been used here in the sense of "heart" or "bosom." The description of the Tābūt in the verse "wherein there will be tranquillity from your Lord" cannot apply to an ark; for, far from granting peace and tranquillity to others, the ark spoken of by the Bible could neither protect the Israelites against defeat nor could it protect itself, as it was carried away by the enemy. Even Saul who took with him the ark during his campaigns suffered crushing defeats, so much so that even the enemy pitied him and he met with an ignominious end. Such an ark could not be a source of tranquillity to the Israelites. What God bestowed upon them were hearts full of courage and perseverance, so that after the said tranquillity descended upon them, they successfully resisted the attacks of the enemy and inflicted heavy defeats on them.

309. Another favour which God conferred on the Israelites is referred to in the word "legacy." God imbued their hearts with the noble qualities, which characterised their ancestors, the descendants of Moses and Aaron. The legacy left by the descendants of Moses and Aaron did not consist in any material things but meant the good moral qualities with which they were endowed as the heritage of their great ancestors.

250. And when Ṭālūt set out with the forces, he said: 'Surely, Allāh will try you with a river. So he who drinks therefrom is not of me; and he who tastes it not is assuredly of me, save him who takes only a handful[310] of water with his hand.' But they drank of it, except a few of them. And when they crossed it—he and those who believed along with him—they said, 'We have no power today against Jālūt[310A] and his forces.' But those, who knew for certain that they would one day meet Allāh said, [a]'How many a small party has triumphed over a

310. The exception of a handful of water was made with a twofold purpose: (1) To afford the marching force some essential physical relief by permitting them to moisten their parched throats, but at the same time to prevent them from drinking freely, which would have damped their spirits and made them negligent of the enemy; (2) To make the trial all the more tantalizing, for in many cases it is easier for a person to withhold himself from a thing altogether than to use it in a strictly limited measure. See Judg. 7:5, 6. The word Nahar also means "plenty." In this sense of the word the verse signifies that they would be tried by "plenty;" those who succumbed to its temptations would no longer be fit to carry on God's work, but those who used it with restraint would achieve success.

310A. Jālūt is an attributive name meaning, a person or a people who are unruly and go about attacking and assaulting others. In the Bible the parallel name is Goliath (I Sam. 17:4) which means, "running, ravaging and destroying spirits," or "a leader" or "a giant" (Enc. Bib.; Jew. Enc.). The Bible uses the name about one individual but really the word signifies a party of ruthless freebooters, though it may also be applied to certain individuals symbolizing the characteristics of the party. The Qur'ān appears to have used it in both these senses in the verses under comment.

large party by Allāh's command! And Allāh is with the steadfast.'

وَلَمَّا بَرَزُوْا لِجَالُوْتَ وَجُنُوْدِهٖ قَالُوْا رَبَّنَآ اَفْرِغْ عَلَيْنَا صَبْرًا وَّ ثَبِّتْ اَقْدَامَنَا وَانْصُرْنَا عَلَى الْقَوْمِ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿۲۵۱﴾

251. And when they issued forth to encounter Jālūt[311] and his forces, they said, 'O our Lord, [a]pour forth steadfastness upon us, and make our steps firm, and [b]help us against the disbelieving people.'

فَهَزَمُوْهُمْ بِاِذْنِ اللّٰهِ ۙ وَقَتَلَ دَاوٗدُ جَالُوْتَ وَاٰتٰىهُ اللّٰهُ الْمُلْكَ وَالْحِكْمَةَ وَعَلَّمَهٗ مِمَّا يَشَآءُ ؕ وَلَوْلَا دَفْعُ اللّٰهِ النَّاسَ بَعْضَهُمْ بِبَعْضٍ ۙ لَّفَسَدَتِ الْاَرْضُ وَلٰكِنَّ اللّٰهَ ذُوْ فَضْلٍ عَلَى الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ﴿۲۵۲﴾

252. So they routed[312] them by the command of Allāh; and David slew Jālūt, and Allāh gave him sovereignty and wisdom, and taught him of what He pleased. And [c]had not Allāh repelled some men by others, the earth would indeed be full of mischief.[313] But Allāh is Lord of grace to all peoples.

311 Jālūt spoken of in this verse does not signify a person but a people, while the word "forces" points to the helpers and associates of these people. The Bible refers to Jālūt under the name of Midianites who pillaged and harassed the Israelites and destroyed their land for several years (Judg. 6:1-6). The Amalekites and all the eastern tribes assisted the Midianites in their raids (Judg. 6:3) and formed "the forces" referred to in the verse.

312. Ṭālūt or Gideon was able to defeat Jālūt or the Midianites but their overwhelming defeat to which the verse refers as the killing of Jālūt came in the time of David about two hundred years afterwards. The Bible speaks of the man defeated by David as Goliath (1 Sam. 17:4), which is similar to Jālūt. Probably, the attributive name given by the Qur'ān to the people was also borne by their leader in the time of David.

313. These words give in a nutshell the whole philosophy of all wars of truth and justice. War should be resorted to only as a means of checking disorder and restoring peace and not for creating disorder and breaking peace and depriving weak nations of freedom.

The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that Adam was a Mukallam Prophet (Musnad).

318. Kursiyy means, a throne, a chair, buttress of a wall; knowledge; dominion and power (Aqrab); Karāsī is plural, meaning, men of learning. 319. The injunction (embodied in the preceding verses) to make special sacrifices in the cause of religion and to fight the enemies of Islām was likely to give rise to the misunderstanding that Allāh desired Muslims to use force for propagating their religion. This verse removes that misunderstanding and not only forbids Muslims in most emphatic words to use force for converting non-Muslims to Islām, but also gives reasons why force should not be used for this purpose. It is because truth stands out distinct from error, so there has remained no justification for using force. Islām is manifest Truth.

320. Ṭāghūt is one who exceeds proper bounds; the Devil; such persons as turn others from the right path; all idols. The word is used both as singular and plural (2:258 & 4:61).

321 Abraham was a great iconoclast. His people worshipped the sun and the stars, their chief god being Merodach (Madruk), originally the god of the morning and the spring sun (Enc. Bib. & Enc. Rel. Eth.ii.p.296). They believed that all life depended on the sun. Abraham very wisely asked the infidel that if he, as he claimed, controlled life and death, then let him reverse the course of the sun on which all life depended. He was in a fix. He could not say that he could not accept Abraham's challenge to bring the sun from the West to the East, for that would have demolished his claim of being the controller of life and death, and if he had said that he could do so, it meant that he claimed to exercise control over the sun which would have been a great blasphemy in the eyes of his people who worshipped the sun. Thus he was completely confounded and did not know what to say.

322. The ruined town referred to in the verse is Jerusalem which was laid waste by Nebuchadnezzar, the King of Babylon in 599 B.C. Ezekiel, the Prophet, was among the Jews whom Nebuchadnezzar carried away into captivity to Babylon and who was made to pass by, and witness the ghastly sight of, the devastated town.

323. Ezekiel was naturally shocked at the sad sight and prayed to God in remained in this state?' He answered, 'I have remained a day or part of a day.'[323A] Allāh said, 'It is so but[323B] thou hast also remained in this state for a hundred years.[324] words full of extreme pathos as to when the ruined town would be restored to life. His prayer was heard and he was made to see a vision that the restoration prayed for would take place in a hundred years. The verse does not mean that Ezekiel remained actually dead for a hundred years. Only he saw a vision that he had died and had remained dead for a hundred years and then had come back to life. The Qur'ān sometimes mentions scenes seen in a vision as having actually taken place without stating that they were witnessed in a vision or dream (12:5). The vision signified, and Ezekiel understood the significance, that the Children of Israel would remain in the state of captivity and complete national degradation for about a hundred years after which they would receive a new life and would come back to their sacred city. And it actually came to pass as Ezekiel had dreamt. Jerusalem was taken by Nebuchadnezzar in 599 B.C. (2 Kings 24:10). Ezekiel probably saw the vision in 586 B.C. The city was rebuilt about a century after its destruction. Its building started in 537 B.C. by the permission and help of Cyrus, the King of Persia and Midia, and was completed in 515 B.C. It took the Israelites another fifteen years to settle in it and thus virtually a century passed between the destruction of Jerusalem and its restoration to life. It is puerile to think that God actually caused Ezekiel to die and that he remained dead for a hundred years and was then brought back to life; for that would not have been an answer to his prayer, which did not pertain to the death and resurrection of any individual but to that of a town representing a whole people.

323A. The words are intended to express indefiniteness of time (18:20 & 23:114) and mean, according to the Quranic usage, that Ezekiel did not know how long he had remained in that state. Yaum here does not mean a day of 24 hours but time absolutely (see 1:4). The words, I have remained a day or part of a day, may also refer to the time for which Ezekiel slept or the time he took in seeing the vision. Apparently Ezekiel thought that he was being asked about the duration of the time of the vision.

323B. Bal is a particle of digression signifying (a) the cancellation of what precedes as in 21:27, or (b) transition from one object of discourse to another as in 87:17. Here bal has been used in the latter sense.

324. The clause, It is so but thou hast also remained in this state for a hundred years, points out that although in one sense Ezekiel had remained in that state for a hundred years (for he had dreamt that he had been dead for a hundred years), yet the statement that he had tarried for a day or part of a day was also correct, for the actual time spent in seeing the vision was naturally very short.

325. To bring home this fact to the mind of Ezekiel, God directed his attention to his food and drink and his ass. That his food and drink had not rotted and his ass was still alive showed that he had really tarried only for a day or part of it. The words, look at thy ass, also indicate that Ezekiel saw the vision while sleeping in the fields with his ass by his side, for while in captivity, the Israelites were made to work in the fields as farmers.

326. Ezekiel represented in his person the whole Jewish nation. His symbolic death for a hundred years represented their national degradation and sorrows in captivity, for that was the period after which they came to their own. This is how Ezekiel became a Sign. See also Ezekiel, chap. 37.

327. The difference between Īmān (belief) and Iṭmīnān (the heart being at ease) is that in the former state one simply believes that God can do a thing, while in the latter one receives the assurance that the thing would be done in his case also. Abraham did indeed believe that God could bring the dead to life, but what he desired was his personal satisfaction of knowing that God would do so in the case of his own posterity as well. Referring to the verse under comment, the Holy Prophet is reported to have said, "We are more deserving of entertaining Shak (doubt) than Abraham" (Muslim), the word Shak signifying an intense hidden desire anxiously awaiting fulfilment; for the Holy Prophet never entertained any doubt about any of God's promises or doings. This shows that Abraham's question was not prompted by doubt but simply by an anxious desire.

328. Ṣurtul-Ghuṣna Ilayya means, I inclined the branch towards myself (Lane). The preposition ilā determines the significance of the word Ṣurhunna in the sense of inclining or attaching and not cutting.

329. Juz' means, a part or portion or division of a thing. Thus, if a thing consists of or comprises a group, the word "part" or "division" would signify each member of it.

This is a vision of Abraham. In "taking four birds" the implication was that his posterity would rise and fall four times, which phenomenon was to be witnessed twice among the Israelites, and to be repeated twice among the followers of the Holy Prophet of Islām who was descended from Abraham through Ishmael. The power of the Jews, the progeny of Abraham through Isaac, was crushed twice, first by Nebuchadnezzar and then by Titus (17:5-8; Enc. Brit. under Jews); and each time God raised them after their fall, the second revival having been brought about by Constantine, the Roman Emperor who accepted Christianity. Similarly, the power of Islām, was first rudely shaken when Baghdad fell to the Tartar hordes, but soon it recovered from the crushing blow. The victors became the vanquished and the grandson of Halaku, the despoiler of Baghdad, was converted to Islām. The second fall came later when there was a general and wholesale decline of Muslims both in the spiritual and the political field. The second renaissance of Islām is being brought about by the Promised Messiah.

330. In the foregoing verses, it was pointed out that it is a Divine law that God gives new life to deserving nations after they become dead, and the case of the Israelites was mentioned as an instance. It was further indicated that the progeny of Abraham would rise four times, the Israelites and the Ishmaelites each rising twice. In order to prepare Muslims for the promised rise, God reverts to the means of national progress and exhorts the Faithful to spend freely in the cause of God, 331 Every good act may be abused, and the abuse of spending in the cause of Allāh is to follow it with Mann (boastfully speaking of one's good act) and Adhā (following it up with injury). Those, who spend their wealth in the cause of Allāh, are prohibited from making unnecessary and misplaced mention of the money they spend and the services they render to the cause of Truth, for, doing so would amount to Mann (taunt). Similarly, they are enjoined not to demand anything in return for their contributions.

332. It is better that one should say a kind word of sympathy or of excuse to the person who asks for help than that he should first help him and then follow it up with injury; or that he should try to cover and conceal the want of the person who comes to him for help and refrain from talking about it to others so that he may not feel humbled and humiliated, that being the significance of Maghfirat.

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا لَا تُبْطِلُوْا صَدَقٰتِكُمْ
بِالْمَنِّ وَالْاَذٰى ۙ كَالَّذِيْ يُنْفِقُ مَالَهٗ رِئَآءَ
النَّاسِ وَلَا يُؤْمِنُ بِاللّٰهِ وَالْيَوْمِ الْاٰخِرِ ؕ
فَمَثَلُهٗ كَمَثَلِ صَفْوَانٍ عَلَيْهِ تُرَابٌ
فَاَصَابَهٗ وَابِلٌ فَتَرَكَهٗ صَلْدًا ؕ
لَا يَقْدِرُوْنَ عَلٰى شَيْءٍ مِّمَّا كَسَبُوْا ؕ
وَاللّٰهُ لَا يَهْدِي الْقَوْمَ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿۲۶۵﴾

265. O ye who believe! [a]render not vain your alms by reproach and injury like him [b]who spends his wealth to be seen[333] of men, and he believes not in Allāh and the Last Day. His case is like the case of a smooth rock covered with earth, on which heavy rain falls, leaving it bare and hard. [c]They shall not secure aught of what they earn. And Allāh guides not the disbelieving people.

وَمَثَلُ الَّذِيْنَ يُنْفِقُوْنَ اَمْوَالَهُمُ ابْتِغَآءَ
مَرْضَاتِ اللّٰهِ وَتَثْبِيْتًا مِّنْ اَنْفُسِهِمْ
كَمَثَلِ جَنَّةٍۭ بِرَبْوَةٍ اَصَابَهَا وَابِلٌ فَاٰتَتْ
اُكُلَهَا ضِعْفَيْنِ ۚ فَاِنْ لَّمْ يُصِبْهَا وَابِلٌ
فَطَلٌّ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُوْنَ بَصِيْرٌ ﴿۲۶۶﴾

266. And the case of those who spend their wealth to seek the pleasure of Allāh and to strengthen[334] their souls is like the case of a garden on elevated[335] ground. Heavy rain falls on it so that it [d]brings forth its fruit twofold. And if heavy rain does not fall on it, then light rain suffices. And Allāh sees what you do.

[a]See 2:263. [b]4:39; 8:48. [c]14:19. [d]See 2:262.

333. Elsewhere, Muslims have also been enjoined to spend their wealth openly (2:275); the object underlying being that other Muslims may be induced to follow their good example. But he who has no faith in God expends his money openly solely to win public approbation. Such a one loses all title to any reward from God.

334. Spending money in the cause of Allāh strengthens the soul of a person because by spending his hard-earned wealth he voluntarily imposes a burden on himself which makes him firmer and more steadfast in faith.

335. The hearts of believers who spend freely in the cause of God are like an elevated piece of ground to which heavy rain, which sometimes proves harmful for low-lying tracts, can do no harm. On the other hand, it is benefitted by rain, whether it is heavy or light.

267. Would any of you desire that there should be for him a garden of palm trees and vines with streams flowing beneath it, and with all kinds of fruit for him therein—while old age has stricken him and he has weak offspring—and that a fiery whirlwind should smite it and it be all burnt?[336] Thus does Allāh make His Signs clear to you that you may reflect.

269. [a]Satan threatens you with poverty[338] and enjoins upon

[a]2:170; 24:22.

336. By means of this similitude the believer is warned that, if he spends his property for show, or follows up his charity with reproaches and injury, all that he has spent will be wasted.

337. The verse implies that believers should spend in the cause of God what is good and pure; for even a lawfully earned property might include things that are bad. Old and used things may be given to the poor, but worn out articles of use alone should not be singled out for that purpose.

338. Faqara means, he bored a hole into a pearl; Faqura means, he became poor and needy and Faqira means, he had a complaint of his vertebrae. Thus Faqr means, poverty; want or need which breaks the back of the poor man;

بِالْفَحْشَآءِ ۚ وَاللّٰهُ يَعِدُكُمْ مَّغْفِرَةً مِّنْهُ وَفَضْلًا ؕ وَاللّٰهُ وَاسِعٌ عَلِيْمٌ ﴿۲۶۹﴾

اِنْ تُبْدُوا الصَّدَقٰتِ فَنِعِمَّا هِيَ ۚ وَاِنْ تُخْفُوْهَا وَتُؤْتُوْهَا الْفُقَرَآءَ فَهُوَ خَيْرٌ

272. If you give [c]alms openly, it is well and good; but if you hide them and give them to the poor, it is better[342] for you, and care or anxiety or disquietude of mind (Lane).

339. The verse removes the satanic misgiving that spending liberally in the cause of God may render one poor; on the contrary it emphatically declares that if wealthy people do not spend freely in good causes, the result would be national Faqr, i.e. the country would suffer economically and decline morally because, if the economic needs of the less fortunate members of the community are not adequately met, they are tempted to resort to Faḥshā' (foul and immoral means) to earn their livelihood.

340. The verse means that the injunction, regarding spending wealth in charity which is the secret of national progress and prosperity, is based on wisdom.

341. There is a tradition to the effect that the Holy Prophet did not approve of making conditional vows for the performance of non-obligatory acts of goodness; but if a man does so, fulfilment of the vow becomes obligatory.

342. Islām has most wisely recommended both forms of giving alms, open and secret. By giving alms openly a man sets a good example to others which they may imitate. Secret almsgiving in some cases is better, because then one

273. [b]It is not thy responsibility to make them follow the right path; but Allāh guides whomsoever He pleases. And whatever of wealth[344] you spend, the benefit of it will be for yourselves, for, you spend not but to seek the favour of Allāh.[345] And whatever of wealth you spend, [c]it shall be paid back to you in full and you shall not be wronged.

274. Alms are for the poor who are detained[346] in the way of Allāh and are unable to refrains from exposing the poverty of his less fortunate brethren, and there is also little occasion for feeling proud in giving secretly.

343. The particle min either may have been used for the sake of emphasis, or in the sense of "many" or "some."

344. The use of the word Khair, which also means, anything and everything good (Lane), enlarges the scope of charity and does not confine it to the spending of money alone. The word includes the doing of good in any shape or form.

345. These words constitute a great testimonial to the inherent goodness of the Companions of the Holy Prophet. It signifies that they needed no commandment to spend their wealth in Allāh's way. They were already doing it out of an instinctive desire to win His pleasure.

346. Circumstances sometimes compel people to remain confined to a place where they are unable to earn their living. Such persons particularly deserve help from the better off members of the community. Two kinds of people particularly fall under this category; (a) Those who voluntarily remain attached to a Man of God, never quitting his company in order to benefit spiritually from it. (b) Those, who being confined to hostile environments, are deprived of necessities of life.

move about in the land. The ignorant man imagines them to be free from want because of their abstaining from begging. [a]Thou shalt know them by their appearance;[347] they do not beg of men with importunity.[348] And whatever of wealth[348A] you spend, surely, Allāh has perfect knowledge thereof.[349]

[a]48:30. [b]13:23; 14:32; 16:76; 35:30. [c]3:131; 30:40.

347. Sīmā means, a distinguishing sign or mark, or general appearance serving as such (Aqrab).

348. The verse incidentally praises those self-respecting persons who abstain from begging and implies the impropriety of begging, as the words, Ta'affuf (abstaining from an improper or unlawful thing) and Ilḥāf (with importunity) indicate. The Holy Prophet has condemned begging.

348A. Khair means, wealth; abundant wealth; wealth honestly earned (Mufradāt).

349. There are two categories of charity—obligatory Zakāt and supererogatory (Ṣadaqah). Zakāt is collected by the State from every Muslim possessing a certain amount of money or property and is spent by the State on the poor, the needy, and on orphans, widows and wayfarers, etc.; the recipients not knowing the real source of charity are beholden to no individual. Zakāt is a State cheque and not charity. Ṣadaqah is voluntary and is given to individuals out of a desire to help them. It engenders feelings of sympathy among the well-to-do towards their poor brethren and feelings of gratefulness among the poor for their benefactors. It also serves to distinguish sincere believers from the insincere.

350. Ribā literally meaning, an excess or addition, signifies an addition

كَمَا يَقُوْمُ الَّذِىْ يَتَخَبَّطُهُ الشَّيْطٰنُ مِنَ
الْمَسِّ ؕ ذٰلِكَ بِاَنَّهُمْ قَالُوْٓا اِنَّمَا الْبَيْعُ مِثْلُ as rises one whom Satan has smitten with insanity.[351] That is because they say, 'Trade also is like interest;' whereas Allāh has made trade lawful and made interest unlawful. So he to whom an admonition comes from his Lord and he over and above the principal sum (Lane). It covers both usury and interest. According to the Ḥadīth "every loan advanced to draw profits" comes under this definition. The connotation of Ribā is not strictly identical with "interest," as commonly understood. But for lack of a better word "interest" may be used as a rough equivalent. In fact, any sum stipulated to be received or given over and above what one advances or receives as a loan is "interest," whether the dealing is with an individual or a bank or a society or a post office or any other organisation. "Interest" is not confined to money. It extends to any commodity which is given as a loan with the condition that it will be returned with an agreed excess.

351. The words signify that just as a mad man is heedless of the consequences of his actions, so are the moneylenders heartlessly oblivious of the moral and economic injury they do to individuals, the society and even the world at large. Ribā also causes a touch of insanity in the moneylender in the sense that his entire engrossment in profit-making renders him insensible to all good causes. Ribā is prohibited in Islām because it tends to draw wealth into the hands of a small circle and thereby adversely affects its equitable distribution. It promotes idleness in the moneylenders and kills in them all incentive to help others and chokes all springs of sympathetic behaviour. The moneylender takes advantage of, and makes profit from, the need and distress of others. While on the one hand Ribā causes the lender to exploit other people's wants, it creates in the debtor a tendency to do things carelessly and in haste, incurring debt regardless of his capacity to pay back, thus doing irreparable moral injury to himself and the lender. Ribā also leads to war. No prolonged war is possible without the help of loans, interest on which eventually leads to the economic ruin of both the victors and the vanquished. The system of easy loans makes it possible for governments to carry on destructive struggles as they can obtain sinews of war without having resort to direct taxation. Islām has prohibited all kinds of interest. In modern times business has become so inseparably linked with interest that it appears well-nigh impossible to avoid it altogether. But if a change of system and of surroundings and circumstances were brought about, business without interest could be carried on, as was the case in the days when Islām was in the ascendance.

And let a scribe write it in your presence faithfully; and no scribe should refuse to write, because [b]Allāh has taught him, so let him write and let him who incurs the liability dictate,[354] and he should fear Allāh, his Lord, and not diminish anything therefrom. But if the person

353. Islām urges the giving of loans but they should be beneficent loans, without interest. If the debtor finds himself in straitened circumstances when the time for the repayment of a loan arrives, he should be granted respite till he finds himself in easier circumstances.

354. The borrower, and not the lender, is to dictate because; (1) it is the borrower who incurs the liability; and justice demands that the words defining the liability should be selected by him; (2) the document is to be deposited with the lender and not the borrower. So the borrower has been asked to dictate so that the fact of his having dictated may serve as a proof of the correctness of the amount and the conditions about payment, and he may have no cause or ground to deny it.

This form of practical transaction will be in the nature of an Amānah, i.e. a trust or deposit affecting both parties. By identifying a loan with a trust it is hinted that loans should be returned with the same care and honesty with which property deposited as a trust is returned on demand.

356. The word bihī signifies; (a) by means of or on the basis of; (b) for or because of; and the clause would mean, "Allāh will call you to account for it or because of it," i.e. no human thought or action will go unaccounted for, however hidden it may be, and that it will be punished or pardoned as Allāh may will.

[a]See 2:137. [b]3:148, 194; 60:6. [c]See 2:234.

357. The expression, "the will or pleasure of God," rather denotes the existence of a natural law (7:157). But as in the case of Allāh it is His Will which stands for His Law, therefore the Qur'ān has used this expression to point out (1) that God is the final authority in the universe; and (2) that His Will is the Law, and (3) that His Will manifests itself in a just and benevolent manner, for He is the Possessor of perfect attributes (17:111).

358. Good deeds are indeed the principal means for the attainment of spiritual purification, but they have their origin in the purity of the heart, which can be attained only by holding right beliefs. Hence the verse details the fundamental beliefs, which the Qur'ān has taught, i.e. belief in God and His angels, His Books and His Messengers, in their natural order.

359. The clause constitutes a powerful refutation of the doctrine of Atonement. It embodies two important principles: (1) That the commandments of God are always given with due regard for man's capacities and his natural limitations. (2) That moral purification in this world does not necessarily signify complete freedom from all kinds of failings and shortcomings. All that man is expected to do is sincerely to strive for good and avoid sin to the best of his power, and the rest will be forgiven him by the Merciful God. So no Atonement is needed.

and it shall get the punishment it incurs.[360] Our Lord, do not punish us, if we forget or fall into error,[361] and our Lord, lay not on us a responsibility[362] as Thou didst lay upon those before us. Our Lord, burden us not with what we have not the strength to bear; and efface our sins and grant us forgiveness and have mercy on us; Thou art our Master; [a]so help us against the disbelieving people.

360. The word Kasaba generally denotes the doing of good deeds and Iktasaba the doing of evil deeds. Both words are from the same root but the latter denotes greater exertion on the part of the doer. A man will be rewarded for good deeds even if they are done casually and without conscious effort, while he will be punished for his evil deeds only if they are committed deliberately and with conscious effort.

361. In ordinary circumstances, Nisyān and Khaṭī'ah are not punishable for they lack intention or motive which are necessary for awarding punishment. But here the words denote forgetfulness and error which can be avoided if due care is taken.

362. Iṣr means, (1) a burden which restrains one from motion; (2) a heavy responsibility the breaking of which renders one deserving of punishment; (3) a sin or an offence; and (4) grievous punishment of a sin. The expression 'lay not on us a responsibility as Thou didst lay upon those before us,' does not mean that the burden to be laid upon us should be lighter than that which was laid upon those before us. The meaning is that we may be safeguarded against breaking Thy covenant and thus may be saved from incurring a heavy responsibility for disobedience as was incurred by those before us. This is a collective prayer for the preservation and protection of Islām and the safeguarding of Muslims against incurring the displeasure of God.

ĀL-E-'IMRĀN
(Revealed after Hijrah)

Connection with the Preceding Sūrah

There exists such a deep and far-reaching connection between this Sūrah and the preceding one, Al-Baqarah, that the two are called Az-Zahrāwān (The Two Bright Ones). Whereas Al-Baqarah deals with the wrong beliefs and evil practices of the Jews with whom began the Mosaic Dispensation, the present Sūrah deals mainly with the wrong doctrines and dogmas of Christianity which subject constitutes its culmination. The Sūrah is named Āl-e-'Imrān (The Family of 'Imrān). 'Imrān or 'Amrān was the father of Moses and Aaron, the progenitors of the family from which sprang Mary, the mother of Jesus, brief account of whose life and mission is given in this Sūrah. Being closely connected with Al-Baqarah, the Sūrah may be safely supposed to have been revealed immediately after it. A detailed mention of the Battle of Uḥud places its revelation in the third year of the Hijrah.

Āl-e-'Imrān has a twofold connection with Al-Baqarah. First, there subsists a strong and deep link between the subject-matter of the whole of this Sūrah and that of the whole of Sūrah Al-Baqarah, and another link equally strong between the concluding portion of Al-Baqarah and the opening verses of this Sūrah. In fact, the order in the Qur'ān is of two kinds. Either, the topic with which one Chapter is concluded is continued in the following Chapter, or the whole of the subject matter of the preceding Chapter is referred to in the next. This twofold connection also exists between Al-Baqarah and Āl-e-'Imrān. The connection of the whole subject-matter of Āl-e-'Imrān with that of Al-Baqarah mainly consists in a description of the causes that led to the transfer of Prophethood from the Mosaic to the Islamic Dispensation. This was the main theme of Al-Baqarah, and in explanation of it the degenerate condition of the Jews was dealt with at some length in that Sūrah. But in Al-Baqarah very little light was shed on Christianity, in which culminated the Mosaic Dispensation. This omission could have given rise to the seemingly legitimate doubt that though Judaism which constituted the beginning of the Mosaic Dispensation had become corrupt, its culmination, the Christian Faith, was still pure; and hence, apparently there was no necessity of introducing and establishing a new religion—Islām. To remove this doubt, the hollowness of the Christian dogmas has been exposed in the present Sūrah.

Title

The Sūrah is known by several names in the Ḥadīth, i.e. Az-Zahrā' (The Bright One), Al-Amān (The Peace), Al-Kanz (The Treasure), Al-Mu'īnah (The Helper), Al-Mujādalah (The Pleading), Al-Istighfār (The Seeking of Forgiveness) and Aṭ-Ṭayyibah (The Pure).

As the falsity of Christian doctrines is sought to be established in this Chapter it rightly opens with the hint that as Christianity had become corrupt and degenerate, it could not prove a bar to the introduction of a new and better dispensation. On the contrary, Christianity itself constituted a strong testimony to the need for the introduction of a new Law. Consequently, the Divine attributes the Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining have been placed in the very beginning of this Sūrah to repudiate the Christian basic doctrines. The other connection between the two Sūrahs, viz. that of the concluding portion of Al-Baqarah with the opening words of this Sūrah is apparent from the fact that Al-Baqarah had concluded with a prayer for national regeneration and reformation of Muslims and the triumph of Islām over its enemies, and the Divine attributes—the Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining have been placed in the beginning of the present Sūrah to assure Muslims that God will certainly come to their aid because He being the Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining, His power knows no weakening or diminution.

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah, like the preceding one, opens with the abbreviated letters, Alif Lām Mīm, (I am Allāh, the All-Knowing), which are intended to draw attention to the Divine attribute of knowledge; and, mention of the attributes, the Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining is meant to point out that in this Sūrah the Divine attribute of knowledge has been substantiated by God's attributes, the Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining, i.e. the fact that God is Living, Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining constitutes proof of His being All-Knowing, because death and decay are the result of lack of knowledge. The Sūrah proceeds to say that, as Jews and Christians have strayed away from the right path, Divine punishment will overtake them, and their being the followers of Torah and the Gospels will not save them from God's punishment, because these Books have been abrogated and, therefore, are unable to satisfy human needs and requirements. After this it tells Muslims to banish all doubt or misgiving from their minds that, in view of the numerical superiority of Jews and Christians and the preponderance of the material means at their disposal, they would not prevail against the latter, because God had already granted them predominance over their more powerful enemies, the Quraish and other infidel tribes of Arabia. The same phenomenon will be repeated now. Moreover, national victories do not result solely from the preponderance of material means but primarily and very largely from the superiority of national morals. And final victory will come to Muslims because, though they lack material means, they are in possession of ample moral and spiritual means and because also they follow a true religion.

Next, the Sūrah proceeds to disabuse the minds of the enemies of Islām of the fondly-held illusion that their national usages and customs are superior to those of Muslims. Further, they are told that by holding wrong beliefs and resorting to evil practices they appear to ignore the law of cause and effect, which cannot be flouted with impunity. The Sūrah then develops the subject that the path to progress and prosperity for Muslims does not lie in imitating other peoples' ways and manners but in strictly following Islām and the Holy Prophet. After this a clear and detailed exposition of the real subject is taken in hand with a brief reference to the beginnings of Christianity, refutation of which is one of its main themes. Then attention of the People of the Book is drawn to the fact that when Muslims also believe in the truth of the Divine origin and source of their Faith, why should they fritter away their energies and resources in fighting with them; instead both should combine to preach to infidels the doctrine of the Oneness of God, on which they agree, and should keep within proper bounds their respective doctrinal differences. The Christians, then, are particularly warned that they cannot hope to continue to be the "Chosen Ones" of God and retain His grace and love if they refuse to accept the new Faith; they are asked how, after having already subscribed to the doctrine that Truth has always been revealed by God from time to time, can they with justification defy this principle? It is further stated that matters regarding which the People of the Book dispute and quarrel with Muslims are not of much weight, because originally some of them were regarded as permissible by their own forefathers. The subject is further developed that Muslims and Jews have a meeting-point in Abraham, and since it was Abraham who laid the foundations of the Ka'bah, why should the Israelites quarrel with Muslims on the basis of fancied and insubstantial differences? Then a note of warning is sounded to Muslims that the People of the Book have gone so far in opposition to them that, if the latter had their way, they would certainly lead them astray. But Muslims will not go astray because they are the recipients of God's favour. They will meet strong opposition and persecution from them which they should endure with steadfastness and should try to strengthen their connection with God and establish their mutual relations on a firmer basis because they will soon need to develop a united front when confronted with a severe attack from Christians. Before that time comes they should add to their numbers by conveying the Message of Islām to as many people as they possibly can. They are further warned against harbouring the delusion that, in the event of their fight with Christians, the Jews would help them. On the contrary, the latter would spare no pains to harass and oppress them. In spite of this warning against the Jews the Sūrah does not fail to recognize the good wherever it is found and says that all the People of the Book are not bad. There are also good people among them, but only those, who entertain bad designs against Islām, will come to grief. It is these with whom the Muslims should eschew all friendly contact to avoid being influenced by the latter's undesirable morals.

Then a brief reference is made to the Battle of Badr. The Muslims are told that, just as in extremely adverse circumstances God protected and helped them against very heavy odds in that encounter and vouchsafed to them a clear victory over the idolaters of Mecca, the same will happen with regard to the People of the Book; God's mercy and grace will accompany them in opposition to the latter. The People of the Book depend for their power and material might on transactions based on interest. But the taking and giving of interest runs counter to good morals. By taking interest they oppress God's servants and by subscribing to the doctrine of Atonement and the dogma of the non-acceptance of repentance they declare God to be cruel like themselves. The believers are further enjoined to do their duty, make suitable sacrifices and employ properly the material means at their disposal, leaving the rest to God for the success of their life's mission. The Sūrah then enunciates a very sound principle, viz. that the Holy Prophet is but a Divine Messenger; if he should die or be killed in a battle (though in conformity with Divine promise this would never happen), Muslims should not lose heart and should entertain no doubt about the truth of Islām because Islām relies for its success and prosperity on no individual however exalted. Another rule of conduct to be observed in time of war is that the leaders of Muslims should behave with greater leniency than in ordinary times towards other Muslims and should have proper regard for their susceptibilities, so that the enemy may not get an opportunity to create discord and dissension among them. It is further enjoined that at such time all matters should be decided after mutual consultation. Then, Muslims are reminded of the great good God has done to them in that He has raised for them a great Messenger. They should follow him and eschew the path of the disturbers of peace. The Sūrah lays down the principle, viz. that those, who die while fighting for the cause of Truth, are entitled to special respect. By their death they receive eternal life and inspire their community, as it were, with a new life. Again, reference is made to the People of the Book saying that morally they have become so depraved that, while, on the one hand, they claim to be God's "Own Chosen People," on the other, they hesitate to spend their money in His way. Muslims are enjoined to take a lesson from this. The moral depravity of these people is further contrasted with their claim that they are commanded to give their allegiance only to that Messenger who should demand the greatest sacrifice of them. The Sūrah says that such Messengers did appear among them, but they refused to accept them. Next, the theme of sacrifice is developed and believers are told that it would be foolish on their part to be afraid of making sacrifices for national cause. They are then warned that their faith will be put to a severe test. They should not think that they will achieve success without passing through fire and blood. In the next few verses some special qualities and characteristics of true believers are mentioned and they are taught certain prayers which are essential for national progress and prosperity. The Sūrah concludes with the rules of conduct by observing which Muslims can achieve success and predominance in this life and the pleasure of God in the next.

363. The verse contains a strong refutation of the false doctrine of the divinity of Jesus. This doctrine being one of the principal topics dealt with in this Sūrah, the opening verses thereof fittingly refer to such attributes of God as cut at the very root of this doctrine. These attributes, i.e. the Ever-Living, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining, prove, on the one hand, that God, the Possessor of these attributes, should need no partner or helper; and on the other that Jesus, who was subject to the law of birth and death, and therefore was neither ever-living, nor self-subsisting and all-sustaining, could not be God. These attributes also prove the hollowness of the doctrine of Atonement which is a corollary to the above doctrine. Jesus, it is claimed by Christians, suffered death to atone for the sins of mankind. If that is so, he could not be God, for God is Ever-Living and cannot suffer death, permanent or temporary. It is futile to say that the death of Jesus meant only the separation of the god-Jesus from his physical habitat. The connection between the god-Jesus and his physical body was, according to Christian belief, in its very nature a temporary one and was bound to break one day, even if Jesus had not died on the Cross. So the mere breaking up of this connection could serve no useful purpose. It must be some other death which brought redemption to his sinful followers. That death, according to the Christians themselves, came upon Jesus when after his crucifixion he descended into Hades or Hell (Acts 2:31). Thus, far from being immune from death, which is God's exclusive prerogative, Jesus suffered death both in its literal and figurative sense. Similarly, the attributes, the Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining prove the falsity of the Christian doctrine. God, being Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining, should not only live by Himself without the support of any other being but all other beings should receive support from Him. But Jesus did not possess these attributes. Like other mortals, he was born of a woman, lived on food and drink, suffered pain and distress, asked others to pray for the alleviation of his sufferings, and finally, as Christians say, died on the Cross. The New Testament bears ample testimony to all these facts. But God being Ever-Living, Self-Subsisting and All-Sustaining is above all these physical weaknesses.

364. Ḥaqqa means, it was or became just, proper, right, true, authentic, genuine, substantial or real; or it was or became an established or confirmed fact; or it was or became binding, incumbent or due (Lane). The expression Bil-Ḥaqq signifies, (1) that the Qur'ān comprises teachings which are based on eternal truths and are incapable of being successfully assailed; (2) that its first recipients are the people best suited to receive it; (3) that it has come in the fulness of time and fulfils all true human needs; (4) that it has come to stay and no effort on the part of its opponents can destroy or tamper with it.

365. The word, Taurāt, is derived from Warā which means, he burnt; he concealed (Aqrab). Taurāt is so called probably because in its pristine purity reading it and acting upon its teaching kindled in the heart of men the fire of Divine love. Possibly, the word also contains a hint that bright prophecies about the advent of the last Law-giving Prophet lie hidden in the Book. Taurāt is the name applied to the five books of Moses: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. The name is also sometimes applied to the Ten Commandments.

366. Injīl, which means, good news, is, according to Aqrab, a Greek word (un-derived from any Arabic root) from which the English word "Evangel" is derived. The Gospels were so called because they contained not only "good news" for those who accepted Jesus but also because they contained prophecies about the advent of the greatest Prophet whose coming Jesus had described as the coming of the Lord Himself (Matt. 21:40). The word does not refer to the present four Gospels which were written by the followers of Jesus long after his crucifixion and which give merely an account of his life and teachings, but to the actual revelation received by Jesus.

367. Al-Furqān may refer to the Qur'ān or to the heavenly signs those who deny the Signs of Allāh shall have a severe punishment. And [a]Allāh is Mighty, Lord of retribution.

vouchsafed to the Holy Prophet which establish his truth.

368. As development of the child takes place in the womb of the mother, the offspring naturally is affected by her physical and moral condition. So Jesus, whose body like that of all other human beings was formed in the womb of a woman, could not escape being affected by the limitations and failings inherent in woman. This is why, in his discussion with the Christians of Najrān, the Holy Prophet pointedly referred to the birth of Jesus as an argument to disprove his so-called divinity. He is reported to have said to them: "Do you not know that it was a woman who conceived Jesus, and then she was delivered of him just as a normal woman is delivered of a child" (Jarīr, iii.101)?

369. Muḥkam means, (1) that which has been made secure from change or alteration; (2) that in which there is no ambiguity or possibility of doubt; (3) that which is clear in meaning and decisive in exposition and (4) a verse which embodies a teaching special to the Qur'ān (Mufradāt & Lane).

370. Umm means, (1) mother; (2) source or origin or basis of a thing; (3) anything which is a means of sustenance and support or of reformation and correction for another; (4) anything to which other things around it are linked (Aqrab & Mufradāt).

371. Mutashābih is used about (1) that phrase, sentence or verse which is susceptible of different, though concordant, interpretations; (2) that whose parts resemble or are concordant with one another; (3) that whose true significance bears a similarity to a sense which is not meant; (4) that of which the true meaning is known only by referring it to what is termed Muḥkam; (5) that which cannot be rightly understood without repeated consideration; (6) a verse which contains teaching corresponding to or resembling those contained in the previous revealed Scriptures (Mufradāt).

372. Ta'wīl means, (1) interpretation or explanation; (2) conjecture about the meaning of a speech or writing; (3) turning away a speech or writing from its right interpretation; (4) interpretation of a dream; (5) end, result or sequel of a thing (Lane). In this verse the word occurs twice; in the former place it gives the second or the third meaning, while in the latter it gives the first or the fifth meaning.

373. The verse lays down the golden rule that, in order to prove a controversial point, the decisive and clearly worded parts of a Scripture should be taken into consideration, and if these are found to contradict the construction put upon a certain ambiguous passage that passage should be so interpreted as to make it harmonize with the decisive and clearly worded parts of the text. According to the verse, the Qur'ān has two sets of verses. Some are Muḥkam (firm and decisive in meaning) and others Mutashābih (capable of different interpretations). The right way to interpret a Mutashābih verse is that only such interpretation of it should be accepted as agrees with the verses that are Muḥkam. In 39:24 the whole of the Qur'ān is called Mutashābih and in 11:2 all the Quranic verses have been described as Muḥkam. This should not be taken as contradicting the verse under comment, according to which some verses of the Qur'ān are Muḥkam and others Mutashābih. So far as the real significance of the Quranic verses is concerned the whole of the Qur'ān is Muḥkam, in that all its verses contain decisive and eternal truths. In another sense, however, the whole of the Qur'ān is Mutashābih inasmuch as the Quranic verses have been so worded as to give at one and the same time, several meanings equally true and good. The Qur'ān is also Mutashābih (mutually resembling) in the sense that there is no contradiction or inconsistency in it, its different verses supporting one another. But parts of it are certainly Muḥkam and others Mutashābih for different readers according to their knowledge, mental make up and natural capacities, as the present verse points out. As regards prophecies, those that are couched in plain and direct language, susceptible of only one meaning, would be regarded as Muḥkam and those that are described in figurative or metaphorical language, capable of more than one interpretation, would be regarded as Mutashābih. The prophecies described in metaphorical language should, therefore, be interpreted in the light of the prophecies that are clearly and literally fulfilled and also in the light of the basic and fundamental principles of Islām. For Muḥkam prophecies, the reader is referred to 58:22; whereas 28:86 contains a Mutashābih prophecy. The term Muḥkam may also be applied to such verses as embody full and complete commandments while Mutashābih verses are those which give only part of a certain commandment, and are required to be read in conjunction with other verses to make a complete injunction. Muḥkamāt (decisive verses) generally deal with the Law and the doctrines of Faith, while Mutashābihāt generally deal with topics of secondary importance or describe incidents in the lives of Prophets or the history of peoples and, while so doing, sometimes make use of idioms and phrases capable of different meanings. Such verses should not be so interpreted as to contradict the clearly worded tenets of the Faith. It may be noted here that the use of metaphors, the main basis of Mutashābih verses in religious Scriptures, is necessary in order to assure vastness of meaning in the fewest of words, to add beauty and grace to the style, and to provide for the people a trial without which spiritual development and perfection are not possible.

9. 'Our Lord, let not our hearts become perverse after Thou hast guided us;[374] and bestow on us mercy from Thyself; surely, Thou art the Great Bestower;

رَبَّنَا لَا تُزِغْ قُلُوْبَنَا بَعْدَ اِذْ هَدَيْتَنَا وَهَبْ لَنَا مِنْ لَّدُنْكَ رَحْمَةً ۚ اِنَّكَ اَنْتَ الْوَهَّابُ ۝٩

374. The right knowledge of the Qur'ān is vouchsafed only to those who are pure of heart (56:80).

375. As all these verses have particular reference to Christians the word "disbelievers" occurring in the verse under comment may apply to them.

376. Da'b means, habit, custom or manner; case, affair or condition (Aqrab).

377. The verse refers to the Battle of Badr in which 313 ill-equipped and ill-armed Muslims inflicted a crushing defeat on a fully equipped and fully armed Meccan force—1000 strong. This fulfilled two prophecies—one contained in an earlier revelation of the Qur'ān (54:45-49), and the other in the Bible (Isa. 21:13-17). In accordance with the biblical prophecy, about a year after the hijrah of the Holy Prophet from Mecca, the power of Kedar (the progenitor of the Meccans) was broken at Badr and their glory departed. The defeat of the infidels was as unexpected and complete as was the victory of the Muslims. Truly has the Battle of Badr been reckoned among the greatest battles of history. It virtually decided the fate of Arabia and established Islām on a very firm footing.

378. The clause points out that the Meccan army appeared to the Muslims to be less than their actual strength, i.e. only twice instead of thrice the number of the Muslims, as was actually the case. This was quite in harmony with Divine design that the few weak and ill-equipped Muslims, seeing the full strength of the enemy, might not lose heart (8:45). What actually happened was that one-third of the Meccan army was behind a mound and the Muslims could see only two-thirds of them, i.e. 600 or twice as many as their own number.

379. Islām does not prohibit the use or seeking of the good things of this world; but it certainly condemns those who are wholly engrossed in them and make them the very object of their life.

380. Dhunūb is the plural of Dhanb which means, a fault, a misdeed, an offence, a thing for which one is blameable, if one does it intentionally. It differs from Ithm in that Dhanb may be either intentional or committed through inadvertence, Ithm is peculiarly intentional. Or Dhanb means, such errors and mistakes as bring about a harmful result or make one liable to be called to account. Really, Dhanb signifies such failings or shortcomings as adhere to human nature, Just as Dhanab (tail, or in man, the corresponding part of the body) adheres to the body, i.e. natural failings and shortcomings in man (Lane & Mufradāt).

381. The special marks of a true believer mentioned in this verse represent four stages of spiritual progress: (1) When a person embraces the true Faith, he generally is subjected to persecution; therefore, the first stage through which he has to pass is that of "patience and steadfastness." (2) When persecution comes to an end and he is free to act as he pleases, he carries into practice the teachings which he was unable fully to act upon before. This second stage relates to "living truthfully," i.e. living up to one's convictions. (3) When, as a result of faithfully carrying out the commandments of Faith, true believers attain power, even then humility does not take leave of them. They remain as "humble" in spirit as ever. (4) Nay, their sense of service increases all the more. They "spend" whatever Allāh has given them for the welfare of fellow men. But, as the concluding words of the verse point out, all this time they continue to pray to God in the stillness of the night to forgive any falling short, on their part, of the high ideal of service to humanity.

381A. The words also mean, in accordance with justice.

382. The one central and indisputable fact in nature and the basic principle of every true religion is Divine Unity. The whole creation and the consummate order pervading it bear undeniable testimony to this fundamental fact. The angels who are the bearers of the Message of truth to the Prophets, the Messengers of God, who propagate it in the world, and those good people who receive and imbibe true knowledge from God's Messengers, all add their testimony to the Divine testimony. Similarly, all are united in testifying to the falsehood of the idea of setting up gods with Allāh, be it in the form of plurality, trinity, or duality of gods.

383. All religions inculcate belief in the Oneness of God and submission to His Will, yet it is only in Islām that the idea of submission to God's Will has found its consummation; for complete submission requires complete manifestation of God's attributes and it is in Islām alone that such manifestation has taken place. So of all religious systems Islām alone deserves to be called God's own religion in the real sense of the term. All true religions were indeed more or less Islām in their original form and their adherents Muslims in the literal sense of the term, but not till the time when religion became complete in all its different aspects was it given the name of Al-Islām, which was reserved for the final Dispensation perfected in the Qur'ān. The verse further explains 2:63.

21. But if they dispute with thee, say, [a]'I have surrendered myself completely to Allāh, and also those who follow me.' And say to those who have been given the Book[384] and to the Unlearned,[385] 'Have you also surrendered?' If they surrender, then they will surely be rightly guided,[386] but if they turn back, then [b]thy duty is only to convey the Message. And Allāh is Watchful of His servants.

385. See 113A and 1058.

386. If the People of the Book and those who follow no revealed Scripture were to surrender themselves to God, they would surely accept the Holy Prophet and be rightly guided, the former because clear prophecies are found in their Scriptures regarding him and the latter because of the combined testimony of nature, human conscience and common sense.

387. No Prophet of God, whatever circumstances faced him, ever failed in his mission. No amount of persecution or attempts to murder the Prophets ever succeeded in arresting or retarding the progress of their Faith. The history of Religion provides a standing testimony to this fact.

388. Disbelievers have no faith in retribution of the Hereafter; so, as a proof of the fact that their deeds will not avail them at all on the Day of Resurrection, they are told that in the present life also their efforts to destroy Islām will prove futile and this will be evidence of the fact that in the life to come also their works will be of no use to them.

394. This and the preceding verse point to the immutable Divine law that nations rise and fall as they conform to, or defy, the Will of God, Who is the Source of all power and glory.

395. With the accession of political power to Islām, as promised in the preceding verses, forging of political alliances became necessary for the Muslim State. The verse under comment embodies the guiding principle that no Muslim State should enter into treaty or alliance with a non-Muslim State which should in any way injure, or conflict with, the interests of other Muslim States. The interests of Islām should transcend all other interests.

396. Muslims are warned to be on their guard against the plots and machinations of disbelievers. The expression, except that you guard yourselves fully against them, refers not to the power of the enemy but to his cunning of which Muslims should always be on their guard.

398. The verse emphatically declares that the goal to attain Divine love is now impossible of achievement except by following the Holy Prophet. It further removes the misunderstanding that may possibly arise from 2:63 that belief in the existence of God and in the Hereafter is alone sufficient for salvation.

'Imrān[399] above all peoples of the time.

399. 'Imrān may possibly refer to two persons: (1) Amram of the Bible, who was a son of Kohath and a grandson of Levi. He was the father of Moses, Aaron and Miriam, Moses being the youngest of the three (Jew. Enc. under Amram; Exod. 6:18-20); (2) 'Imrān, the father of Mary, mother of Jesus. This 'Imrān was the son of Yoshhim or Yoshim (Jarīr & Kathīr). The Qur'ān has chosen this name with a twofold purpose: (1) To include, besides Moses, a reference to Aaron, the elder brother of Moses, and (2) to use it as a sort of preamble for introducing the story of Mary, the mother of Jesus, and, through it, that of Jesus himself. The repetition of the name 'Imrān in 3:36 also points to the same conclusion. It is significant that whereas the verse mentions the names of Adam and Noah singly and individually, it refers to Abraham and 'Imrān as heads of families. This has been done to point out that the latter names include references to certain individuals from among their progeny. Thus the expression "family of Abraham" not only refers to Abraham personally but also to his sons and grandsons—Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph. It may also include a reference to the Holy Prophet of Islām who was likewise descended from Abraham. Similarly, the words "family of 'Imrān" refer to Aaron, Moses and Jesus. 'Imrān himself is not included, as he was not a Prophet.

400. 'Imrān in the present verse is either the abbreviated form of Āl-e-'Imrān (the family of 'Imrān, father of Moses) just as in 2:41 Isrā'īl is the abbreviated form of Banī Isrā'īl (the Children of Israel) or it refers to 'Imrān, the father of Mary.

401. Muḥarrar means, emancipated; a child divorced from all worldly affairs and dedicated by its parents to the service of the Church (Lane & Mufradāt). It was a custom among the Israelites that those persons who were dedicated to the service of the Church remained unmarried (Gospel of Mary,

5:6 & Bayān under 3:36). In this verse the mother of Mary whose name was Hanna (Enc. Bib.) has been spoken of as Imra'atu'Imrān (woman of 'Imrān) while in 19:29 Mary herself has been addressed as Ukht-e-Hārūn (sister of Aaron). 'Imrān (Amrān) and Aaron were respectively the father and brother of Moses, while he had also a sister named Miriam. Being ignorant of Arabic idiom and Quranic style, Christian writers, who ascribe the authorship of the Qur'ān to the Holy Prophet, think that in his ignorance he confused Mary, mother of Jesus, with Mary or Miriam, the sister of Moses. Thus they pretend to have discovered a serious anachronism in the Qur'ān—an altogether absurd charge, inasmuch as quite a number of passages can be cited to show that the Qur'ān considers Moses and Jesus as two Prophets separated from each other by a long line of Prophets (2:88; 5:45). It is on record that when the Holy Prophet sent Mughīrah to Najrān, the Christians of that place asked him: "Do you not read in the Qur'ān Mary (mother of Jesus) being mentioned as the sister of Aaron, while you know that Jesus was born long time after Moses?" did not know the answer," says Mughīrah, "and on my return to Medina I enquired about it of the Holy Prophet who answered, 'Why did you not tell them that the Israelites used to name their children after their deceased Prophets and saints (Tirmidhī). In fact, there is actually a tradition to the effect that the husband of Hanna and the father of Mary was known as 'Imrān whose father (Mary's grandfather) had the name Yoshhim or Yoshim (Jarīr & Kathīr). Thus this 'Imrān is different from the 'Imrān who was the father of Moses and whose own father was Kohath (Exod. 6:18-20). The fact that Hanna's husband, or for that matter Mary's father, has been named Joachim in the Christian Scriptures (Gospel of the Birth of Mary & Enc. Brit. under Mary) should perplex no one as Joachim is the same as Yoshim, mentioned by Ibn Jarīr as the father of 'Imrān. The Christian Scriptures give the name of the grandfather instead of the father, which is a common practice. Besides, there are instances in the Bible of one person being known by two names. Gideon, for instance, was also called Jerubbaal (Judg. 7:1). So it should occasion no surprise if the second name of Jochim happened to be 'Imrān. Moreover, like individuals, families, too, are sometimes known after the names of their distinguished ancestors. In the Bible the name 'Israel' sometimes stands for the Israelites (Deut. 6:3, 4) and Kedar for the Ishmaelites (Isa. 21:16; 42:11). Similarly, Jesus has been called the son of David (Matt. 1:1). So the words Imra'atu'Imrān may also mean Imra'atu Āl-e-'Imrān, i.e. a woman from the family of 'Imrān. This explanation finds further support from the fact that the words Āl-e-'Imrān (family of 'Imrān) have been used by the Qur'ān only two verses before. The word Āl (family) was dropped here owing to the nearness service. So do Thou accept it of me; verily, Thou alone art All-Hearing, All-Knowing.'

فَلَمَّا وَضَعَتْهَا قَالَتْ رَبِّ إِنِّي وَضَعْتُهَا أُنْثَىٰ ۖ وَاللَّهُ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا وَضَعَتْ ۖ وَلَيْسَ الذَّكَرُ كَالْأُنْثَىٰ ۖ وَإِنِّي سَمَّيْتُهَا مَرْيَمَ

37. But when she was delivered of it, she said, 'My Lord, I am delivered of a female,'[402]—and Allāh knew best of what she was delivered[402A] and the male of reference. And it is admitted that Hanna, mother of Mary, who was the cousin of Elisabeth (John's mother) belonged to the House of Aaron and through him to that of 'Imrān (Luke 1:5, 36). For this and the next verse see also 'The Larger Edition of the Commentary.'

The vow of Mary's mother seems to have been taken under the influence of the Essenes who were generally held in high esteem by the people of that time and who practised celibacy and excluded women from their membership, and dedicated their lives to the service of religion and their fellow beings (Enc. Bib.; Jew. Enc.). It is remarkable that the teachings of the Gospels have much in common with those of the Essenes. It is also clear from the meaning of the word Muḥarrar that Mary's mother had vowed the dedication of her child to the service of the Church, and as such she intended her never to marry, which shows that Mary was meant to belong to the priestly class. This is why, elsewhere in the Qur'ān, she is called the sister of Aaron and not of Moses (19:29), though both were real brothers; for whereas Moses was the founder of the Jewish Law, Aaron was the head of the Jewish priestly class (Enc. Bib.; Enc. Brit. under Aaron). Thus Mary, mother of Jesus, was the sister of Aaron not in the sense that she was his real sister but because, like Aaron, she belonged to the priestly order.

402. Mary's mother had made the vow in the hope that she would be blessed with a son whom she would dedicate to the service of God. Instead a daughter was born to her. So she was naturally perplexed.

402A. The words, Allāh knew best of what she was delivered, form a parenthetical clause spoken by God, whereas the following words, the male she desired to have was not like the female she was delivered of, may be taken to have been spoken either by God or by Mary's mother. Most probably they are God's words and mean, as rendered in the text, that the female child she had brought forth was superior to the male child she desired to have. If taken to have been spoken by Mary's mother, they would mean that the female child

وَاِنِّیْۤ اُعِیْذُهَا بِكَ وَذُرِّیَّتَهَا مِنَ الشَّیْطٰنِ الرَّجِیْمِ ﴿۳۷﴾

she desired to have was not like the female she was delivered of—'and I have named her Mary,[402B] and I commit her and her offspring to Thy protection[402C] from Satan, the rejected.'[402D]

she had given birth to could not be like the male child she desired to have, inasmuch as a boy only was fitted to do the special service to which she desired to dedicate him. The clause, I have named her Mary, contains an implied prayer to God to make the girl as exalted and as good and virtuous as the name Mary (meaning exalted or a pious worshipper) signified.

402B. Maryam was the mother of Jesus. She was probably named after the sister of Moses and Aaron, known as Mariam (later pronunciation, Miriam). The word, which is probably a compound one in Hebrew means, star of the sea; mistress or lady; exalted; pious worshipper (Cruden's Concordance; Kashshāf & Enc. Bib.).

402C. These words offer some difficulty. If Mary's mother intended her child to be dedicated to the service of God, she must have known that the child would remain unmarried for life. What is, then, the sense in offering prayer for the child's offspring? The most probable explanation is that God had told her in a vision that her daughter would grow up to womanhood and would have a child, whereupon she prayed that Mary and her child might both be granted God's protection. In spite of this, however, she appears to have left the future of Mary in God's hand and dedicated her, as she had originally intended, to the service of God (3:36; Gospel of the Birth of Mary). This must have been an exceptional case, for ordinarily only males were eligible for such dedication. The assumption that Mary's mother had a vision that her daughter would have a son finds mention in the Gospel of Mary (3:5) though perhaps in a somewhat different form. There was nothing unusual about the prayer of Hanna, Mary's mother, that Mary and her offspring might be protected from satanic influences. All pious parents are actuated by such a desire for their children and pray that they should grow up to lead good and virtuous lives. It is also to be noted that though Islām declares all Prophets of God to be safe from the influence of Satan, the Bible does not ascribe this protection to Jesus (Mark, 1:12, 13).

402D Rajīm, derived from Rajama, means: (1) One driven away from God's presence and mercy or one cursed; (2) forsaken and abandoned;

فَتَقَبَّلَهَا رَبُّهَا بِقَبُوْلٍ حَسَنٍ وَّاَنْۢبَتَهَا نَبَاتًا
حَسَنًا ۙ وَّكَفَّلَهَا زَكَرِيَّا ؕ كُلَّمَا دَخَلَ عَلَيْهَا

عِنْدِ اللّٰهِ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ يَرْزُقُ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ
بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ﴿۳۸﴾

38. So her Lord accepted her with a gracious acceptance and caused her to grow an excellent growth and made Zachariah[403] her guardian. Whenever Zachariah visited her in the chamber, he found with her provisions. He said, 'O Mary, whence hast thou this?' She replied, 'It is from Allāh.'[404] Surely, Allāh gives to whomsoever He pleases without measure.

هُنَالِكَ دَعَا زَكَرِيَّا رَبَّهٗ ۚ قَالَ رَبِّ هَبْ
لِيْ مِنْ لَّدُنْكَ ذُرِّيَّةً طَيِّبَةً ۚ اِنَّكَ
سَمِيْعُ الدُّعَآءِ ﴿۳۹﴾

39. Then and there did Zachariah pray[405] to His Lord, saying, [a]'My Lord, grant me from Thyself pure offspring; surely, Thou art the Hearer of prayer.'

[a]19:6-7; 21:90-91.

(3) pelted with stones; (4) deprived of all goodness and virtue (Lane).

403. Zachariah or Zacharias was the name of an Israelite holy person whom the Qur'ān presents as a Prophet (6:86) but of whom the Bible speaks only as a priest (Luke, 1:5). The person presented as a Prophet by the Bible is Zechariah (mark the difference in spelling) of whom the Qur'ān, however, makes no mention. Zachariah of the Qur'ān was the father of Yaḥyā, (John) who was a cousin of Jesus.

404. The gifts were evidently brought by worshippers visiting the place and there was nothing extraordinary in Mary's reply that the gifts were from Allāh, for every good thing that comes to man is really from God, He being the Final Giver. In fact, from a girl of Mary's religious upbringing any other reply would have been rather surprising.

405. The pious reply of the child made a deep impression on the mind of Zachariah and awakened in the depths of his soul the latent and natural desire of possessing a similarly virtuous child of his own. He prayed to God to be blessed with a child like Mary. The prayer was probably repeated over a length of period as it is mentioned in varying words in different parts of the Qur'ān (3:39; 19:4-7; 21:90).

406. Yaḥyā or John is the name of the Prophet who appeared before Jesus to serve as his harbinger in fulfilment of the biblical prophecy (Mal. 3:1 and 4:5). The Hebrew form is Yūḥannā which in that language means, God has been gracious (Enc. Brit.). The name Yaḥyā was given by God Himself.

407. John came in fulfilment of Malachi's prophecy, "Behold I will send you Elijah, the Prophet, before the great and terrible day of the Lord" (Mal. 4:5).

408. Ghulām means a youth (Lane). Zachariah's query was a spontaneous expression of innocent surprise at the Divine promise. It also contained a veiled prayer that he might live long enough to see the child born and grow up into a young man.

409. Zachariah was to abstain from speaking for three days, and, then, was the promise to be fulfilled. He was not deprived of his power of speech, as the Gospels seem to allege, as a punishment for his not believing the words of God (Luke, 1:20-22).

وَاِذْ قَالَتِ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ يٰمَرْيَمُ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ اصْطَفٰىكِ وَطَهَّرَكِ وَاصْطَفٰىكِ عَلٰى نِسَآءِ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ﴿٤٣﴾

44. 'O Mary, be obedient to thy Lord and prostrate thyself and worship One God with those who worship Him.'

[a]19:12. [b]3:34.

410. The commandment about keeping silent was intended to afford Zachariah a suitable opportunity for passing his time in meditation and prayer—a condition particularly helpful in attracting Divine mercy and grace. Refraining from speech has also been found helpful, in some cases, in making one regain one's lost vitality and physical strength. This practice seems to have been in vogue among the Jews of those times.

411. The use of the word "angels" in the plural number has its own significance. If the mere conveying of a message was intended, only one angel could have acted as a message-bearer. In the Quranic idiom the use of the plural number signifies that, as God intended to bring about, through Mary's son, a great change in the world, affecting various spheres of life, He ordered all the different angels connected with the relevant spheres to take part in conveying the message, thus calling upon all of them to help him in bringing about the desired change.

412. In this verse the word "chosen" has been used twice. In the first place it has been used in regard to Mary without reference to any other person, signifying her exalted position absolutely; while in the second place it has been used to express her high position in relation to other women of her time. According to the usage of the Qur'ān, the expression Nisā'il-'Ālamīn does not here refer to the women of all times and all ages, but only to the women of the specific time in which Mary lived.

ذٰلِكَ مِنْ اَنْۢبَآءِ الْغَيْبِ نُوْحِيْهِ اِلَيْكَ ؕ وَمَا كُنْتَ لَدَيْهِمْ اِذْ يُلْقُوْنَ اَقْلَامَهُمْ اَيُّهُمْ يَكْفُلُ مَرْيَمَ ۪ وَمَا كُنْتَ لَدَيْهِمْ اِذْ يَخْتَصِمُوْنَ ﴿۴۵﴾

46. When the angels said, 'O Mary, [c]Allāh gives thee glad tidings of a son through [d]a Word[414] from Him; his

[a]11:50; 12:103. [b]3:38. [c]19:30. [d]3:10; 4:172.

413. Many of the facts which the Qur'ān has brought to light regarding Mary are not found in the previous Scriptures. Hence, they are here spoken of as "things unseen." As narrated in the verses that follow, Mary had become pregnant, while leading a life of dedication in the Temple. The priests grew anxious when they came to know of the startling fact. They feared scandal and disputed among themselves and cast lots to decide as to who should take charge of Mary and arrange her disposal in marriage. One Joseph, a carpenter, as mentioned in the Gospels, was hit upon as a suitable person to be her husband and was persuaded to accept the awkward situation. All this was naturally done in secret and so it was a Ghaib (a thing unseen) which the Qur'ān has brought to light.

414. Kalimah means, a word; a decree; a command (Mufradāt). This word along with the word, Rūḥ, occurring together in 4:172 makes it clear without a shadow of doubt that, far from establishing it, these words have been used to demolish and repudiate the doctrine of the so-called divinity and sonship of Jesus. In it Jesus has been called Kalimatullāh because his words were helpful to the cause of Truth. Just as a person who helps the cause of Truth by his valour is called Saifullāh (the Sword of God) or Asadullāh (the Lion of God), so was Jesus called Kalimatullāh because also his birth did not take place through the agency of a male parent but by the direct "command" of God (19:22). Besides the literal meanings given above the Qur'ān has used the word Kalimah in the following senses: (1) "a Sign" (66:13 & 8:8); (2) "punishment" (10:97); (3) "plan" or "design" (9:40); (4) "glad tidings" (7:138); (5) "creation of God" (18:110); (6) "a mere word of mouth" or "a mere assertion" (23:101). Taken in any of the above senses, the use of the word Kalimah about Jesus in no way gives to him a status higher than that of other Prophets. Moreover, if Jesus has been called Kalimah (word) in the Qur'ān, the Holy Prophet has been called Dhikr, i.e. a book or a good speech (65:11, 12), which evidently consists of many Kalimāt (words). In fact, if Kalimatullāh is taken in the sense of "Word of God," the utmost we can say is that God expressed Himself through Jesus just as He expressed Himself through other Prophets. Words are nothing but a vehicle for the expression of thoughts. They do not form part of our being nor do they become incarnated.

name shall be the Messiah,[415] Jesus,[416] son of Mary,[417] honoured in this world and in the next, and of those who are granted nearness to God;[418]

415. Al-Masīḥ is derived from Masaḥa which means, he wiped off the dirt from the thing with his hand; he anointed it with oil; he journeyed through the land; God blessed him (Aqrab). Masīḥ, therefore, means (1) one anointed; (2) one who travels much; (3) one blessed. Al-Masīḥ is the Arabic form of Messiah which represents the Hebrew Mashiah, i.e. Anointed One (Enc. Bib.; Enc. Rel. & Eth.). Jesus was given this name because he was to travel much. But if in pursuance of the Gospel narrative, his ministry be admitted to have been confined to only three years and his travels to only a few Palestinian or Syrian towns, the title of Masīḥ in no way befits him. Recent historical research, however, has established the fact that after having recovered from the shock and the wounds of crucifixion, Jesus travelled far and wide in the East and finally reached Kashmir to give his message to the Lost Tribes of Israel who lived in those parts. See also 2000 where Jesus is spoken of as having been afforded shelter in a hilly tract of land. Masīḥ as stated above also means "One Anointed." As the birth of Jesus was out of the ordinary and was liable to be looked upon as illegitimate, therefore, to remove this possible accusation, he was spoken of as "being anointed" with God's own anointment, even as all Prophets of God are anointed.

416. 'Īsā seems to be the inverted form of the Hebrew word Yasū'. Jesus is the Greek form of Josua and Jesua (Enc. Bib.).

417. Ibn-e-Maryam is a surname of Jesus known in Arabic as Kunyah. Jesus has been called Ibn-e-Maryam probably because, being born without the agency of a male parent, he could not but be known after his mother.

418. This expression also gives to Jesus no higher status than that of a righteous servant of God. All highly righteous people have been spoken of in the Qur'ān as being granted nearness to God (56:11, 12).

وَيُكَلِّمُ النَّاسَ فِي الْمَهْدِ وَكَهْلًا وَّمِنَ الصّٰلِحِيْنَ ﴿٤٧﴾

47. 'And [a]he shall speak to the people in the cradle[418A] and when of middle age,[418B] and he shall be of the righteous.

418A. Primary meaning of the word Mahd is the state or period of preparation when one is, as it were, being prepared and made smooth for the duties of ripe age. The fact that the two periods of Kuhūlah and Mahd have been mentioned together shows that there is no intervening period between them. The entire period before Kuhūlah (middle age) is Mahd.

418B. Kahl means, one of middle age or of the age when one's hair becomes intermixed with hoariness; or it means, one who is between thirty or thirty-four and fifty-one years of age or between 40 and 51 (Lane & Tha'labī).

That Jesus spoke words of wisdom in his childhood has nothing miraculous or supernatural about it. Many intelligent and well brought up children speak like that. The whole sentence means that he would speak to people words full of extraordinary wisdom and spiritual knowledge, much beyond his years and experience, both in the period of preparation which is youth and in his middle age. The reference to the two distinct periods of Jesus's life may also be taken to hint that his speaking in the latter period would be of a different nature from that in the former. In the latter period he would speak to men as a Prophet of God. Thus the glad tidings given to Mary consisted in the fact that Jesus was not only destined to be an intelligent young man but was also to live to a ripe old age as a righteous servant of God.

419. The news of a son, however happy, in ordinary circumstances, must have greatly perplexed Mary who was not only still unmarried but was also meant to remain so for life. The verse reflects her justified perplexity. It also shows that Jesus had no father, as hinted in Mary's words, no man has touched me. Having been dedicated to the service of the Temple, Mary could not, consistently with her vow of celibacy, marry. If she was to marry and have children in due course, there was no occasion for her to be surprised when the birth of a child was announced to her by the angel in a vision. No normal girl would be surprised, if she were told in a vision that a son would be born to her; for she would naturally infer that the promised child would be born to her after marriage. In the Gospel of Mary, the vow of celibacy is clearly referred to. We have it in chapter 5 of the said Gospel that when the high priest made a general order that all the virgins living in the Temple who had reached their fourteenth year should return home, all other virgins complied with the order but "Mary, the virgin of the Lord" alone answered that she could not comply with it; and for this refusal of her she assigned the reason that both she and her parents had dedicated her to the service of the Lord, and that she had vowed virginity to the Lord, which vow she was resolved never to break (Gospel of Mary, 5:4, 5, 6). Mary's subsequent marriage with Joseph was thus contrary to the vow and against her own wish. She was, however, compelled by circumstances to marry when found with child. The priests had to arrange her marriage to avoid scandal. It does not, however, appear from the Gospels how Joseph was prevailed upon to consent, for he was obviously in the dark about her being pregnant at the time of marriage (Matt. 1:18,19). Presumably, some plausible excuse was found to justify the breaking of the vow. For a detailed account of the manner of the birth of Jesus see 1750-1755.

419A. The words "a Messenger to the Children of Israel" show that the mission of Jesus was confined to the House of Israel. He was not a World-Messenger (Matt. 10:5, 6; 15:24; 19:28. Acts, 3:25, 26; 13:46. Luke, 19:10; 22:28-30).

420. Khalaqa means, he measured, designed, fashioned or planned; God produced or created or brought into existence a thing or being without there being any previously existing pattern or model or similitude, i.e. he originated it (Lane & Lisān).

420A. Ṭīn means, clay; earth; mould; etc. Figuratively, aṭ-Ṭīn may signify such persons as possess docile natures suitable for being moulded into any good shape like pliable clay.

420B. Hai'ah means, form; fashion; garb; state; manner; mode or quality (Lane).

420C. Ṭair means, a bird. Metaphorically the word signifies a highly spiritual man who soars high into spiritual regions as Asad (literally a lion) is used for a brave man and Dābbah for a worthless person, a worm of the earth (34:15).

420D. 'Ubri'u is derived from Bari'a which means, he was or became clear or free from a thing and signifies, I heal; I declare a person free from the defect attributed to him (Lane).

420E. Akmah means, one who cannot see at night; one born blind; one who becomes blind afterward; one deprived of reason and understanding (Mufradāt).

420F. There is no mention in the Bible of the miracle which is popularly believed to have been performed by Jesus that he created birds. If Jesus had really created birds, there is no reason why the Bible should have omitted to mention this, particularly when the creating of birds was a miracle the like of which had never been shown before by any Messenger of God. The mention of such a miracle would certainly have established his great superiority over all other Prophets and would have lent some support to the claim to Divinity which has been foisted upon him by his later followers. Of the different meanings of Khalq—(1) measuring; determining; designing, (2) fashioning; making and creating, etc. it is in the former sense that this word has been used in this verse. In the sense of "creating," the act of Khalq has not been attributed in the Qur'ān to any other being or thing except God (13:17; 16:21; 22:74; 25:4; 31:11, 12; 35:41 & 46:5). In the light of the above explanation, and keeping in view the figurative sense of the word "clay," the whole clause, I will fashion out for you a creation…become a soaring being, would mean that if ordinary men of humble origin but possessing the inherent capacity for growth and development came into contact with him and accepted his Message, they would undergo a complete transformation in their lives. From men grovelling in the dust and not seeing beyond their material cares and mundane concerns, they would become converted into birds soaring high into the lofty regions of the spiritual firmament. And this is exactly what happened. The humble and despised fishermen of Galilee, under the impact of the ennobling precept and example of their Master, began soaring high like birds, preaching to the world of Israel the Word of God.

As for healing the blind and the leprous, it appears from the Bible that persons suffering from certain diseases (leprosy, etc.) were considered unclean by the Israelites and were not allowed to have social contact with other men. The word, "I declare to be free;" signify that the legal or social disabilities and disadvantages, under which persons suffering from such maladies laboured, were removed by Jesus. Or that Jesus used to heal persons suffering from these diseases. The Prophets of God are spiritual physicians; they give eyes to those that have lost spiritual sight, and hearing to those who are spiritually deaf, and they restore to life those who are spiritually dead (Matt. 13:15). In this case the word Akmah would mean such a person as possesses the light of faith but being weak of resolve cannot stand trials. He sees in daytime, i.e. so long as there are no trials and the sun of faith shines forth unclouded, but when the night comes, i.e. when there are trials and sacrifices have to be made, he loses his spiritual vision and stands still (cf. 2:21). Similarly, the word Abraṣ (leprous) would, in the spiritual sense, mean one who is imperfect in faith, having patches of diseased skin among healthy ones.

The clause, I will quicken the dead, does not mean that Jesus actually brought the dead to life. Those actually dead are never restored to life in this world. Such a belief is diametrically opposed to the whole Quranic teaching (2:29; 23:100, 101; 21:96; 39:59, 60; 40:12; 45:27). The marvellous moral transformation that God's Messengers bring about in the lives of their followers is termed "raising the dead to life," in spiritual terminology.

420G. The entire clause may mean that Jesus told his disciples what they should eat, i.e. what they should spend to meet their physical needs, and what they should store up i.e. what they should lay up as spiritual treasure in Heaven. In other words he told them that their earnings should be honestly and lawfully acquired and that they should spend their savings in the way of God, having no thought for the morrow which should be left to God (Matt. 6:25, 26).

421. Jesus came in fulfilment of the prophecies of the previous Prophets contained in the Torah. But he brought no new Law, being a follower of Moses in this respect. He himself was conscious of this limitation of his authority (Matt. 5:17, 18).

421A. The expression does not refer to any change or modification in the Mosaic Law. The reference is only to those things which the Jews had themselves rendered unlawful for their use (4:161; 43:64). These two verses show that there were differences among the various sects of the Jews regarding the lawfulness or otherwise of certain things and that by their iniquities and transgressions they had deprived themselves of certain Divine blessings. Jesus thus came as a judge to decide in what matters the Jews had deviated from the right path and to tell them that the blessings of which they had been deprived would be restored to them, if they followed him (Kathīr, Fatḥ & Muḥīṭ).

422. Ḥawāriyyūn is the plural of Ḥawāriyy which means, (1) a washerman; (2) one tried and found to be free from vice or fault (3) a person of pure and unsullied character; (4) one who advises or counsels or acts honestly and faithfully; (5) a true and sincere friend or helper; (6) a select friend and helper of a Prophet (Lane & Mufradāt).

423. The Jews had planned that Jesus should die an accursed death on the Cross (Deut. 21:24), but God's plan was that he should be saved from that death. The plan of the Jews miscarried and God's plan was successful, because Jesus did not die on the Cross but came down from it alive, and died a natural death in Kashmir, full of years, and far away from the scene of his crucifixion.

424. Mutawaffī is derived from Tawaffā. They say Tawaffallāhu Zaidan, i.e. God took away the soul of Zaid, namely He caused him to die. When God is the subject and a human being the object, Tawaffā has no other meaning than that of taking away the soul, whether in sleep or death. Ibn-e-'Abbās has translated Mutawaffī-ka as Mumītu-ka, i.e. I will cause thee to die (Bukhārī). Similarly, Zamakhsharī, an Arab linguist of great repute, says: "Mutawaffī-ka means, I will protect thee from being killed by the people and will grant thee full lease of life ordained for thee, and will cause thee to die a natural death, not being killed" (Kashshāf). In fact, all Arabic lexicographers are agreed on the point that the word Tawaffa as used in the aforesaid manner, can bear no other interpretation and not a single instance from the whole Arabic literature can be cited of this word having been used in any other sense. Outstanding scholars and Commentators like (I) Ibn-e-'Abbās, (2) Imām Mālik, (3) Imām Bukhārī, (4) Imām Ibn-e-Ḥazm, (5) Imām Ibn-e-Qayyim, (6) Qatādah, (7) Wahhāb and others are of the same view (Bukhārī, ch. on Tafsīr; Bukhārī, ch. on Bad'ul Khalq; Biḥār; Al-Muḥallā, Ma'ād, p. 19; Manthūr ii; Kathīr). has been used in no less than 25 different places in the Qur'ān and in no less than 23 of them the meaning is to take away the soul at the time of death. Only in two places the meaning is to take away the soul at the time of sleep; but here the qualifying word "sleep" or "night" has been added (6:61; 39:43). The fact cannot be denied that Jesus is dead. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said, "Had Moses and Jesus now been alive, they would have found themselves forced to follow me" (Kathīr). He even fixed the age of Jesus at 120 years ('Ummāl). The Qur'ān, in as many as 30 verses, has completely demolished the absurd belief of the physical ascension of Jesus to, and his supposed life in, heaven.

424A. Raf' signifies raising the status and rank of a person and honouring him. When the Raf' of a man is spoken of as being towards God, the meaning is invariably his spiritual ascension, because God not being material or confined to any place, no physical ascension to Him is possible. The word has been used in the Qur'ān in this sense (24:37 & 35:11). The raising of Jesus is mentioned in the verse under comment in reply to the false claim of the Jews that he died an accursed death on the Cross.

425. Adam primarily stands for man, i.e. the sons of Adam generally. Jesus is thus declared to be like other mortals who have all been created from dust (40:68), and so there can be no Divinity about him. If, however, the word "Ādam" be taken to refer to the progenitor of the human race, then the verse would be taken to point to the resemblance between Jesus and Adam in being born without the agency of a male parent. In this case, the fact that Jesus had a mother would not affect the likeness which, as stated above, need not be complete in all respects.

425A. Elsewhere, man is stated to have been born out of clay (6:3). The difference sought to be indicated by the use of 'dust' and 'clay' is that when the word 'dust' is used, the idea of revelation (heavenly water) is not implied, but where 'clay' is used the idea of revelation is also indicated.

426. The discussion on Christian doctrines with which this Sūrah deals has been brought to a close in this verse. The reference, as mentioned above, is to the Christian deputation from Najrān which consisted of sixty persons and was headed by their chief, 'Abdul-Masīḥ, known as Al-'Āqib. They met the Holy Prophet in his Mosque and the discussion on the doctrine of the so-called divinity of Jesus continued at some length. When the question had been fully discussed and the members of the deputation were found to be still insisting on their false doctrine, the Holy Prophet, in obedience to Divine command contained in the present verse, invited them, as a last resort, to join him in a sort of prayer-contest technically known as Mubāhalah, i.e. invoking the curse of God on the holders of false beliefs. As, however, the Christians did not appear to be sure of their ground, they declined to accept the challenge, thus indirectly admitting the falsity of their doctrine (Zurqānī). Incidentally, it may be mentioned that during the discussion with the Christian deputation from Najrān the Holy Prophet allowed them to pray in his Mosque in their own way, which they did facing the East—an act of religious toleration unparalleled in the history of all religions (Zurqānī).

66. O People of the Book! [a]why do you dispute concerning Abraham, when the Torah and the Gospel were not revealed till after

426A. This verse is wrongly considered by some to provide a basis for a compromise between Islām on the one hand and Christianity and Judaism on the other. It is argued that if these religions also teach and inculcate the doctrine of Divine Unity, then other Islamic teachings supposed to be of comparatively little importance could safely be left alone. It is unthinkable that the idea of compromise in matters of faith could ever have been encouraged, with a people who, in the immediately preceding verses, have been severely condemned for their false beliefs and who are so forcefully challenged to a prayer-contest to invoke the curse of God upon the holders of false beliefs. The Holy Prophet, while writing his missionary epistle to Heraclius, used this very verse, yet he forcefully invited the latter to accept Islām and threatened him with Divine punishment if he refused to do so (Bukhārī). This shows beyond doubt that the mere fact of his believing in Divine Unity could not, according to the Holy Prophet, save Heraclius from God's punishment. In fact, the verse is intended to suggest an easy and simple method by which Jews and Christians can arrive at a right decision regarding the truth of Islām. The Christians, in spite of professing belief in the Unity of Godhead, believed in the divinity of Jesus; and the Jews, notwithstanding their claim to be strict monotheists, gave blind allegiance to their priests and divines, practically placing them in the position of God Himself. The verse exhorts both of them to come back to their original belief in the Oneness of God and give up the worship of false deities who stand in the way of their accepting Islām. Thus, instead of seeking a compromise with these Faiths, the verse virtually invites their followers to accept Islām by drawing their attention to the doctrine of the Oneness of God which being, at least in its outer form, the common fundamental doctrine of all, could serve as a meeting ground for further approach. Incidentally, it may be noted here that the letter, mentioned by Bukhārī and other Muslim Traditionists as having been addressed by the Holy Prophet to Heraclius and some other rulers—Muqauqis, the King of Egypt being one of them—couched in the words of this verse and inviting them to accept Islām, has recently been discovered and found to contain the exact words quoted by Bukhārī (R. Rel. vol. v. no. 8). This furnishes a strong proof of the essential authenticity of Bukhārī and, for that matter, of other accepted works of Ḥadīth.

427. The reference is either to the Quranic teaching or to the claim of the Jews and Christians about Abraham referred to in the preceding verse.

427A. The simplicity, straightforwardness and perfection of the religion of Islām very often create such strong feelings of appreciation in the hearts of the People of the Book that they feel irresistibly drawn towards it but, being inimical and jealous, their appreciation often takes the queer, though not unpsychological, course that they begin to wish that Muslims may become like themselves.

Taking the word Ḍalālah in the sense of ruin (40:35) the expression Yuḍillūnakum (lead you astray) may also be rendered as "lead you to ruin" and the next clause, but they lead astray none except themselves, may in that case mean that by seeking to ruin the Muslims, they only ruin themselves, because the rise of one's enemy signifies one's own fall.

427C. By means of the Signs, mentioned in their Scriptures about the Holy Prophet, the People of the Book could easily know that Muḥammad (peace and the blessings of God be on him) was indeed the Promised Prophet, yet because of enmity and jealousy they would not recognize him and would insist on mixing up truth with falsehood rather than accept the truth in its unalloyed purity.

428. The Jews were held in high esteem by the pagan Arabs for their religious learning. They took undue advantage of this and thought of a device to turn Muslims away from their Faith by outwardly embracing Islām in the early part of the day and giving it up in the latter part, seeking in this way to make the unlettered Arabs believe that something must have been seriously wrong with Islām, otherwise these learned men would not have so hurriedly given it up. But these foolish people made a completely wrong estimate of the invincible faith of the Companions of the Holy Prophet.

428A. If we are wrong in holding this view, then they should remove this misunderstanding by some Divine argument.

428B. 'Grace' here may signify Prophethood.

428C. (1) The clause, And obey none but him who follows your religion, constitutes a continuation of the concluding clause of the preceding verse. Thereafter comes the parenthetical clause beginning with the words, Say, surely true guidance—the guidance of Allāh—is that one may be given the like of that which has been given to you. Then comes again the speech of the Jews in the words, or they would argue with you before your Lord, the verse finally ending with the Divine commandment: Say, 'All bounty, etc.' This style is peculiar to the Qur'ān and is intended to produce a good psychological effect. (2) According to another interpretation, only the words which in this case would be translated as "Say, the true guidance is the guidance of Allāh," would be considered as being parenthetical and the following words, i.e. that one be given the like of that which has been given to you, ...before your Lord, would be taken to form part of the speech of the Jews. (3) Yet according to a third interpretation the speech of the Jews is taken to end with the words, obey none but him who follows your religion, the succeeding clauses being considered to be all Divine speech. 429. In the time of the Holy Prophet the idea had gained ground among the Jews that it was no sin to rob a Gentile (non-Jew) Arab of his possession and property because the latter followed a false religion. Possibly, the idea had its origin in the Jewish law of usury, which makes an invidious distinction between a Jew and a non-Jew regarding the giving and taking of interest (Exod. 22:25; Lev. 25:36, 37; Deut. 23:20).

431. It is an allusion to an evil practice of some Jews in the time of the Holy Prophet. They would recite a passage in Hebrew in such a manner as would deceive the hearers into believing that it was the Torah that was being recited. The word "Book" used thrice in this verse means "a passage in Hebrew" in the first place and "the Torah" in the last two. The passage is spoken of as "the Book" because the Jews tried to make it appear as such.

432. The expression mā Kāna la-hū is used in three senses: (a) It does not become him to do so. (b) It is not possible for him to do so; or, it does not stand to reason that he should have done so; (c) he cannot possibly do so, i.e. it is physically impossible for him to do so.

432A. Rabbāniyyīn is the plural of Rabbāniy which means, (1) one who devotes himself to religious service or applies himself to acts of devotion; (2) one who possesses knowledge of God; (3) one who is learned in religious lore, or a good or righteous man; (4) a teacher who begins to nourish people with the small matters of knowledge or science before taking the great ones; (5) a lord or master or a leader; (6) a reformer (Lane, Sībawaih & Mubarrad).

82. And remember the time [a]when Allāh took a covenant[433] from the people through the Prophets, saying, 'Whatever I give you of the Book and Wisdom and then there comes to you a Messenger, fulfilling[433A] that which is with you, you shall believe in him and help him.'

432B. The words, because you teach the Book and because you study it, show that it is the duty of all those who themselves have acquired spiritual knowledge that they should impart it to others and should not let men grope in the darkness of ignorance.

433. The expression Mīthāqun-Nabiyyīn may either signify the covenant of the Prophets with God or the covenant which God took from the people through their Prophets. The expression has been used here in the latter sense because another reading of the expression as supported by Ubayy bin Ka'b and 'Abdullāh bin Mas'ūd is Mīthāqalladhīna 'ūtul-Kitāb meaning, the covenant of those who were given the Book (Muḥīṭ). This rendering is also supported by the words that follow, i.e. and then there comes to you a Messenger fulfilling that which is with you, because it was to the people and not to their Prophets that the Messengers of God came.

433A. The word Muṣaddiq has been used here to denote the criterion by which a true claimant is distinguished from a false one. The word has been rightly translated here as "fulfilling," for it is only by "fulfilling" in his person the prophecies contained in the previous revealed Scriptures that a claimant can prove his truth.

84. Do they seek a religion other than Allāh's, while to Him submits whosoever is in the heavens and the earth, willingly or unwillingly,[434] and to Him shall they all be returned?

433B. This verse is also considered to apply to other Prophets in general and to the Holy Prophet in particular. Both applications are correct. The verse lays down a general rule. The advent of every Prophet takes place in fulfilment of certain prophecies made by a previous Prophet in which he enjoins his followers to accept the next Prophet when he makes his appearance. If the Prophet comes in fulfilment of the prophecies contained in the Scriptures of one people only, as was the case with Jesus and other Israelite Prophets, then only that people are bound to accept and help him: but if the Scriptures of all religions predict the coming of a Prophet, as in the case of the Holy Prophet, then all nations are bound to accept him. The Holy Prophet appeared in fulfilment of the prophecies not only of the Israelite Prophets (Isa. 21:13-15. Deut. 18:18; 33:2. John 14:25, 26; 16:7-13) but also of the Aryan seers and Buddhist and Zoroastrian sages (Safrang Dasātīr, p. 188, Sirājī Press, Delhi Jāmāspī, published by Niẓāmul-Mashā'ikh, Delhi, 1330 A.H.).

434. As in the physical world man must submit to the laws of nature—and he knows by experience that such submission is useful for him—it is only reasonable that, in spiritual matters also wherein he has been granted a certain amount of freedom, he should obey the laws and commands of Allāh and thus win His pleasure to his own benefit.

85. Say, [a]'We believe in Allāh and in that which has been revealed to us, and that which was revealed to Abraham and Ishmael and Isaac and Jacob and the tribes, and in that which was given to Moses and Jesus and other Prophets from their Lord.[435] We make no distinction between any of them[435A] and to Him we submit.'

وَمَنْ يَّبْتَغِ غَيْرَ الْاِسْلَامِ دِيْنًا فَلَنْ يُّقْبَلَ مِنْهُ ۚ وَ هُوَ فِى الْاٰخِرَةِ مِنَ الْخٰسِرِيْنَ ﴿۸۶﴾

كَيْفَ يَهْدِى اللّٰهُ قَوْمًا كَفَرُوْا بَعْدَ اِيْمَانِهِمْ وَ شَهِدُوْٓا اَنَّ الرَّسُوْلَ حَقٌّ

87. How shall Allāh guide a people who have disbelieved after believing and who had borne witness that the Messenger was true and to whom clear proofs had

[a]2:137, 286. [b]3:20; 5:4.

435. The Jews refused to believe in non-Israelite Prophets as the words, obey none but him who follows your religion (3:74) show. The charge has been pressed home to them that while they rejected all but the Israelite Prophets, Islām requires its followers to believe in all the Prophets of God, irrespective of the country or the race or the community to which they belonged or of the time in which they lived. This constitutes Islām's great superiority over all other religions.

435A. The words do not mean that there is no difference of rank or status between various Prophets which view is contrary to 2:254. What they really signify is that there can be no discrimination between them as Divine Messengers.

وَّجَآءَهُمُ الْبَيِّنٰتُ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ لَا يَهْدِى الْقَوْمَ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿٨٧﴾

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا بَعْدَ اِيْمَانِهِمْ ثُمَّ ازْدَادُوْا كُفْرًا لَّنْ تُقْبَلَ تَوْبَتُهُمْ ۚ وَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الضَّآلُّوْنَ ﴿٩١﴾

91. [d]Surely, those who disbelieve after they have believed and then increase in disbelief, their repentance shall not be accepted,[437] and these are they who have gone astray.

[a]2:162; 4:53; 5:79. [b]2:163. [c]2:161; 4:147; 5:40; 24:6. [d]4:138; 63:4.

436. Certainly a people, who at first believe in the truth of a Prophet and proclaim their belief openly in him and become witnesses of Heavenly Signs but afterwards reject him through fear of men or other worldly considerations, lose all title to be again guided to the right path. Or the verse may refer to those who believed in the former Prophets but rejected the Holy Prophet.

436A. Mere repentance and sorrow at past misdeeds is not sufficient to secure Divine forgiveness; an honest promise to eschew evil ways and a firm resolve to reform others also is needed for the purpose.

437. The verse does not mean that the repentance of apostates shall in no case be accepted because this inference runs counter to 3:90 according to which repentance is acceptable at every stage. Reference here is to those persons only who make a profession of repentance and, instead of reinforcing their profession by bringing about a real and practical change in their lives, actually increase in disbelief.

إِنَّ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا وَمَاتُوا وَهُمْ كُفَّارٌ فَلَنْ يُقْبَلَ مِنْ أَحَدِهِمْ مِلْءُ الْأَرْضِ ذَهَبًا وَلَوِ افْتَدَىٰ بِهِ ۗ أُولَٰئِكَ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌ وَمَا لَهُمْ مِنْ نَاصِرِينَ ﴿٩١﴾

92. As for [a]those who have disbelieved, and die while they are disbelievers, there shall not be accepted from anyone of them even the earthful of gold though he offer it as ransom. It is these for whom shall be a grievous punishment, and they shall have no helpers.

PART IV

R. 10.

لَنْ تَنَالُوا الْبِرَّ حَتَّىٰ تُنْفِقُوا مِمَّا تُحِبُّونَ ۚ وَمَا تُنْفِقُوا مِنْ شَيْءٍ فَإِنَّ اللَّهَ بِهِ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٩٢﴾

93. [b]You cannot attain to righteousness[438] unless you spend out of that which you love; and whatever you spend, Allāh surely knows it well.

كُلُّ الطَّعَامِ كَانَ حِلًّا لِبَنِي إِسْرَائِيلَ إِلَّا مَا حَرَّمَ إِسْرَائِيلُ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِهِ مِنْ قَبْلِ أَنْ تُنَزَّلَ التَّوْرَاةُ ۗ قُلْ فَأْتُوا بِالتَّوْرَاةِ فَاتْلُوهَا إِنْ كُنْتُمْ صَادِقِينَ ﴿٩٣﴾

94. All food was lawful[439] to the Children of Israel,[440] except what Israel forbade himself before the Torah was sent down. Say, 'Bring, then, the Torah and read it, if you are truthful.'

[a]2:162; 4:19; 47:35. [b]9:34,111; 63:11.

438. In order to attain true faith, which is the essence of all righteousness and is the highest form of good, one must be prepared to sacrifice everything that one holds dear. The highest stage of righteousness can be attained only by spending in the way of God that which one loves best. High morals (Birr) cannot be attained without imbibing a true spirit of sacrifice.

439. Certain foods which the Jews abstained from were allowed by Islām. One such thing was the sciatic nerve, to which reference is made in Gen. 32:32. Jacob suffered from sciatica, and, for medical reasons he forbade himself the sciatic nerve as food. This was his personal matter but the Israelites made it a rule of conduct to abstain from eating the sinew.

440. The name Israel was bestowed upon Jacob in a vision (Gen. 32:28).

95. Now, whoso forges a lie against Allāh after this,[441] then it is these that are the wrongdoers.

قُلْ صَدَقَ اللّٰهُ ۫ فَاتَّبِعُوْا مِلَّةَ اِبْرٰهِيْمَ حَنِيْفًا ؕ وَمَا كَانَ مِنَ الْمُشْرِكِيْنَ ﴿٩٦﴾

96. Say, 'Allāh has declared the truth; follow, therefore, the religion of Abraham [a]who was ever inclined to Allāh;[442] and he was not of those who associate gods with Him.'

441. Dhālika refers to the statement made in the preceding verse. To say that such and such parts of food were disallowed by God whereas He had not forbidden them, amounted to forging a lie against God.

442. By saying that Abraham was ever obedient to God, the verse hints that he did not prohibit the eating of any particular food of his own accord, as the Israelites have done. It purports to say that by differing from the Israelites in this matter, Islām does not go against the way and the practice of the Prophets of God, particularly that of Abraham.

443. Becca is the name given to the Valley of Mecca, the mīm of Mecca being changed into bā'. These two letters are interchangeable as in Lāzim and Lāzib. The Qur'ān here draws the attention of the People of the Book to the remote antiquity of the Ka'bah in order to point out that it is the real and original centre of God's religion; those adopted by Jews and Christians being of later origin. See also 2:128.

444. After alluding to the historical evidence in favour of the Ka'bah, the Qur'ān proceeds to adduce three reasons to show that the Ka'bah is entitled to be adopted as the Qiblah or the Centre of God's religion for all times: (a) Abraham, the great Patriarch prayed here; (b) it gives peace and security; (c) it shall ever remain the Centre to which men from different countries and diverse nations will resort for Pilgrimage.

445. Shahīd means, one who gives information of what he witnesses; one possessing much knowledge; a person slain in the way of God. When used about God the word signifies, He from Whose knowledge nothing is hidden (Lane).

446. The meaning is: 'You desire that there should appear crookedness in Islām;' or "you desire to pervert its tenets."

[a]4:147, 176. [b]2:133. [c]3:106; 6:160; 8:47. [d]2:232. [e]8:64.

447. (1) Whoever preserves himself from sin by acting upon God's commandments; (2) whoever establishes a connection with Allāh and cleaves firmly to Him.

448. As the hour of death is not known, one can be sure of dying in a state of resignation to God only when one remains continually in that condition; hence the expression signifies that one should always remain obedient to God.

449. Ḥabl means, a rope or cord with which a thing is tied or made fast; a bond; a covenant or compact; an obligation by which one becomes responsible for the safety of a person or thing; alliance and protection (Lane). The Holy Prophet is reported to have said, 'The Book of God is the rope of Allāh which has been extended from the heavens to the earth' (Jarīr, iv. 30).

450. It will be hard to find a more disunited people than the Arabs before the Holy Prophet appeared among them, but, at the same time, human history fails to provide any example of the bond of loving brotherhood into which the Arabs were united by the noble teaching and example of their great Master.

451. The words "on the brink of a pit of fire" signify the internecine

106. And be not like those who became [b]divided and who disagreed[454] among themselves after clear proofs had come to them. And it is they for whom there shall be grievous punishment, warfare in which the Arabs were constantly engaged and which was consuming their manpower.

452. Al-Khair here signifies Islām, because goodness in general is included in the word Ma'rūf occurring immediately after it.

453. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said, 'If anyone of you sees anything evil, let him remove it with his hand. If he cannot do so with his hand, then let him forbid it with his tongue. If he cannot do even that, then let him at least hate it in his heart, and that is the weakest kind of faith' (Muslim).

454. The verse refers to disunity and dissensions among the People of the Book in order to bring home to Muslims the dangers of discord and disagreement.

455. The Qur'ān has explained "whiteness" and "blackness" as emblematic of "happiness" and "sorrow" respectively (3:107, 108; 75:23-25; 80:39-41). When a person does a deed for which he is praised, the Arabs say of him: Ibyaḍḍa Wajhu-hū, i.e. the face of such a one has become white. And when he does a deed for which he is reproached, it is said of him Iswadda Wajhu-hū, i.e. his face has become black.

اَكَفَرْتُمْ بَعْدَ اِيْمَانِكُمْ فَذُوْقُوا الْعَذَابَ بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَكْفُرُوْنَ ﴿١٠٧﴾

As for those whose faces will be black, it will be said to them: 'Did you disbelieve after believing? Taste, then, the punishment because you disbelieved.'

وَاَمَّا الَّذِيْنَ ابْيَضَّتْ وُجُوْهُهُمْ فَفِيْ رَحْمَةِ اللّٰهِ ؕ هُمْ فِيْهَا خٰلِدُوْنَ ﴿١٠٨﴾

456. The expression Bil-Ḥaqq (lit. 'with truth' and translated as, comprising the truth) signifies, firstly, that these Signs or words of God are full of truth; secondly, they have come as a matter of right, i.e. you had a right to receive them; thirdly, this was the proper time for their revelation. See also 364.

457. The verse not only claims that the Muslims are the best people—a big claim indeed—but also gives reasons for it: (1) They have been raised for the good of all mankind; and (2) it is their duty to enjoin good and forbid evil and believe in one God. The glory of the Muslims is subject to and governed by these two conditions.

They have incurred the wrath of Allāh, and have been smitten with wretchedness. [c]That is because they rejected the Signs of Allāh and sought to slay the Prophets unjustly. That is because they rebelled and used to transgress.

458. The verse contains an important and far-reaching prophecy regarding the Jews, viz. that they are for ever doomed to disgrace and humiliation and to live in subjection to others. The history of the Jewish people from the time of the Holy Prophet up to the present day bears eloquent testimony to the truth of this awful prophecy. In all countries and in all ages, the present age of enlightenment and toleration not excepted, the Jews have been the victim of bitter persecution and have been subjected to diverse kinds of disgrace and humiliation. The establishment of the State of Israel is but a temporary phase in the life of Jewry.

459. The words Ummatun Qā'imatun may also mean: (1) A party or people who perform fully and faithfully their duties; (2) a people who stand up for Prayer in the latter part of the night. The words refer only to those Jews who had embraced Islām.

460. Islām is not a national or tribal religion. Whoever joins it, no matter what community or creed he comes from, receives the same reward as any other follower of the Faith, provided, of course, he acts righteously. No prejudicial treatment is meted out to the members of any particular nationality. A Jew, and for that matter any other person, after embracing Islām is on par with an Arab Muslim.

461. The idea underlying this verse is that the efforts of the disbelievers against Islām will recoil on themselves. Whatever they do or spend with a view to injuring the cause of Islām will only injure themselves.

462. Khabāl means, corruption whether of body or reason or actions; loss or deterioration; ruin or destruction; fatal poison (Aqrab).

463. They love to see you fall into calamity or misfortune; to perish or to become weak and broken; or they love to see that you deviate from the path of righteousness and take to a life of sin.

465. The words, Perish in your rage, have been addressed to such Jews as are the enemies of Islām and seek to destroy it.

466. God will bring to naught all their doings and will destroy them. Muslims should not therefore fear them. All machinations of the enemies of Islām are known to God, and He will frustrate them.

467. The reference is to the Battle of Uḥud. In order to wipe out the humiliation of their defeat at Badr, the Quraish of Mecca, in the third year of the Hijrah marched against Medina with a well-equipped army of 3,000 seasoned warriors. Much against his own wish the Holy Prophet with a force of 1,000 including 300 followers of 'Abdullāh b. Ubayy, the notorious Hypocrite who afterwards defected, marched out of Medina to meet the enemy. The encounter took place near Uḥud.

468. The two parties were the two tribes of Banū Salimah and Banū Ḥārithah, belonging respectively to Khazraj and Aus (Bukhārī, Kitābul-Maghāzī). The verse indicates that they did not actually show cowardice, but seeing that by the defection of 'Abdullāh's 300 followers, the small Muslim army had been further greatly depleted, they only thought of deserting but in fact did not do so.

469. Badr is the name of a place on the route between Mecca and Medina. It takes its name from a spring which belonged to a man named Badr. The Battle of Badr referred to here took place near this place.

470. As mistakenly understood these words do not refer to the Battle of Badr which has been mentioned in the preceding verse only incidentally in order to cite an illustration of how God helped the steadfast Muslims in time of danger. The number of angels sent at the Battle of Badr was, according to 8:10, one thousand as the number of the enemy was then one thousand. In the Battle of Uḥud the number of the enemy was 3,000, so the Muslims were also promised the help of 3,000 angels. The fulfilment of the present promise is referred to in 3:153.

بَلٰٓى ۙ اِنۡ تَصۡبِرُوۡا وَتَتَّقُوۡا وَيَاۡتُوۡكُمۡ مِّنۡ فَوۡرِهِمۡ هٰذَا يُمۡدِدۡكُمۡ رَبُّكُمۡ بِخَمۡسَةِ اٰلٰفٍ مِّنَ الۡمَلٰٓئِكَةِ مُسَوِّمِيۡنَ ﴿۱۲۶﴾

127. And [a]Allāh has made it only as glad tidings for you and to put your hearts at rest[474] thereby; and help

[a]8:11.

471. The word balā also denotes a connection between the verses and supplies the answer to the question in 3:125, viz. Will it not suffice you? Thus the meaning would be: "Yes, it will suffice us, and so will suffice a force of 5,000 angels if the enemy were to return to the attack at this very moment."

472. The words signify that if the disbelievers returned to the attack at once, without giving the Muslims any time to recoup themselves, God would help them with 5,000 angels. The difference in the number of angels—in the preceding verse the number mentioned being 3,000—was due to the later greatly weakened condition of the Muslims. They were at that time exhausted and badly mauled and, therefore, needed greater help. After having gone to some distance towards Mecca the Quraish decided to return and attack the Muslims again. When the Holy Prophet came to know of this, on the day following the battle, he gave immediate orders to march and directed that only those of his followers who had taken part in the Battle of Uḥud should go with him. The Muslims went as far as Ḥamrā'ul-Asad, a place about eight miles from Medina. The Meccans were, however, so overawed by this unexpectedly bold and prompt appearance of the Holy Prophet and his followers that they decided to retreat hastily to Mecca. This was due to the fear which the angels had cast into their hearts. Otherwise there was no reason for them to flee from Muslims upon whom they had inflicted so heavy a loss only a day before and who, besides being very much reduced in number, were greatly exhausted and were suffering from grievous wounds as a result of the previous day's fighting.

473. Musawwimīn is derived from Sawwama. They say Sawwama 'Alaihim, i.e. he suddenly and vehemently attacked them and wrought havoc among them (Aqrab).

474. The angels helped Muslims on the one hand, by strengthening their hearts, and, on the other, by filling the hearts of their enemies with awe and fear. If God had so willed, a single angel would have been enough to help the Muslims at Uḥud, but He promised to send as many as five thousand of them. This constituted a veiled hint that a large number of the hidden forces of comes from Allāh alone, the Mighty, the Wise.

nature would work in their favour. It may incidentally be noted that some believers, and even some disbelievers, are reported to have actually seen angels in the Battle of Badr (Jarīr, iv. 47). See also 8:10.

475. When the Holy Prophet learnt that the Meccans were contemplating an immediate attack on Medina, he marched against them. The Meccans fled in disgrace and abasement.

476. This verse is erroneously considered to contain an admonition to the Holy Prophet for his having prayed to God to destroy the Meccans. There is no mention of any such prayer here, nor was there any occasion for such a one. In fact, a Prophet never prays for the destruction of any people without the permission of God. The verse is meant only as an answer to those who attributed the reverse of Muslims at Uḥud to the alleged error of their leaving the city against the advice of experienced men. It says that the temporary reverse was brought about by the supreme wisdom of God and that the Holy Prophet had nothing to do with the matter. One good result of this reverse was that many disbelievers were guided to Islām, among them being the famous Khālid. They saw how God had helped the Holy Prophet in the hour of distress and how He had afforded him protection although, at one time, he was left all by himself in the battle.

477. The words Aḍ'āfan Muḍā'afah are not used here as a qualifying phrase to restrict the meaning of Ribā (interest) so as to confine it to a particular kind of interest. They are used as a descriptive clause to point to the inherent nature of Ribā (interest) which continually goes on increasing. The charging of interest, although now legalized by Christian nations, was prohibited by Moses (Exod. 22:25; Lev. 25:36, 37; Deut. 23:19, 20). The verse does not mean that interest is permissible at a moderate rate, only a high rate having been disallowed. All interest is prohibited, whether moderate or excessive; and the words Aḍ'āfan Muḍā'afah rendered as, involving multiple additions, have been added only to point to the practice actually in vogue in the time of the Holy Prophet. Thus the extreme limit has been mentioned merely to bring out its heinousness, otherwise, all interest is prohibited, as clearly stated in 2:276-281. Mention of the commandment about the prohibition of interest while dealing with the subject of war is significant. In 2:280 also prohibition of interest has been mentioned in connection with the subject of war. This shows that war and interest are closely related to each other—a fact amply borne out by the wars of modern times. As a matter of fact, interest is one of the causes of war, and also helps to prolong it.

478. In 2:276 also the prohibition of interest has been followed by a warning against fire. Evidently, it is the fire of war that is primarily meant here. The word "disbelievers," besides being general, may here mean those who disobey the Divine commandment about interest.

479. 'Arḍ means, (1) price or value of a thing in a form other than money; (2) breadth or width; (3) vastness (Aqrab).

479A. This verse is an answer to those who, obsessed by their present environments, think that commerce and trade cannot be carried on without interest. It says that by following the teachings of Islām, Muslims can and will enjoy all sorts of benefits. The verse constitutes an invitation to Muslims to follow the commandments of Islām. It also signifies that Paradise will comprise both heavens and earth, i.e. the believers will be in Paradise both in this life and in the life to come. A well-known saying of the Holy Prophet throws interesting light on the nature of Paradise and Hell. When asked, "If Paradise encompasses both the heavens and the earth, where is Hell," the Prophet replied, "Where is night when the day comes" (Kathīr)? He is further reported to have said that the smallest reward of Paradise will be as great as the space between heaven and earth. This also shows that Paradise is a spiritual state and not a particular physical place.

480. A man is said to exercise the quality of 'Afw when he obliterates from his mind, or totally forgets, the sins or offences committed against him by others. When used with reference to God, it signifies not only obliteration of sins but also of all traces thereof.

481. The verse mentions three stages of 'Afw. In the first stage a believer, when offended against, restrains or suppresses his anger. In the second stage, he goes a step further and grants forgiveness and free pardon to the offender. In the third stage, he not only grants the offender complete pardon, but also does an additional act of kindness to him and bestows some favour upon him. These three stages—suppression of anger, pardoning, and doing of good—are well illustrated by an incident in the life of Ḥasan, son of 'Alī and a grandson of the Holy Prophet. A slave of his once committed an offence and Ḥasan became very angry and was about to punish him when the slave recited the first part of the verse, i.e. those who suppress anger. Hearing these words, Ḥasan withheld his hand. Then the slave recited the words, and pardon men, upon which Ḥasan promptly pardoned him. The slave then recited, and Allāh

486. In means, if; not; verily; because; when; etc. (Lane).

487. The verse embodies a very important principle how a nation or an individual can become and remain strong, the words "slacken not" being related to future dangers and "grieve not" to past errors and misfortunes. Nations decline and fall only when, either through lack of true realization of their responsibilities they begin to slacken in their efforts, or through brooding over the past, they give way to despair. The verse warns against both these dangers.

488. Elsewhere (3:166), it is said that Muslims inflicted upon disbelievers an injury double of what they themselves had suffered. This refers to the Battle of Badr, when seventy Meccans were killed and seventy were taken prisoner, thus making a total of 140. In the Battle of Uḥud, on the other hand, seventy Muslims were killed, but not one of them was taken prisoner. Thus Muslims had inflicted on the disbelievers a double injury in the Battle of Badr compared with what they themselves suffered in the Battle of Uḥud. Taking into account, however, only those killed in the two battles, the loss of Muslims and disbelievers has been spoken of in the present verse as similar. Or the verse might be taken to refer to the nature or quality of the misfortune, which was alike in both cases. In that case verse 166 below might be taken to refer to the quantity and the present verse to the quality of the loss.

knowledge. It is only the act of distinguishing between two things that is meant here. Knowledge ('Ilm) is of two kinds. One kind of knowledge consists in knowing a thing before it comes into existence; and the other in knowing when, and as, it actually comes into existence. Here it is the latter kind of knowledge that is meant.

490. The Faithful bear witness to the truth of Islām by their steadfastness and by the noble example they set in time of misfortune.

491. The reverse suffered by Muslims at Uḥud served as a sort of atonement for their lapse. Besides, the battle made some disbelievers realize that Islām was God's own religion. The very Meccans who took a leading part against the Muslims in that battle converted to Islām not long after the battle. Islām had conquered their hearts, "destroying" their erstwhile disbelief.

492. It is trials and afflictions which test the mettle of a man; and there can be no spiritual advance or purification without them.

493. "Death" here stands for war, for the result of war is death. War, as it were, meant death for the Muslims, who were extremely weak, both in equipment and numbers compared with their powerful enemy. In the Battle of Uḥud the Holy Prophet proposed to fight the enemy from inside Medina, but some of his Companions, particularly those, who had not taken part in the Battle of Badr, said, "We had longed for this day. Let us go out to fight our enemies, lest they think we are cowards" (Zurqānī, i. 22). It is to this desire of the Muslims that reference is made in the words, you used to wish for such a death.

494. A false report was spread at Uḥud that the Holy Prophet had been killed. The verse refers to that incident and purports to say that although the report was untrue, yet even if it had been true and the Prophet had in fact been killed, that should not have made the Faithful waver in their faith. Muḥammad was only a Prophet; and as other Prophets before him had died, so would he. But the God of Islām is Ever Living. It is on record that when the Holy Prophet died, 'Umar stood up in the Mosque at Medina with a drawn sword in his hand and said, "Whoever will say that the Prophet of God is dead, I will cut off his head. He is not dead, but has gone to his Lord (he has ascended to heaven), even as Moses had gone to his Lord, and he would come back and punish the Hypocrites." Abū Bakr coming on the scene firmly told 'Umar to sit down and addressing the Muslims who had gathered in the Mosque, recited this very verse which convinced them that the Prophet was really dead and so they were overwhelmed with grief. The verse incidentally establishes the fact that all the Prophets before the Holy Prophet, had died; for if any of them had been alive, the verse could not have been quoted as proof of the Holy Prophet's death. In fact, Islām does not depend for its life on any individual, however great. God is its Revealer and its Protector and Guardian. But the verse should not be understood to mean that the Holy Prophet could ever be killed in war or at the hand of an assassin. He was promised Divine protection from all harm to his life (5:68). The enemy had rejoiced when the false report went round that the Prophet was dead. But it proved a blessing in disguise for Muslims. It prepared them for the great strain which his actual death was to

497. Muslims are not enjoined to eschew dealings with all non-Muslims; they are warned against following only such disbelievers as are the active enemies of Islām.

498. Idolatry springs from superstition and fear; and one possessed of superstition and fear can never be truly brave.

promise[499] when you were slaying and destroying them by His leave, until, when your courage failed you[500] and you disputed among yourselves concerning the order[501] and you disobeyed[502] after He had shown you that which you loved, He withdrew His help. Among you were those who desired the present world,[503] and among you were those who desired the Hereafter. Then He turned you away from them, that He might try you—and He has surely pardoned you, and Allāh is Gracious to the believers—

499. The "promise" refers to the general promise of victory and success repeatedly given to Muslims, particularly in 3:124-126.

500. The verse refers to the party of archers posted in the rear of the Muslim army at Uḥud, and points out that they could not resist the temptation of taking part in actual fighting and in sharing the booty, and their failure to control that desire was an act of cowardice on their part. It is indeed the heart which is the seat of true bravery and courage.

501. The "order" may refer either to the order of the Holy Prophet given to the party of archers on the hill not to leave their station without his permission, or to its import and significance, i.e. whether the Holy Prophet had really meant them to stay there even after the battle had been won; some saying that he did mean it and others alleging that he did not.

502. Muslims stationed at the hill paid no heed to their leader, 'Abdullāh b. Jubair, who, in compliance with the order of the Holy Prophet, told them not to quit the place, even if victory was within sight. They could not control themselves, and the result was that their act caused great suffering to Muslims.

503. The words refer to those archers who quitted the place at which they had been stationed. The Arabic clause may also signify that some members of the party desired the present world, i.e. taking part in the fighting and collecting the booty, while others (viz. 'Abdullāh b. Jubair and those of his comrades who did not quit their posts) desired the Hereafter, i.e. they thought of the ultimate consequence of disobeying the command of the Holy Prophet. Some were short-sighted, while others were far-sighted.

504. The words refer to the incident which happened when in the Battle of Uḥud the Muslims were attacked from both the rear and the front and their ranks were broken and many of them fled in confusion in different directions. At first, when they heard that the enemy was coming from behind, they turned back to attack him, but it so happened that at that time a large body of Muslims was also coming from that direction. In the confusion those Muslims were mistaken for the enemy and were attacked. So great was the confusion and the panic that even the voice of the Holy Prophet was not heeded.

505. The Holy Prophet had stationed a party of archers at the hill. They abandoned their positions prematurely, thinking that the battle had been won. Consequently, the victory which was almost within the grasp of the Muslims became converted into a near defeat. It naturally caused a sorrow to them. This was the first sorrow. The second or the later sorrow was that which they felt at the unfounded report of the death of the Holy Prophet. God so designed that the sorrow pertaining to the unfounded report of the Prophet's death (the later sorrow) should come after the sorrow of the reverse which the Muslims had suffered (the first sorrow), in order that the later sorrow should remove the effect of the former sorrow at seeing that the Holy Prophet was safe. The words Ghammam bi-Ghammin also mean, sorrow upon sorrow.

505A. The words "what escaped you" signify, the victory which was almost within the grasp of the Muslims and "what befell you" signify the reverse they suffered and the loss of Muslims killed.

506. The reference in the verse is again to the Battle of Uḥud. Abū Ṭalḥah overcame a party of you—while the other party[506A] was anxious concerning their ownselves. They entertained about Allāh wrong thoughts like unto the thoughts of ignorance. They say, [a]'If we had any part in the determination of affairs, we should not have been killed here.' says, "I lifted my head on the day of Uḥud and began to look about, and saw that there was none among us on that day whose head had not bent down on account of slumber" (Kathīr ii. 303). As sleep or slumber is a sign of mental peace and tranquillity, the Qur'ān refers to the incident as a Divine favour. The incident evidently occurred when the battle was practically over and the Muslims had returned to the neighbouring hill.

506A. The reference is to the Hypocrites who had remained behind at Medina. They were more concerned about their own security than about the honour of Islām and the security of the Holy Prophet and the Muslims. The words, we should not have been killed here, occurring a few lines further, mean, "If we had any voice in the determination of affairs and if our advice had been accepted, we, i.e. our brethren, would not have been killed in the battle," the insinuation being that the Muslims were foolish enough to march to the battlefield against heavy odds, while they (the Hypocrites) had wisely refrained from going with them. According to Quranic idiom the slaying of one's self sometimes signifies the slaying of one's brethren or companions (2:55, 86).

506B. Qatl has been used here in the sense of, Qitāl, i.e. fighting (Muḥīṭ & Kashshāf). See 2:192 and Jarīr under 3:155.

157. O ye who believe! be not like those who have 506C. The word "death-beds" has been used in order to point to the abject cowardice of the Hypocrites on the one hand, and the steadfast devotion of the believers on the other. It reminds the Hypocrites that while they had deserted and returned to Medina, thinking that fighting in the circumstances was sure death, such was the firm faith of the believers that even if they (the Hypocrites) had kept back from the very beginning they (the believers) would have cheerfully gone forth to the battlefield—or the place of death, as it was thought to be. All this happened that God might purify the Faithful.

507. The reference is again to the Battle of Uḥud.

507A. The word "stumble," mentioned in the verse, refers to the disobeying of the orders given to the party stationed at the hill or the running away of some Muslims from the battlefield.

508. The words seem to contain an implied praise for the archers at the hill who misinterpreting the Holy Prophet's orders left their post, meaning that only "certain" of their misdeeds had brought them this temporary disgrace, otherwise they were really loyal and obedient to the Holy Prophet.

disbelieved, and who say of their brethren when they travel in the land[509] or go forth to war: 'Had they been with us, they would not have died or been slain.' They say this that Allāh may make it a cause of regret in their hearts.[510] And Allāh gives life and causes death and Allāh is Mindful of what you do.

وَلَئِنْ قُتِلْتُمْ فِيْ سَبِيْلِ اللّٰهِ اَوْ مُتُّمْ

وَلَئِنْ مُّتُّمْ اَوْ قُتِلْتُمْ لَاِلَى اللّٰهِ

159. And if you[513] die or be slain, [b]surely unto Allāh shall you all be gathered together.

[a]10:59; 43:33. [b]5:97; 6:73; 8:25; 23:80.

509. When they travel in the land in the cause of God.

510. The object of disbelievers was to frighten the Muslims in order to make them keep away from fighting, but the Muslims, far from being discouraged by such warnings, became all the more firm in their resolve to fight the disbelievers. This filled the disbelievers with regret for having made the effort which produced a result opposite to that which they had desired.

511. He who fights and lays down his life in the cause of Truth should not be regarded as dead, because he gives his life for the sake of Him Who is the Controller of all life. He may be regarded as physically dead; spiritually he lives forever (2:155).

512. Whereas, hypocrites are afraid of death because of the wealth and property which they have to leave behind, the believers, killed in the cause of Allāh, will get what is incomparably greater than what hypocrites are greedily hoarding up, or what Muslims themselves may have collected in the form of wealth and other worldly things.

513. The pronoun "you" includes both hypocrites and believers; for all will be gathered unto God for reward or punishment, as the case may be.

وَاسْتَغْفِرْ لَهُمْ وَشَاوِرْهُمْ فِي الْاَمْرِ ۚ
فَاِذَا عَزَمْتَ فَتَوَكَّلْ عَلَى اللّٰهِ ۗ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ

160. And it is by the great mercy of Allāh that thou art kind[514] towards them, and if thou hadst been rough and hard-hearted, they would surely have dispersed from around thee. So pardon them and ask forgiveness for them, and [a]consult[515] them in matters of administration; and when thou art resolved, then put thy trust in Allāh. Surely, Allāh loves those who put their trust in Him.

514. The words give an insight into the beautiful character of the Holy Prophet, of which the most effable and prominent trait was his all-comprehensive mercy. He was full of the milk of human kindness and was not only kind towards his Companions and followers but was also full of mercy and sympathy for his enemies who were always on the lookout to stab him in the back. It is on record that he took no action against those treacherous Hypocrites who had deserted him in the Battle of Uḥud. He even consulted them in affairs of State.

515. Besides other things Islām is unique in this respect that it has included the institution of Mushāwarah (consultation) in its basic principles. It has made it binding upon the Head of the Muslim State that he should consult Muslims in all important affairs of the State. The Holy Prophet used to consult his followers in all important matters, as he did before the battles of Badr, Uḥud, and Aḥzāb, and also when a false accusation was brought against his noble wife, 'Ā'ishah. Abū Hurairah says: "The Holy Prophet was most solicitous in consulting others in all matters of importance" (Manthūr ii. 90). 'Umar, the Second Successor of the Holy Prophet, is reported to have said: There is no Khilāfat without consultation" (Izālatul-Khifā' 'an Khilāfatil-Khulafā'). Thus the holding of consultation in important matters is a basic injunction of Islām and is binding on both spiritual and temporal Muslim Chiefs. The Khalīfah or the Head of the Muslim State must seek the advice of representative Muslims though the final decision may rest with him. The Islamic Shūrā or Mushāwarah is not a parliament in the sense in which the word is understood in the West. The Head of the Muslim State enjoys a certain discretion in rejecting the advice tendered to him. But he should not lightly use this discretion and should respect the advice of the majority.

اِنۡ يَّنۡصُرۡكُمُ اللّٰهُ فَلَا غَالِبَ لَكُمۡ ۚ وَاِنۡ يَّخۡذُلۡكُمۡ فَمَنۡ ذَا الَّذِىۡ يَنۡصُرُكُمۡ مِّنۡۢ بَعۡدِهٖ ؕ وَعَلَى اللّٰهِ فَلۡيَتَوَكَّلِ الۡمُؤۡمِنُوۡنَ ﴿۱۶۱﴾

516. The expression, Min Ba'dihī, translated as, "beside Him," literally means, "after Him" and may be rendered as "in opposition to Him."

517. The archers stationed by the Holy Prophet at the hill of Uḥud to protect the rear of the Muslim army left their posts (not all of them) when they saw the Meccan army in full flight. They thought that by leaving the hill at that stage they were not contravening the spirit of the Prophet's orders, which were to the effect that they were not to leave their posts in any circumstances. They further thought that as, according to Arab custom a soldier was entitled to the possession of the booty he laid his hand on during the fight they might be deprived of their share of the spoils of war if they stuck to their posts. This precipitate action of the archers implied an apprehension on their part that the Holy Prophet might ignore their right to the booty. It is this apprehension that is condemned here. But no imputation of actual faithlessness to the Holy Prophet is implied. The verse simply purports to say that it was far from the Holy Prophet to ignore the rights to the booty of those whom he himself had stationed at a certain place.

518. Undaunted by the defection of the Hypocrites at Uḥud, which considerably weakened the ranks of Muslims, the Holy Prophet proceeded to fight the enemies of Islām. The Hypocrites, on the other hand, by their act of desertion, drew upon themselves the wrath of God.

519. The words, Hum Darajātun, mean "they are possessors of ranks;" the word, 'ulū, is understood before the word Darajāt.

520. The words are intended to awaken in the hearts of Muslims a desire to follow the example of the Holy Prophet, who was like them and was one of them.

521. The words refer to the Battle of Badr, when 70 Meccans were killed and 70 taken prisoner. At Uḥud, 70 Muslims were killed, none being taken prisoner. Thus the Muslims had already inflicted a double loss on the Meccans.

522. As for the real cause of man's actions, both the good and evil ones are said to emanate from him, because he is their author, but as it is God Who, as the final Judge, brings about the results of those actions, whether good or bad, they can equally be said to proceed from Him (4:79). In this sense, both the good and evil results of man's actions would be attributed to God.[523.] Trials and tribulations are intended to distinguish true believers from those weak of faith. In this way, the sufferings of the Muslims at Uḥud proved a blessing in disguise. They served to distinguish the true believers from the Hypocrites who had so far remained mixed up with true believers.

[524.] The particle au rendered as "and" literally means "or" and is equivalent to "in other words," or "what is the same thing as" etc.

[525.] The expression, Lau Na'lamu Qitālan, may mean: (1) If we knew that there would be fighting, i.e. we knew that there would be no fighting and that the Muslims would at once run away before their very powerful enemy without giving fight. (2) If we knew it to be a fight, i.e. it was no fight in which the Muslims were going to be engaged but rather their certain destruction in view of the appalling difference between the numbers and equipment of the opposing forces. (3) If we knew how to fight. In this case, the words may be taken to have been spoken ironically, signifying: "We are unaware of the art of war; if we had been acquainted with it, we would have fought along with you." The allusion in the verse is obviously to the defection at Uḥud of a party of 300 Hypocrites under their leader 'Abdullāh b. Ubayy, who deserted the Muslims and went back to Medina.

171. Jubilant[528] because of that which Allāh has given them of His bounty; and rejoicing for the sake of those who have not yet joined them from behind them, because on [d]them shall come no fear, nor shall they grieve.

526. The words "said of their brethren" may mean "said concerning their brethren," i.e. Muslims; or "talked among themselves about the Muslims."

527. Amwāt is the plural of Mayyit which, besides meaning a dead person, signifies, (1) one whose blood has not been avenged; (2) one who leaves behind no successors; (3) one stricken with sorrow and grief.

528. The martyrs are glad that their brethren, who are left behind in the world and will follow them later, will soon triumph over their enemies, i.e. after death the veils are removed and the martyrs are given the knowledge of the victories in store for the Muslims. They receive good tidings concerning their brethren, i.e. the angels of God keep them informed of the later successes and victories of Islām.

173. Those who [b]answered the call of Allāh and the Messenger after they had received an injury[529]— such of them as do good and act righteously shall have a great reward;

[a]7:171; 9:129; 11:116. [b]8:25.

529. The reference here and in the next verse is to the two expeditions which the Holy Prophet led against the Meccans after the Battle of Uḥud. The first was undertaken on the day immediately following the battle. When the Meccans withdrew from Uḥud, they were taunted by some Arab tribes for having brought no booty and no prisoners of war from a battle in which they claimed to have won a victory. They, therefore, thought of returning to Medina with a view to re-attacking the Muslims and completing their victory. The Holy Prophet had anticipated their return; so he called upon those of his Companions who had taken part in the Battle of Uḥud to join him in the expedition against them and on the following day he left Medina with 250 men. When the Meccans heard of this, they lost heart and fled. The Holy Prophet went as far as Ḥamrā'ul-Asad, a distance of about eight miles from Medina on the route to Mecca and seeing that the enemy had fled, returned to Medina. The second expedition came a year later. Before leaving the battlefield of Uḥud, Abū Sufyān, commander of the Meccan army, had promised the Muslims another engagement next year at Badr. But the ensuing year being a year of famine, he could not carry out his boast. But he sent Nu'aim b. Mas'ūd to Medina to intimidate the Muslims by spreading false rumours of great preparations having been made by the Meccans. This clumsy ruse, however, completely failed to frighten the Muslims, who came to Badr at the appointed time, only to find that the Meccans had not come. This expedition is known as the expedition of Badruṣ-Ṣughrā (the Smaller Badr) to distinguish it from the great Battle of Badr which had taken place about two years earlier.

530. The reference is to the false rumours spread by Nu'aim b. Mas'ūd.

اِيْمَانًا ۖ وَّقَالُوْا حَسْبُنَا اللّٰهُ وَنِعْمَ الْوَكِيْلُ ﴿۱۷۴﴾

175. So they returned with a mighty favour from Allāh and a great bounty,[531] while no evil had touched them; and they followed [a]the pleasure of Allāh; and Allāh is the Lord of great bounty.

اِنَّمَا ذٰلِكُمُ الشَّيْطٰنُ يُخَوِّفُ اَوْلِيَاۗءَهٗ ۠ فَلَا تَخَافُوْهُمْ وَخَافُوْنِ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُّؤْمِنِيْنَ ﴿۱۷۶﴾

176. It is Satan who only frightens [b]his friends,[532] so fear them not but fear Me, if you are believers.

وَلَا يَحْزُنْكَ الَّذِيْنَ يُسَارِعُوْنَ فِي الْكُفْرِ ۚ اِنَّهُمْ لَنْ يَّضُرُّوا اللّٰهَ شَيْـــًٔا ۭ يُرِيْدُ اللّٰهُ اَلَّا يَجْعَلَ لَهُمْ حَظًّا فِي الْاٰخِرَةِ ۚ وَلَهُمْ عَذَابٌ عَظِيْمٌ ﴿۱۷۷﴾

177. [c]And let not those who hasten to fall into disbelief grieve thee; surely, they cannot harm Allāh[533] in any way. Allāh desires not to assign them any portion in the life to come; and they shall have a severe punishment.

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ اشْتَرَوُا الْكُفْرَ بِالْاِيْمَانِ لَنْ يَّضُرُّوا اللّٰهَ شَيْـــًٔا ۚ وَلَهُمْ عَذَابٌ اَلِيْمٌ ﴿۱۷۸﴾

178. Surely, [d]those who have purchased disbelief at the price of faith cannot harm

[a]2:208, 266; 3:16, 163; 5:3, 17; 9:72; 57:21, 28. [b]7:28; 16:101; 35:7. [c]5:42. [d]2:17, 87; 14:29.

531. The Muslims returned from Badruṣ-Ṣughrā after making great profit by trading at the annual fair held there. This is hinted in the word "bounty."

532. The words mean: (1) Satan tries to make believers fear disbelievers who are his friends. (2) By his plans Satan succeeds in frightening only his friends, the disbelievers.

533. Those who try to harm Islām or the Holy Prophet and his followers, in reality, try to harm God Himself, because the cause of the Holy Prophet is God's own cause.

Allāh at all; and they shall have a grievous punishment.

وَلَا يَحْسَبَنَّ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْٓا اَنَّمَا نُمْلِيْ لَهُمْ خَيْرٌ لِّاَنْفُسِهِمْ ؕ اِنَّمَا نُمْلِيْ لَهُمْ لِيَزْدَادُوْٓا اِثْمًا ۚ وَلَهُمْ عَذَابٌ مُّهِيْنٌ ﴿۱۷۹﴾

179. And let not the disbelievers think that [a]Our granting them respite is good for them; in fact the result of Our granting them respite will only be that[534] they will increase in sin; and they shall have an humiliating punishment.

مَا كَانَ اللّٰهُ لِيَذَرَ الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ عَلٰى مَآ اَنْتُمْ عَلَيْهِ حَتّٰى يَمِيْزَ الْخَبِيْثَ مِنَ الطَّيِّبِ ؕ وَمَا كَانَ اللّٰهُ لِيُطْلِعَكُمْ عَلَى الْغَيْبِ وَلٰكِنَّ اللّٰهَ يَجْتَبِيْ مِنْ رُّسُلِهٖ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ ۪ فَاٰمِنُوْا بِاللّٰهِ وَرُسُلِهٖ ۚ وَاِنْ تُؤْمِنُوْا وَتَتَّقُوْا فَلَكُمْ اَجْرٌ عَظِيْمٌ ﴿۱۸۰﴾

180. [b]Allāh would not leave the believers in the state in which you are,[535] until He separated the wicked from the good. Nor would Allāh [c]reveal to you the unseen. But Allāh chooses[536] of His Messengers whom He pleases. Believe, therefore, in Allāh and His Messengers. If you believe and be righteous, you shall have a great reward.

وَلَا يَحْسَبَنَّ الَّذِيْنَ يَبْخَلُوْنَ بِمَآ اٰتٰىهُمُ اللّٰهُ مِنْ فَضْلِهٖ هُوَ خَيْرًا لَّهُمْ ؕ بَلْ هُوَ شَرٌّ

181. And let not those, [d]who are niggardly in spending what Allāh has given them of

[a]22:45. [b]8:38; 29:3-4. [c]72:27-28. [d]4:38; 17:30; 25:68.

534. The particle Lām in the expression Liyazdādū is Lām-e-'Āqibah denoting result.

535. The verse signifies that the trials and tribulations through which Muslims have so far passed would not end soon. There are yet many more in store for them, and they will continue to come till true believers are completely distinguished from hypocrites and those weak of faith.

536. The words do not mean that some of the Messengers are chosen and others are not. They mean that of the persons whom God ordains as His Messengers, He chooses the one most suited for the particular age in which he is raised.

لَّهُمْ ؕ سَيُطَوَّقُوْنَ مَا بَخِلُوْا بِهٖ يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ ؕ وَ لِلّٰهِ مِيْرَاثُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ؕ وَ اللّٰهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُوْنَ خَبِيْرٌ ﴿۱۸۰﴾ ع ۱۹

His bounty, think that it is good for them; nay, it is bad for them. That with respect to which they were niggardly shall be put as a collar round their necks on the Day of Resurrection. And to Allāh belongs the heritage[537] of the heavens and the earth, and Allāh is fully Aware of what you do.

R. 19.

لَقَدْ سَمِعَ اللّٰهُ قَوْلَ الَّذِيْنَ قَالُوْٓا اِنَّ اللّٰهَ فَقِيْرٌ وَّ نَحْنُ اَغْنِيَآءُ ۘ سَنَكْتُبُ مَا قَالُوْا ۚ وَقَتْلَهُمُ الْاَنْۢبِيَآءَ بِغَيْرِ حَقٍّ ۙ وَّ نَقُوْلُ ذُوْقُوْا عَذَابَ الْحَرِيْقِ ﴿۱۸۱﴾

182. And, surely, Allāh has heard the utterance of those who said, [a]'Allāh is poor and we are rich.'[538] We shall record what they have said, and [b]their attempts to slay the Prophets unjustly; and We shall say, 'Taste ye the punishment of burning;

ذٰلِكَ بِمَا قَدَّمَتْ اَيْدِيْكُمْ وَ اَنَّ اللّٰهَ لَيْسَ بِظَلَّامٍ لِّلْعَبِيْدِ ﴿۱۸۲﴾

183. 'That is because of that which your hands have sent on before.' and [c]Allāh is not at all unjust to His servants.

[a]5:65. [b]4:156. [c]8:52; 41:47; 50:30.

537. Mīrāth rendered as "heritage" here signifies "ownership." The word also means, portion allotted to one. See 23:12 where it is stated "those who shall inherit Paradise." Paradise is not inherited by anyone; it is only received as an allotted portion from God.

538. When the Jews were called upon to spend their wealth in the cause of Allāh, (3:181), they taunted the Muslims by saying, 'Is Allāh poor and we rich?' These words also express the inward feelings of those niggardly persons who join a new movement but find it hard to comply with its ever growing monetary demands.

اَلَّذِيْنَ قَالُوْٓا اِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَهِدَ اِلَيْنَآ اَلَّا نُؤْمِنَ لِرَسُوْلٍ حَتّٰى يَاْتِيَنَا بِقُرْبَانٍ تَاْكُلُهُ النَّارُ ؕ قُلْ قَدْ جَآءَكُمْ رُسُلٌ مِّنْ قَبْلِيْ بِالْبَيِّنٰتِ وَ بِالَّذِيْ قُلْتُمْ فَلِمَ قَتَلْتُمُوْهُمْ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ صٰدِقِيْنَ ﴿۱۸۴﴾

Those who say, 'Allāh has charged us not to believe in any Messenger until he bring us an offering which fire devours.'[539] Say, 'There have already come to you Messengers before me with [a]clear Signs and with that which you ask for. Why, then, did you seek to slay them, if you are truthful?'

539. The verse answers the objection of the Jews about the burnt offerings by saying that the observance of the law regarding such offerings was no criterion to test the truth of a Prophet, because that could easily be done by an impostor. It was only "clear signs" that demonstrated and established the truth of a claimant. But even if observance of burnt offerings was the criterion of a true Prophet, the Jews had no right to raise an objection. The charge is driven home to them in the words, "Why did they reject those Prophets who strictly conformed to that law?"

540. Zabūr means, a writing or a book of wisdom and science, not containing legal statutes, ordinances or commandments, particularly the Book of David containing the Psalms (Lane).

541. The Torah which all the Israelite Prophets followed though they had also their separate revelations containing warnings and words of wisdom.

187. [a]You shall, surely, be tried[543] in your possessions and in your persons and [b]you shall surely hear many hurtful things from those who were given the Book before you and from those who set up equals to Allāh. But if you show patience and fortitude and act righteously, that indeed is a matter of high resolve.

وَاِذْ اَخَذَ اللّٰهُ مِيْثَاقَ الَّذِيْنَ اُوْتُوا الْكِتٰبَ لَتُبَيِّنُنَّهٗ لِلنَّاسِ وَلَا تَكْتُمُوْنَهٗ ۖ فَنَبَذُوْهُ وَرَآءَ ظُهُوْرِهِمْ وَاشْتَرَوْا بِهٖ

[a]2:156; 8:29; 64:16. [b]5:83. [c]2:102.

542. Death is the most certain phenomenon in nature and yet man's attitude towards it is of complete disregard and indifference. Worldly life has been here called a vain and illusory thing, because, on the face of it, it appears to be a very attractive and sweet thing, but when one becomes engrossed in seeking its pleasures and profits, one finds it bitter and deceptive.

543. Tests and trials serve a fourfold purpose: (1) They distinguish the waverers and the weak of faith from the sincere and steadfast votaries. (2) They are a means of spiritual advancement for those sincere in faith. (3) Those going through a trial come to know the strength or weakness of their own faith and are thus enabled to shape their conduct accordingly. (4) Trials also establish the title to reward of those deserving it.

544. The reference here is to no particular covenant but to a general covenant taken from the followers of every Prophet that they would preach and promulgate the Divine Message and would try to live up to it.

191. [c]In the creation of the heavens and the earth and in the alternation of the night and the day there are indeed Signs for men of understanding;[546]

545. Mafāzah means, a place or state of security or escape; a means of success and prosperity (Aqrab).

546. The lesson implied in the creation of the heavens and the earth and in the alternation of night and day is that man has been created both for spiritual and temporal progress, and that if he acts righteously, his period of darkness and affliction must needs be followed by one of sunshine and happiness.

194. 'Our Lord, we have heard a Crier calling us unto faith, saying, 'Believe ye in your Lord,' and we have believed. Our Lord, forgive us, therefore, our sins[548] and remit from us our evils and in death join us with the righteous;

195. 'Our Lord, give us what Thou hast promised to us through Thy Messengers; and disgrace us not on the Day of Resurrection. Surely, Thou breakest not Thy promise."

547. The grand system to which an allusion has been made in the previous verse could certainly not have been brought into being without a definite purpose. The whole universe having been created to serve man, the creation of man himself must have a great purpose. When man ponders over the spiritual implication of the physical phenomenon of the creation of the universe and the consummate order that pervades it, he is deeply impressed by the great wisdom of the Creator, and from the inmost depths of his being rises the cry: Our Lord, Thou hast not created this universe in vain.

548. Dhunūb, which generally refers to natural human weaknesses and ordinary mistakes and omissions, may represent those dark recesses of the heart where the heavenly light does not properly reach; while Sayyi'āt, which is a comparatively stronger word, may mean the clouds of dust which hide the light of the sun from our view. See also 2:82 & 3:17.

549. As this Sūrah mainly deals with Christian doctrines and ideals and with their way of life, and as Christianity, in spite of the claims of the Christian Church to the contrary, gives woman a status definitely inferior to that of man, the insistence on the equality of the status of woman with that of man in the spiritual sphere forms a befitting sequel to it. The words, you are from one another, are intended to emphasize this equality of status of both men and women.

550. The verse, apart from its relevance to the time of the Holy Prophet, is appropriately applicable also to the present dazzling material progress of Christian nations in all departments of life, and warns Muslims against being deceived or overawed by the glamour of this transitory and fleeting progress.

551. The prosperity of Christian nations is only temporary, and the verse hints at the dreadful punishment which is in store for them and which has now

[555] The five requisites of success mentioned in the verse are: (1) Exercise of patience and steadfastness; (2) showing greater patience and greater steadfastness than the enemy; (3) applying oneself constantly and assiduously to the service of one's religion and community; (4) keeping vigilant watch at the frontiers both for the purpose of defence and attack; and (5) leading a life of righteousness. Ribāṭ also signifies the human heart. Thus believers are enjoined to be always in a state of readiness to fight internal and external enemies.

CHAPTER 4

AN-NISĀ'

(Revealed after Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

This Sūrah is appropriately entitled An-Nisā', (The Women) because it deals chiefly with the rights and responsibilities of women and also with their status and position in society. It was revealed at Medina between the third and fifth year of the Hijrah after the Battle of Uḥud and it mainly deals with the subject of widows and orphans who were left behind in large numbers after that battle. Muslims and European scholars are all agreed on this point. Noldeke, the great German Orientalist, however, is inclined to place some of its verses among the Meccan revelations, because, according to him in those verses "the Jews are referred to in a friendly spirit", as they had not yet come into conflict with Muslims. Wherry thinks that the words "O people" in verse 134 show that at least this verse was revealed at Mecca because this form of address has been exclusively used in the Meccan Sūrahs. But to say that because a certain verse uses the expression "O people" it must, in spite of all evidence to the contrary, belong to the Meccan period is a mere assertion. The fact is that because at Mecca the number of the believers was very small and they had not yet been welded into a distinct and separate community and very few commandments of the Sharī'ah had been revealed, the Meccans—believers and disbelievers—were all addressed together by the words "O people." But as after the Emigration of the Holy Prophet to Medina the commandments of the Sharī'ah came thick and fast and an organised community of believers, quite distinct and separate from the disbelievers, had come into existence, they were addressed as "O ye who believe". But where the address is general, applying both to believers and non-believers, the expression "O people" has been used.

The connection of the Sūrah with the previous Chapter consists in the fact that in the former Sūrah one of the principal subjects dealt with was the Battle of Uḥud while this Sūrah deals with the various problems to which that battle gave rise. The Sūrah also sheds a flood of light on the evil designs and machinations of the Jews and the Hypocrites of Medina who, after the Battle of Uḥud, seeing that Islām was gaining great power in the land, mustered all their resources to make a last effort to destroy it root and branch. In a way also the Sūrah constitutes an extension of the subject matter of the preceding Sūrah in that it demolishes the basic Christian doctrine of Atonement, and establishes that Jesus did not die on the Cross.

Summary of Subject-Matter

As in Āl-e-'Imrān, the Christian basic doctrines constitute one of the main themes of this Sūrah also. But in this Sūrah greater space has been assigned to a comparison of the detailed teachings of the two religions—Islām and Christianity—with special reference to the progress and domination of Christianity in the Latter Days. As in the Latter Days, Christian writers and speakers were to profess and proclaim loudly that Islām had degraded woman by giving her a much lower status than man, this Sūrah largely deals with the problems concerning females, and a cursory glance over the Quranic teaching about women establishes the fact that even in this respect Islamic teachings are far superior to those of Christianity. And as the subject of orphans is intimately connected with that of women, it has also received special mention in this Sūrah which is the first revelation to safeguard their rights and those of women. Women have not only been given all the rights to which they are legitimately entitled, particularly the right of inheritance, but have also been declared to be the sole masters and arbiters of their property. The second main topic dealt with in this Sūrah is that of hypocrisy. As in the Latter Days Christianity was to gain worldwide predominance and a large number of Muslims were to live under Christian Governments and, as a result of their subjugation by Christian rulers and their fear of Christian criticism of Islām they were to adopt hypocritical attitude towards their own Faith, the subject of hypocrisy has also been treated in this Sūrah along with that of women, and light is thrown on the depths to which a hypocrite can sink morally and spiritually. The hypocrites are warned that shame and abasement would seize them because they fear men more than their Creator. Towards its end the Sūrah sheds some light on the subject of Jesus' crucifixion and it is emphatically stated and convincingly established that the belief that Jesus died on the Cross is utterly false and unfounded. Like other human beings he died a natural death, and this false doctrine is belied by proven facts of history, and even the Gospels lend no support to it. The Sūrah closes with a brief reversion to the subject of Kalālah in order to draw attention to the spiritual heirlessness of Jesus who in a sense was a Kalālah inasmuch as he left no spiritual successor, Prophethood having been transferred from the House of Israel to that of Ishmael.

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اتَّقُوْا رَبَّكُمُ الَّذِيْ خَلَقَكُمْ
مِّنْ نَّفْسٍ وَّاحِدَةٍ وَّخَلَقَ مِنْهَا زَوْجَهَا
وَبَثَّ مِنْهُمَا رِجَالًا كَثِيْرًا وَّنِسَآءً ۚ
وَاتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ الَّذِيْ تَسَآءَلُوْنَ بِهٖ وَالْاَرْحَامَ ؕ
اِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ عَلَيْكُمْ رَقِيْبًا ②

2. O ye people! [b]fear your Lord, [c]Who created you from a single soul[556] and of its kind created its mate,[557] and from them twain spread many men and women; and fear Allāh, in Whose name you appeal to one another, and fear Him particularly respecting ties of

[a]1:1. [b]33:71; 59:19. [c]7:190; 16:73; 30:22; 39:7.

556. "Single soul" may signify: (1) Adam; (2) man and woman taken together, because when two things jointly perform one function, they may be spoken of as one; (3) man and woman taken separately, because mankind may be said to have been created from one "single soul" in the sense that each and every individual is created from the seed of man who is "one soul" and is also born of woman who is likewise "one soul".

557. The words do not mean that woman was created out of the body of man but that she belonged to the same species as man, possessing identical aptitudes and propensities. The idea that Eve had been created out of the rib of Adam seems to have arisen from a saying of the Holy Prophet, viz. "Women have been created from a rib, and surely, the most crooked part of a rib is the highest part thereof. If you set yourself to straighten it, you will break it" (Bukhārī, ch. on Nikāḥ). This saying, if anything, constitutes an argument against the above view rather than being in its favour, for it makes no mention of Eve, but only speaks of all women, and it is clear that every woman has not been created from a rib. The word Ḍil' used in the above saying of the Prophet signifies a certain crookedness of manners, the word itself meaning crookedness (Bihār & Muḥīṭ). In fact, it refers to a certain peculiarity of woman, viz. her affectation of displeasure and coquetry. This "crookedness" has been spoken of in this saying as the highest or the best trait in her character, and those who take affectation of anger on woman's part as an expression of her real anger and begin to deal harshly with her for that reason, in fact, destroy the most attractive and winning aspect of her personality.

kinship.[558] Verily, Allāh watches over you.

وَ اٰتُوا الْيَتٰمٰٓى اَمْوَالَهُمْ وَلَا تَتَبَدَّلُوا الْخَبِيْثَ بِالطَّيِّبِ ۪ وَلَا تَاْكُلُوْٓا اَمْوَالَهُمْ اِلٰٓى اَمْوَالِكُمْ ؕ اِنَّهٗ كَانَ حُوْبًا كَبِيْرًا ۝٢

3. And [a]give to the orphans their property and exchange not the bad for the good, and devour not their property by mixing it with your own. Surely, it is a great sin.[559]

وَاِنْ خِفْتُمْ اَلَّا تُقْسِطُوْا فِى الْيَتٰمٰى فَانْكِحُوْا مَا طَابَ لَكُمْ مِّنَ النِّسَآءِ مَثْنٰى وَثُلٰثَ وَرُبٰعَ ۚ فَاِنْ خِفْتُمْ اَلَّا تَعْدِلُوْا

4. And if you fear that you will not be just in dealing with the orphans, then marry of other women as may be agreeable to you, two, or three, or four;[560] and [b]if you

[a]4:11, 128; 6:153; 17:35. [b]4:130.

558. The verse places "the fear of God", side by side with "respect for the ties of kinship", thus emphasizing the importance of good treatment of relatives, on which the Qur'ān has laid so much stress. The Holy Prophet used to recite this verse when delivering a marriage sermon in order to remind both the parties of their duties to each other.

559. After mentioning the two favours of God in the previous verse, viz. the multiplication of many men and women from a "single soul", and their preservation from destruction by instituting ties of relationship, the Qur'ān proceeds to emphasize the need of protecting posterity by safeguarding the rights and interests of orphans.

560. The verse is important inasmuch as it permits polygamy under certain circumstances. Islām allows (though it certainly does not enjoin or encourage) a man to have more than one wife up to four at a time. As this permission has been given in connection with the subject of orphans, it should be taken primarily to be based on the question of the care of that much-neglected class of society. There are cases when the interests of orphans can only be protected by marrying one or more wives from among the female wards or from other women as the exigencies of circumstances may require. Though the verse mentions polygamy in connection with the subject of orphans, yet other situations may arise when it may become a necessary remedy for some social or moral evils. If only the objects of marriage itself are considered, the permission appears to be not only justifiable but in some cases desirable and even necessary; nay, in such cases it may become positively injurious to the best interests of individuals and of the community not to take advantage of this permission. According to the Qur'ān the objects of marriage are four, viz. (1) protection against physical, moral and spiritual maladies (2:188; 4:25); (2) peace of mind and the availability of a loving companion (30:22); (3) procreation of children; and (4) widening of the circle of relationship (4:2). Now one or all of the above-mentioned four objects of marriage are sometimes not realized in the case of one wife; for instance, if the wife of a person becomes a permanent invalid or suffers from a contagious disease, the object of marriage is certainly defeated if such a person does not marry another wife. Indeed, no course is left to him but either to contract another lawful marriage or failing successfully to resist the attacks of carnal passions, to lead an immoral life. And an ailing wife cannot make a good companion either, because however worthy of regard and compassion she may be, her company cannot give peace of mind to her husband in all respects. Similarly, if she happens to be barren, the natural and perfectly legitimate desire of the husband to have an issue to succeed him and perpetuate his name remains unfulfilled in the absence of a polygamous marriage. It is to meet such exigencies that Islām has allowed the contraction of plural matrimonial connections. If, however, in any of the above cases a husband divorces his first wife, it would be a shame and disgrace for him. In fact, the objects of a polygamous marriage are, to a certain extent, the same as those of a monogamous marriage. When one or all of these objects are not realized by a monogamous marriage, a polygamous marriage becomes a necessity. There are, however, other reasons also which may sometimes render it necessary for a person to have one or more wives in addition to the one whom he dearly loves and who also fulfils the objects of marriage. Those reasons are: (a) to protect orphans; (b) to provide husbands for marriageable widows and (c) to supplement the depleted manhood of a family or community. It is clear from the verse under comment that polygamy is resorted to particularly with a view to taking under one's protection orphans left unprotected. The verse implies that the mother of such orphans as are left in the guardianship of a person should preferably be married by him so that he should become directly related to, and more intimately connected with, them and thus may become more interested in their welfare than he otherwise would be. To provide husbands for widows (24:33) is another object which the institution of polygamy fulfils. Muslims were perpetually engaged in fighting in the time of the Holy Prophet. Many fell in wars and left behind widows and orphans without near relatives to look after them. The preponderance of women over men and an exceptionally large number of orphans with no one to look after them, which is the inevitable result of wars, necessitated that in order to save Muslim society from moral degeneration, polygamous marriages should have been encouraged. The last two World Wars have vindicated this useful institution of Islām. They have left an abnormally large number of young women without husbands. Indeed, the great preponderance of females over males in the West, due to the appalling fear you will not be able to do justice, then marry only one or marry what your right hands possess.[561] Thus it is more loss of manhood caused by these Wars, is responsible for the present laxity of morals which is eating into the vitals of Western society. Besides this contingency of providing husbands for young widows the institution of polygamy is also intended to meet the serious situation that follows in the wake of a war, when, besides other aspects of decline, the manhood of a nation becomes so depleted as to threaten national destruction. The fall of birthrate, which is a potent cause of the decay of a people can be effectively remedied only by resorting to polygamy. Polygamous marriages, instead of being an outlet for the gratification of sexual passions as is mistakenly understood, constitute a sacrifice demanded of men and women alike—a sacrifice in which personal and passing sentiments are required to be subordinated to the wider communal or national interests.

561. The expression, Mā Malakat Aimānukum, generally signifies, women prisoners of war who are not ransomed and who are in the custody and control of their Muslim captors because they had taken part in a war which was waged to destroy Islām and thus had legitimately deprived themselves of their freedom. The term has been used in the Qur'ān in preference to 'Ibād and Imā' (slaves and bondwomen) to point to a just and rightful possession, the expression Milku Yamīn signifying full and rightful possession (Lisān). It includes both slaves and bondwomen, and it is only the context which determines what the expression signifies in a particular place. Much misunderstanding prevails as to what the expression "their right hands possess" signifies, and what are the rights and status of the persons to whom it applies. Islām has condemned slavery in unequivocal terms. According to it, it is a mortal sin to deprive a person of his or her liberty, unless, of course, he or she renders himself or herself liable to deprivation of it by taking part in a war waged to destroy Islām or an Islamic State. It is also a grievous sin to buy or sell slaves. Islamic teaching on this point is quite clear, unequivocal and emphatic. According to it a person who makes another person his slave commits a grave sin against God and man (Bukhārī, Kitābul-Bai' & Dāwūd as quoted by Fatḥul-Bārī). It is worthy of note that when Islām came into the world, slavery was an integral part of the human social system and there existed a large number of slaves in every country. It was, therefore, not feasible, nor even wise, to abolish with a stroke of the pen, an institution which had become so inextricably interwoven into the whole texture of human society, without doing serious injury to its moral tone. Islām, therefore, sought to abolish it gradually but effectively and surely. The Qur'ān has laid down the following very sound rules for the speedy and complete abolition of slavery: (1) Prisoners can only be taken after a regular battle. (2) They cannot be retained after the war is over, but (3) are to be set free either as a mark of favour or by exchange of prisoners (47:5). Those unfortunate persons, however, who, may fail to gain their freedom through any of these means, or should choose to remain with their Muslim masters, can purchase their emancipation by entering into a contract called Mukātabah with them (24:34). Now, if a woman is taken prisoner in a war of the nature mentioned above and thus loses her liberty and becomes Milku Yamīn, and she fails to get her release by the exchange of prisoners of war, and the exigencies of government also do not justify her immediate release as a mark of favour, nor do her own people or government get her ransomed and she does not even seek to buy her freedom by entering into Mukātabah, and her master, in the interest of morality, marries her without her prior consent, in what way can this arrangement be regarded as objectionable?

As regards establishing sexual relations with a female prisoner of war or a slave-wife without marrying her, neither this nor any other verse of the Qur'ān lends any support to it whatever. Not only does the Qur'ān not give any sanction for the treatment of female prisoners of war as wives without taking them into proper wedlock but there are clear and positive injunctions to the effect that these prisoners of war, like free women, should be married if they are to be treated as wives, the only difference between the two being a temporary difference of social status, inasmuch as prior consent of prisoners of war to their marriage which they forfeit by taking part in a war against Islām is not considered necessary as in the case of free women. Thus the expression Mā Malakat Aimānukum, signifying female prisoners, according to the Qur'ān, lends no support whatsoever to the view that Islām has upheld concubinage. Besides the present verse, at least in as many as three other verses, the injunction has been laid down in clear and unambiguous terms that female prisoners of war should not remain unmarried (2:222; 4:26; 24:33). The Holy Prophet is also very explicit on this point. He is reported to have said, "He who has a slave girl and gives her proper education and brings her up in a becoming manner and then frees and marries her, for him is double reward". (Bukhārī, Kitābul-'Ilm). This saying of the Holy Prophet implies that if a Muslim wishes to have a slave girl as wife, he should first set her free and then marry her. The Holy Prophet's own practice was quite in harmony with his precept. Two of the Holy Prophet's wives, Juwairiyah and Ṣafiyyah, came to him as prisoners of war. They were his Milku Yamīn. But he married them according to Islamic Law. He also married Māriyah who was sent to him by the King of Egypt, and she enjoyed the status of a free wife like the Prophet's other wives. She observed Purdah and was included among "The Mothers of the Faithful". The Qur'ān makes it clear that the commandment regarding marriage applies to "whom your right hands possess" as much as it does to "the daughters of the Holy Prophet's paternal and maternal uncles and aunts". Both are to be wedded before they are treated as wives. All the three categories mentioned above were made lawful to the Holy Prophet through marriage (33:51). Further, the verse "And forbidden to you are married women, except such as your right hands possess" (4:25) along with its preceding one deals with women whom it is unlawful for a man to marry and among these are included married women. But it makes one exception, which is that those married women who are taken prisoner in a religious war and then choose to remain with Muslims, can be married to their masters. The fact that they choose not to go to their former husbands is considered to be tantamount to the annulment of their former marriage.

It may also be noted in passing that it is not permitted to take in marriage such female relations of a bondwoman as correspond to the relations of a free woman within the prohibited degree. For instance, the mothers, sisters, daughters, etc., of a slave-wife cannot be taken in marriage. It may further be stated that in view of the circumstances obtaining at the time of its revelation the Qur'ān had to make a distinction between the social status of two classes of women. That distinction was expressed by the word Zauj (a free woman taken in marriage) and Milku Yamīn (bondwoman taken in marriage). The former word connotes a sense of equality between husband and wife while the latter implies a somewhat inferior status of the wife. That was, however, a temporary phase. The Qur'ān and the Holy Prophet had strongly recommended that bondwomen should first be given full freedom and full status and then married as the Holy Prophet himself had done. Besides, Islām does not allow women taken prisoner in ordinary wars to be treated as bondwomen. The permission about marrying a bondwoman without her prior consent comes into operation only when a hostile nation first wages a religious war against Islām in order to extirpate it and to compel Muslims to abandon their religion at the point of the sword and then treats their prisoners men and women—as slaves, as was done in the time of the Holy Prophet. At that time the enemy took away Muslim women as prisoners and treated them as bondwomen. The Islamic injunction was only a retaliatory measure and was in its very nature temporary. It also served the additional purpose of protecting the morals of captive women. Those conditions have ceased to exist now. There are no religious wars now and hence no prisoners of war to be treated as slaves or bondwomen.

562. Ta'ūlū (do injustice) is derived from 'Āla which means; (1) he had a large family; (2) he supported the family; (3) he was or became poor; (4) he acted wrongfully; or deviated from the right course (Lane).

5. And [a]give the women their dowries[563] willingly.[564] But if they, of their own pleasure, remit to you a part thereof, then enjoy it as something pleasant and wholesome.

وَلَا تُؤْتُوا السُّفَهَآءَ اَمْوَالَكُمُ الَّتِیْ جَعَلَ اللّٰهُ لَكُمْ قِیٰمًا وَّارْزُقُوْهُمْ فِیْهَا وَاكْسُوْهُمْ وَقُوْلُوْا لَهُمْ قَوْلًا مَّعْرُوْفًا ۝

6. And give not to those who are weak of understanding[565] your property[566] which Allāh has made for you a means of support; but feed them therewith and clothe them and speak to them words of kind advice.

563. Ṣaduqāt is the plural of Ṣaduqah which means, dowry or a gift which is given to or for a bride (Lane).

564. The verse may be taken to be addressed to both the husband and the relations of the wife. In the latter case, it would mean that the relations of a woman should not spend her dowry to meet their own needs, but should faithfully hand it over to her. Primarily, however, the verse is addressed to the husband whom it requires to pay the agreed dowry to his wife willingly, cheerfully and without demur. The words "giving the dowry willingly and cheerfully" also imply that the amount of the dowry should be well within the means of the husband so that its payment may not be a burden to him. He should be in a position to pay it willingly and cheerfully.

565. The words, "who are weak of understanding" have been substituted for "orphans" in the present verse to supply the required reason for the injunction, as well as to make it one of general application, including in its scope all such persons as are unable to take care of their property. In the case of grown-up imbeciles, the verse would be taken to be addressed to the State which should take effective steps to set up institutions like Courts of Wards to look after the property of persons who cannot manage it themselves.

566. The verse speaks of the property of orphans as "your property", hinting thereby that the guardians of orphans should be very careful about spending their property and should treat it as their own. The expression "your property" may also signify "the property of the orphans which are in your custody". It is also possible that the expression has been used here to include all property whether belonging to the orphans or to their guardians.

And test the understanding of the orphans until they attain the age of marriage, then, if you perceive in them mature judgment,[567] deliver to them their property; and devour it not in extravagance and haste against their growing up.[568] And whoso is rich, let him abstain; and whoso is poor, let him eat thereof with equity. And when you deliver to them their property, then call witnesses in their presence.[569] And Allāh is sufficient as a Reckoner.

567. Under no circumstances should the property of the orphans be made over to them before they attain puberty and are so mature of intellect as to take care of and properly manage it.

568. The verse also warns guardians not to squander away in haste the money of their wards before they are old enough to take charge of it. The guardian, if he is poor, is, however, allowed a reasonable wage, which should be in proportion to the amount of work he does and to the value of the ward's property.

569. The property should be handed over to the wards in the presence of reliable witnesses as the word "presence" hints.

570. This verse forms the basis of the Islamic Law of Inheritance. It lays down the general principle of the social equality of man and woman. Both are entitled to a suitable share in the property. Detailed rules are given in the verses that follow.

571. By the words, other relations and orphans and the poor, are here meant those distant relatives and orphans and poor persons, who, being not included among the deceased's legal heirs, are not entitled to receive any part of his property as of right. The verse, though not giving a legal right of inheritance to them, exhorts Muslims, while making a will about the division of their property, to set apart a portion of it for them.

571A. La-hum may also mean, in their favour.

572. The verse contains a strong and highly forceful appeal in favour of the orphans.

573. Father and mother both (Lane).

574. Walad means, (1) a child, son, daughter or a young one; (2) children, sons, daughters, offspring or young ones. The word is used both as singular and plural, feminine and masculine (Lane).

574A. The verse prescribes suitable shares for all near relatives in the property of a deceased person without distinction of sex or order of birth. Children, parents, husbands and wives are the principal heirs who, if alive, get suitable shares in all circumstances, other relations having a title only in special cases. A male has been given double the share of a female because he has been made responsible for the maintenance of his family (Ma'ānī, ii. p.32). The verse begins by laying down a general rule as to the proportion of shares between sons and daughters. A son is to have as much as two daughters. So, wherever there are both sons and daughters, this rule will come in force. When, however, there are only daughters and no son, the verse allots two-thirds of the legacy to the daughters, if there are more than two of them; and one-half if there is only one. The share of daughters in case there are two is not expressly stated. But the use of the conjunction fā' (but) in the clause, but if there be females only, numbering more than two, clearly points to the fact that the share of two females has been referred to in the preceding words "two females". Moreover, the share of two females can be gathered from what has already been said in the beginning of the verse about the ratio between the shares of the males and the females. According to that ratio, a son is to have as much as two daughters. Thus, if there be one son and one daughter, the son will have two-third. But as the share of one son has been made equal to that of "two daughters", the latter, in case there is no son, will have two-thirds, viz. the same share as has been expressly fixed for three daughters. Thus, the very construction of the verse shows that if there be two daughters and no son, they, too, as in the case of three daughters, will get two-thirds. If it had not been the object of the Qur'ān to point to the share of two daughters in the clause, the words would have been something like this, "a male shall have twice as much as a female", and not as it is now. The verse speaks of three cases as regards the share of the parents: (1) If a person dies leaving one or more children, then each of his parents shall have one-sixth. (2) If a person dies issueless and his parents are the sole heirs (there being no wife or husband of the deceased person), then the mother will have one-third of the property and the remaining two-thirds will go to the father. (3) There is a third case, which is really an exception to the second case. A man dies without issue and his parents are his sole heirs, but he has brothers or sisters. Then, although his brothers or sisters will not inherit from him, yet their presence will affect the share of the parents, for, in this case, the mother will have one-sixth (instead of one-third, as in the second case) and the remaining five-sixths will go to the father. The reason why the father is awarded a larger share in this case is that the father has also to support the brothers or sisters of the deceased. The subject of inheritance is continued in the succeeding verse.

bequests you may have bequeathed or of debt. [a]And if there be a man or a woman whose heritage is to be divided and he or she has neither parent nor child,[575] and he or she has a brother and a sister, then each one of them shall have a sixth. But if they be more than that, then they shall be equal sharers in one-third, after the payment of any bequests which may have been bequeathed or of debt. And all this shall be without intent to cause injury to any one.[575A] This is an injunction from Allāh and Allāh is Wise, Forbearing.

575. Kalālah is (1) a person who leaves behind neither parent nor child, male or female; (2) a person who leaves behind neither father nor son. According to Ibn-e-'Abbās he is a person who leaves no son irrespective of the fact whether his father is living or not. This would thus be the third meaning of the word (Lane & Mufradāt). The brothers and sisters of a Kalālah fall under three heads: first, real brothers or sisters—offspring of the same parents (such brothers or sisters are technically known as A'yānī): secondly, brothers and sisters on the side of the father only (these are technically known as 'Allātī); thirdly, brothers and sisters on the side of the mother only, their father being not the same as that of the deceased (such brothers and sisters are technically called Akhyāfī). It is to the last mentioned class that the commandment given in the present verse pertains; the law with regard to the first two classes of brothers and sisters having been given in the last verse of this Sūrah. The shares allotted to the brothers and sisters of the last-mentioned class are smaller than those allotted to the brothers and sisters of the first two classes, the reason being that the brothers and sisters of this class are on the side of the mother only, while the brothers and the sisters of the other two classes are the children of the same father as the deceased. In the property of a person who died as a Kalālah both brothers and sisters have equal shares, the usual ratio of two to one being not observed in their case.

575A. The words. "without intent to cause injury to any one" are important.

They mean that the payment of debts should not suffer by the payment of bequests. In other words, debts are to be paid prior to the payment of bequests.

576. Fāḥishah as used in the Qur'ān (7:29; 33:31; 65:2) does not necessarily mean fornication or adultery for which punishment is prescribed in 24:3. The word refers to any glaringly improper conduct which may disturb social relations and may lead to breaches of the peace. The women referred to in this verse, as the men in the next in which similar offence with an undefined punishment is mentioned, are those guilty of foul or immoral conduct short of fornication or adultery. This is the view also of Abū Muslim and Mujāhid. Such women should be prevented from mixing with other women until they reform themselves or get married, marriage being the way

19. There is no acceptance of repentance for those who continue to do evil until, when opened for them by Allāh. As the offence mentioned is a serious one, four witnesses are considered necessary lest injustice be done to women reported against.

577. The word Alladhāni does not necessarily imply two males. What particular form the punishment mentioned here should take is left to the discretion of the authorities concerned. Both this and the preceding verse refer to offences for which no punishment has been fixed by the Law, the matter having been left to the discretion of the authorities to be decided according to the circumstances then obtaining. The verse may also refer to two males being guilty of an unnatural offence or something approaching it.

578. The words "in ignorance" do not mean that the offenders do evil without knowing that it is evil. In fact, every evil deed which a man does is an act done in ignorance, born of lack of proper and adequate knowledge. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said, "There are some kinds of knowledge which are really ignorance," i.e. the learning of which is injurious to man (Bihār). So the words "in ignorance" have been added to point to the nature and philosophy of sin and to exhort people to acquire useful knowledge with a view to avoiding sin.

579. The words "soon after" here mean "before death". The next verse which says "who continue to do evil until when death faces one of them," supports this meaning.

580. The deceased person's relatives cannot prevent his widow from contracting a new marriage so that they may get hold of her property; but they can prevent her from doing so if she intends to marry a person of manifestly objectionable character. If the address is to the husbands, the verse would mean that if the wives do not want to live with their husbands and seek separation from them, which they can do by means of Khula' the husbands should not prevent them from doing so out of greed for their money. But they can do so, if the wives are going to be guilty of a manifestly foul act.

581. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said, "The best among you is he who treats his wife best" (Bukhārī). The expression 'Āshirūhunna being of the measure Mufā'alah denotes reciprocity; husbands and wives are both enjoined to live amicably with each other and reciprocate each other's love.

another, he is not allowed to take back from the former what he has already given her, no matter how big the sum may be.

583. These words do not necessarily imply sexual intercourse. They mean living with each other and meeting each other in private on terms of extreme intimacy. According to this verse, a man cannot take back from his wife any property or money he may have given her, even though he may not have gone in unto her.

584. Women are not slaves of the whims or caprices of men. Both are bound by a sacred contract and men owe to their wives obligations which they must respect because, as regards their social rights, both are on much the same level. Men are warned here not to treat light-heartedly the covenant—the tie of marriage—they have made with their wives.

585. The words do not mean that stepmothers taken as wives or two sisters taken in marriage together before this verse was revealed could be retained. What they mean is simply this that if such men repent and make amends, no harm will come to them for what unlawful acts they might have committed in the past. The past will be forgiven but the women whom it is unlawful to marry are to be divorced at once.

586. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that the relatives of foster-mothers are as forbidden as those within the prohibited degrees of relationship of real mothers. It is not lawful to marry foster-sisters and foster-daughters and so on.

588. Muḥṣanāt is the plural of Muḥṣanah which means, a married woman; a free woman; a chaste woman (Lane).

589. This means that whereas a woman who is already married to a man cannot be taken in marriage by another person, an exception is made here in case of women who are taken prisoner in a war waged by a non-Muslim State against an Islamic State. This is the significance of the words Mā Malakat Aimānukum. Such married women, if they become converted to Islām and therefore could not be sent back to their non-Muslim husbands, may be married to Muslim husbands. 590. Tamatta'a bil Mar'ati means, he benefited by the woman temporarily. Istamta'a bi Kadhā means, he benefited by it for a long time. The Arabic idiom does not countenance the use of Istimtā' with regard to a woman in the sense of temporary connection (Lisān). It may also be noted that whenever the noun Tamattu' is used to denote temporary connection with a woman, it is followed by the preposition bā' put before the word standing for the woman, as in the above example. An Arab poet says, Tamatta' bihā mā Sā'afatka wa lā Takun 'alaika Shajan fil Ḥalqi hīna Tabīnū (Ḥamāsah), i.e. be benefited by her as long as she is agreeable to you, but when she gets separated from you, do not let her be a source of constant trouble for you like a piece of bone which remains stuck in the throat. But in this verse the pronoun Hunna referring to women is preceded by the preposition min. Misunderstanding about Mut'ah seems to have arisen from the failure to understand the difference between the words Tamattu' and Istimta'. The author of Lisān quotes Zajjāj as saying: "Owing to their ignorance of the Arabic language, some persons have inferred from this verse the legality of Mut'ah which, by the consensus of opinion among Muslim theologians, has been declared to be unlawful, the words Fa-mastamta'tum bihī Minhunna simply meaning marriage, performed in accordance with the conditions mentioned above". If there had been any reference to Mut'ah here, the preposition used ought to have been bā' and not min. Moreover, the word used is Istamta'a and not Tamatta'a which possesses a sense different from that of the former word. Nor can any inference in favour of Mut'ah be drawn from the word Ujūrahunna which means "their dowries", the sense in which it has also been used in the Qur'ān (33:51). Thus the Qur'ān positively forbids Mut'ah and regards all sexual relations outside proper wedlock (Iḥṣān) as adultery.

26. And whoso of you cannot afford to marry free believing women, let him marry what your right hands possess, namely, your believing hand-maids.[591] And Allāh knows your faith best; you are all one from another; so marry them with the leave of their masters and give them their dowries according to what is fair, they being chaste, not committing fornication, nor taking secret paramours.[591A] And if, after they are married, [a]they are guilty of lewdness, they shall have half the punishment prescribed for free married women.[592] This is for him among you who fears lest he should commit sin. And that you restrain yourselves is better for you; and Allāh is Most Forgiving, Merciful.

591. In Islām no stigma attaches to the status of a handmaid as such; but owing to her relationships and associations she may not prove such a perfect companion as a free believing woman.

591A. This means that only such of them may be married as are chaste and virtuous. Once they are married their dowries must be paid just as in the case of free women.

592. The verse has laid down three vital principles: (a) Bondwomen should be properly married before conjugal relations are had with them. This is also clear from 2:222; 4:4; and 24:33. Thus Islām has cut at the root of concubinage which was so prevalent in Arab society before its advent. (b) If they commit adultery, bondwomen are to have half the punishment which is 100 stripes for free women for the same offence which shows that stoning to death is not the punishment for adultery, as mistakenly understood, because stoning to death cannot be halved. (c) Incidentally, the verse seems to indicate that a bondwoman taken in marriage had a lower social status in Arab society than a free woman taken in marriage, perhaps because of her having taken part in a war waged to destroy an Islamic State.

593. The reason why God has revealed the Law is that man is by nature weak and cannot himself find out the ways of spiritual advancement. God has taken away this burden from him. The verse also constitutes a refutation of the Christian doctrine of Atonement which rejects the Law (Sharī'ah) on the ground of human weakness. As a matter of fact, Islām declares human weakness to be the very reason for the revelation of the Law, so that it may help man to fulfil his high destiny. The Law, therefore, is not a curse but a help and a blessing.

594. There is no classification of less or more grievous sins in the Qur'ān. The term is rather a relative one. The commission of anything forbidden by God is a sin and the commission of all sins which one finds difficult to avoid is grievous. The meaning of the verse seems to be that if a person avoids doing those things the giving up of which seems difficult and burdensome to him, he will be enabled to get rid of other sins as well. Some scholars interpret the word Kabā'ir (grievous sins) as signifying the last stage of each act of sin. If one restrains oneself from committing the final act, the preliminary ones will be forgiven him.

595. The verse establishes the equality of men and women so far as their works and rewards are concerned.

596. Mawālī is the plural of Maulā which among other things means, an heir.

597. Besides the meaning given in the text the words may mean: "To every one We have appointed heirs to what he leaves, they are the parents, the

And as for those on whose part you fear disobedience,[599] admonish them and keep away from them in their beds[600] and relations and those, with whom your oaths have ratified contracts. So give them their portion." The words may also be rendered as, "to everything which parents and relations leave We have appointed heirs, etc."

598. Qawwāmūn is derived from Qāma and Qāma 'Alal-Mar'ati means, he undertook the maintenance of the woman; he protected her. Qawwāmūn, therefore, means, maintainers, managers of affairs; protectors (Lisān). The verse gives two reasons why man has been made the head of the family, (a) his superior mental and physical faculties; and (b) his being the bread-earner and maintainer of the family. It is, therefore, natural and fair that he, who earns and supplies the money for the maintenance of the family, should enjoy a supervisory status in the disposal of its affairs.

599. Nashazatu-Mar'atu 'alā Zauji-hā means, the woman rose against her husband; resisted him; deserted him (Lane & Tāj).

600. The clause may signify, (a) abstention from conjugal relations; (b) sleeping in separate beds; (c) ceasing to talk to them. These measures are not to remain in force for an indefinite period, for wives are not to be left like a thing suspended (4:130). Four months, according to the Qur'ān, is the maximum limit for abstention from conjugal relations, i.e. practical separation (2:227). If the husband deems the affair to be sufficiently grave, he will have to observe the conditions mentioned in 4:16.

602. The pronoun, "you" in the expression, "if you fear" refers to the Muslim State or to the whole community collectively or the people generally.

603. The arbiters should preferably be chosen from the relations of the contending parties, because they are expected to be acquainted with the real causes of differences and because also it is easier for both parties to put their differences before them.

604. After having enjoined in the preceding verses that one should be kind to one's wife, in the present verse the Qur'ān directs a Muslim to make his kindness so comprehensive as to include in its scope the whole of mankind, from parents, who are the nearest, to strangers who are the farthest removed.

607. Every Prophet will bear witness on the Day of Judgment concerning those to whom he was sent as a Messenger. The word "these" includes both believers and disbelievers, the nature of evidence being different in different cases.

608. Ḥadīth means, a piece of information; an announcement; news or tidings (Lane).

609. Sukārā is the plural of Sakarān which means, a person who is drunk; or is in a fit of anger; in raptures of love; is stricken with fear; or is overpowered by sleep or some other disturbing element which may distract his attention or obscure his reason, etc. (Lane).

610. The expression, "nor when you are unclean," means that just as a man cannot perform Prayers when he is not in full possession of his senses, similarly he cannot perform Prayers when he is unclean until he performs total ablution by bathing. Sexual intercourse creates a sort of uncleanness in the body which must be removed by bathing in order to ensure proper state of purity, cheerfulness, and vivacity necessary for worship.

611. The clause, except when you are travelling along a way, means that though ordinarily a person who is in a state of "uncleanness" cannot perform

And if you are ill or you are on a journey while unclean, or if one of you comes from the privy or you have touched women[612] and you find no water, then betake yourselves to pure dust and wipe therewith your faces and your hands. Surely, Allāh is Effacer of sins, Forgiving.

his Prayers except after proper bathing, yet if he becomes "unclean" when he is actually travelling on the way, bathing is not obligatory for him. He can in this case perform Tayammum as ordered in the concluding part of the verse.

612. Of the four classes, viz. the sick; those on a journey; those coming from the privy; and those having gone in unto their wives, only the last two, being in a state of uncleanness, need ablution or washing as the case may be, and if they do not find water, they can perform Tayammum. For the former two classes no condition as to water is necessary. They may resort to Tayammum even if they find water. This is why the words "while unclean" have been added after the words if you are ill or you are on a journey. It must be noted that the expression "on a journey" is the same as the expression "travelling along a way", both signifying the state of actual travelling when one is, as it were, on the wing. Dust has been chosen as a substitute for water because, just as water reminds a person of his origin (77:21), thus creating in him a sense of humility; similarly dust calls to his mind the other humble substance from which he is created (30:21).

And if they had said, 'We hear and we obey,' and 'hear thou,' and 'Unẓurnā,' it would have been better for them and more upright. But Allāh has cursed them for their disbelief; so they believe but little.

615. Shirk which is tantamount to treason in spiritual terminology extends to loving or trusting a thing or a being as one should love or trust God. The verse only relates to the time after death, i.e. one who dies in a state of Shirk will not be forgiven.

616. It was tantamount to forging a lie on the part of the Jews to say that God would raise no more Prophets because they needed none. If the people had become corrupt, a Prophet was sure to appear and he did appear in the person of the Holy Prophet of Islām.

619. Medical science has now established the fact that the skin is much more sensitive to pain than the flesh, there being a larger number of nerves in the former. The Qur'ān revealed this great truth about fourteen hundred years ago by saying that the skin and not the flesh of the inmates of Hell will be renewed after being burnt up.

620. The expression, plenteous shade, signifies an atmosphere of peace and calm, free from all pain-giving elements.

621. Authority or power to rule has been here described as a "trust" of the people in order to point out that it belongs to the people and is not the birthright of any individual or dynasty. The Qur'ān disapproves of dynastic or hereditary rule and institutes instead a representative form of government. The Chief is to be elected; and in electing him the people are bidden to vote for one best fitted for the office.

622. The Head of the Muslim State and all those persons who are entrusted with the duty of administration are enjoined to use their authority equitably and well.

61. Hast thou not seen those who assert that they believe in what has been revealed to thee and what has been revealed before thee? They desire to seek judgment from the Evil One, although they were commanded not to obey him. And Satan desires to lead them far astray.

623. The word "obey" which has been repeated before the words "Allāh" and "Messenger" has been omitted before the words, those who are in authority, in order to point out that obedience to the authority properly constituted by Law amounts to obedience to God and His Messenger. The injunction embodied in the words, "refer it to Allāh and His Messenger" may either relate to differences between the rulers and the ruled or to those among the ruled themselves. In the former case the significance is that if there is a matter on which disagreement arises between the rulers and the ruled, it should be decided in the light of the Quranic teaching, or failing that, in that of the Sunnah and the Ḥadīth. If, however, the Qur'ān, the Sunnah and the Ḥadīth are silent on the question, it should be left to those in whom is vested the authority to manage the affairs of Muslims. The verse seems to refer to matters concerning particularly the affairs of the State. The basic commandment in this respect is that all obedience to authority is subject to the obedience to God and His Messenger. In case, however, of differences and disputes regarding social matters, etc., to which the words if you differ seem to refer, the Muslims should be guided by Islamic Law and not by any other law.

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمْ تَعَالَوْا إِلَىٰ مَا أَنزَلَ اللَّهُ وَإِلَى الرَّسُولِ رَأَيْتَ الْمُنَافِقِينَ يَصُدُّونَ عَنكَ صُدُودًا ﴿٦٢﴾

624. The Prophet was enjoined to deal kindly with the Hypocrites. They were not yet beyond redemption. It was possible that they might one day see the error of their ways and become sincere and true Muslims. War was never waged against them.

625. It is sometimes sought to be inferred from these words that though a Prophet is to be always obeyed by the people to whom he preaches his Message, yet he himself does not give allegiance to any other Prophet. This is evidently a wrong inference. The fact that a Prophet is the object of other people's obedience does not preclude the possibility of his being himself subordinate to, and a follower of, another Prophet. Aaron was a subordinate Prophet to Moses (20:94).

67. And if We had commanded them: [c]'Slay your people[627] or leave your homes,' they would not have done it except a few of them; and if they had done what they are exhorted to do, it would surely have been better for them and conducive to greater strength;

وَّاِذًا لَّاٰتَيْنٰهُمْ مِّنْ لَّدُنَّآ اَجْرًا عَظِيْمًا ﴿٦٨﴾ۙ

[a]4:111. [b]4:60. [c]6:78. [d]19:37; 36:62; 42:53, 54.

626. The commandment pertains to the Holy Prophet as Head of the Muslim State and may, therefore, apply also to his Rightly-guided Successors.

627. The words, Uqtulū Anfusakum, do not mean "slay yourselves" but "slay your people" (2:55), or "lay down your lives in the cause of God".

وَمَنْ يُّطِعِ اللّٰهَ وَالرَّسُوْلَ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ مَعَ الَّذِيْنَ اَنْعَمَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِمْ مِّنَ النَّبِيّٖنَ وَالصِّدِّيْقِيْنَ وَالشُّهَدَآءِ وَالصّٰلِحِيْنَ ۚ وَحَسُنَ اُولٰٓئِكَ رَفِيْقًا ۝٧٠

[a]4:14; 8:25. [b]1:7; 5:21; 19:59; 57:20.

628. The particle ma' denotes concomitance of two or more persons in one place or at one time; or in position, rank or status. It also implies the sense of assistance as in 9:40 (Mufradāt). The particle has been used at several places in the Qur'ān in the sense of fī meaning "among" (3:194 & 4:147).

629. The verse is important as it describes all the avenues of spiritual progress open to Muslims. All the four spiritual ranks—the Prophets; the Truthful; the Martyrs and the Righteous—can now be attained only by following the Holy Prophet. This is an honour reserved for the Holy Prophet alone. No other Prophet shares it with him. The inference is further supported by the verse which speaks of Prophets generally and says: And those who believe in Allāh and His Messengers, they are the Truthful and the Martyrs in the presence of their Lord (57:20). When read together these two verses signify that, whereas the followers of other Prophets could only attain the rank of the Truthful, the Martyrs, and the Righteous and no higher, the followers of the Holy Prophet can rise to the rank of a Prophet also. The Baḥrul-Muḥīṭ (vol. iii, p. 287) quotes Ar-Rāghib as saying: "God has divided the believers into four classes in this verse, and has appointed for them four stages, some of which are lower than the others, and He has exhorted true believers not to remain behind any of these stages." And adds that "Prophethood is of two kinds, general, and special. The special Prophethood, viz. the Law-bearing Prophethood, is now unattainable; but the general Prophethood continues to be attained."

630. Ḥidhr means, caution or precaution; vigilance; guard; state of preparation; or of fear (Lane). The word extends to all kinds of precautions and preparations necessary for defence, and has been understood to include the putting on of weapons of defence.

632. The verse refers to Hypocrites or the internal enemies of Islām and mentions their two prominent traits.

632A. The words also mean, what is the matter with you that you fight not.

633. The verse is a clear proof of the fact that Muslims never started hostilities. They only fought in self-defence in order to protect their religion and save their weaker co-religionists.

634. The verse refers to a class of men who show eagerness to fight when they are told not to fight, but when the actual time for fighting arrives, they refuse to fight or try to avoid it by various pretexts, thus showing that their former eagerness for fighting was either insincere or was due to temporary excitement.

81. Whoso obeys the Messenger obeys Allāh indeed; and whoso turns away, then We have not sent thee to be a keeper over them.

635. The words either refer to the general physical law about the inevitability of death, or they may be taken as particularly addressed to the Hypocrites, who disobeyed the Divine command to fight, thinking that in this way they could avoid death.

636. The expression, All is from Allāh, is true in this sense that God is the Final Controlling Power in the universe and whatever good or evil befalls man is attributable either to a general law of nature or to one or other of His special decrees.

637. God has endowed man with natural powers and faculties by making right use of which he can achieve success in life and by making wrong use of them involves himself in trouble. Thus all good is here attributed to God and all evil to man.

638. The reference is to secret plotting, whether by night or during the day. As generally secret plotting is done at night, the word Bayyata has been used here, the night time affording a sort of cover and secrecy.

639. "Discrepancy" may either refer to contradictions in the text of the Qur'ān and the teachings contained therein; or to lack of agreement between the Quranic announcements in the form of prophecies and their result or fulfilment.

640. The reason why tidings relating to peace have been mentioned before those relating to fear is that the Qur'ān is here speaking of war, and during war it is sometimes more dangerous to give publicity to matters likely to lead to happy results than to matters of fear. Under normal conditions, too, the injunction mentioned is very important, exercising direct influence on the discipline and well-being of society. The words, those in authority, refer to the Holy Prophet or his Successors or to the Chiefs appointed by them.

85. Fight, therefore, in the way of Allāh—thou art not made responsible except for thyself[641]—and [a]urge on the believers to fight. It may be that Allāh will restrain the might of those that disbelieve; and Allāh is stronger in might and stronger in inflicting punishment.

مَنْ يَّشْفَعْ شَفَاعَةً حَسَنَةً يَّكُنْ لَّهٗ نَصِيْبٌ مِّنْهَا ۚ وَمَنْ يَّشْفَعْ شَفَاعَةً سَيِّئَةً يَّكُنْ لَّهٗ كِفْلٌ مِّنْهَا ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ عَلٰى كُلِّ شَيْءٍ مُّقِيْتًا ﴿٨٦﴾

86. Whoso makes a righteous intercession shall have a share thereof, and whoso makes an evil intercession, shall have a like portion thereof,[642] and Allāh is Powerful over everything.

641. The command to fight does not relate to the Holy Prophet alone. If that had been the case, the second clause in the verse would have read as Illā Nafsuka, i.e. none is made responsible except thyself, and not as Illā Nafsaka, i.e. thou art not made responsible except for thyself, as in the verse. What the verse means is that every Muslim, not excluding the Holy Prophet, was individually answerable to God. But the duty of the Holy Prophet was twofold, (1) to fight himself, and (2) to urge his followers to fight, though he was not responsible for them.

642. The verse signifies that the act of intercession or recommendation should not be treated lightly; for the person who intercedes on behalf of another is answerable for his act. If the intercession or recommendation is right and just, he will have a suitable reward; otherwise he will be held responsible for the evil consequences thereof. It is further noteworthy that in connection with "righteous intercession" the word used is Naṣīb (share or fixed share) whereas in connection with "evil intercession" the word is Kifl

وَاِذَا حُيِّيْتُمْ بِتَحِيَّةٍ فَحَيُّوْا بِاَحْسَنَ مِنْهَآ اَوْ رُدُّوْهَا ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ عَلٰى كُلِّ شَیْءٍ حَسِيْبًا ﴿۸۷﴾

89. What is the matter with you that you are divided into two parties regarding the Hypocrites?[644] And Allāh has overthrown them because of what they earned. Desire ye to guide him whom Allāh has caused to perish? And for him whom Allāh causes to perish thou shalt not find a way.

(like portion). This is to point out that whereas the punishment of an evil intercession will only be the like thereof, the good reward of a righteous intercession will have no such restriction but will be as large as God has fixed it, i.e. ten times greater.

643. The verse points to a social duty.

644. Believers disagreed among themselves as to how the Hypocrites living in the suburbs of Medina, i.e. the Bedouin tribes of the countryside, should be treated. Some sympathized with them and recommended leniency towards them, hoping that in this way they might gradually reform themselves, while others looked upon them as a serious menace to Islām and advocated strict measures. Muslims are here told that these Hypocrites are the enemies of God and that they should not allow themselves to be divided on their account.

90. [a]They wish that you should disbelieve as they have disbelieved, so that you may become alike. Take not, therefore, friends from among them,[645] until they emigrate in the way of Allāh. And if they turn away, then seize them and kill[646] them wherever you find them; and take no friend nor helper from among them;

91. Except those who are connected with a people between whom and you there is a pact, or those who come to you, while their hearts shrink from fighting you or fighting their own people. And if Allāh had so pleased, He could have given them power against you, then they would have surely fought you. So, if they keep aloof from you and fight you not, and make you an offer of peace, then Allāh has allowed you no way of aggression against them.

645. The reference is to the Bedouin tribes of the desert. The Qur'ān forbids Muslims to have anything to do with them, or make friends with them or seek their help.

646. As Qatl is also used in the sense of severing all social contacts (2:62), the expression Uqtulūhum may also mean, "have nothing to do with them." This meaning of the expression finds support from the words, take no friend nor helper from among them.

647. The reference seems to be to the two tribes, Asad and Ghaṭfān who had no treaty of alliance with the Muslims. They played a double game and awaited their opportunity. When invited by their people to join them in fighting against the Muslims, they readily accepted the invitation. The directions contained in these verses come into operation when a virtual state of war exists and danger stalks along the land.

648. By Fitnah is here meant, war with the Muslims.

649. As when actual or virtual state of war exists there is the likelihood that a Muslim may be killed by another Muslim by mistake, the present verse gives a timely warning to Muslims to be always on their guard against such an eventuality.

وَبَيْنَهُمْ مِّيْثَاقٌ فَدِيَةٌ مُّسَلَّمَةٌ اِلٰٓى اَهْلِهٖ وَتَحْرِيْرُ رَقَبَةٍ مُّؤْمِنَةٍ ۚ فَمَنْ لَّمْ يَجِدْ فَصِيَامُ شَهْرَيْنِ مُتَتَابِعَيْنِ ۙ تَوْبَةً مِّنَ اللّٰهِ ۗ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ عَلِيْمًا حَكِيْمًا ﴿٩٢﴾

And Allāh is All-Knowing, Wise.

وَمَنْ يَّقْتُلْ مُؤْمِنًا مُّتَعَمِّدًا فَجَزَآؤُهٗ جَهَنَّمُ خٰلِدًا فِيْهَا وَغَضِبَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَلَعَنَهٗ وَاَعَدَّ لَهٗ عَذَابًا عَظِيْمًا ﴿٩٣﴾

94. And [b]whoso slays a believer intentionally, his reward shall be Hell wherein he shall abide. And Allāh shall be wroth with him and shall curse him and shall prepare for him a great punishment.

650. In case the slain person is a believer but happens to belong to a hostile people, then the offender shall only free a believing slave and no blood-money shall be levied on him, because money paid to a hostile people would go to strengthen their military power against Islām. In the expression, and if he be of a people between whom and you is a pact, the words, and he be a believer, have not been repeated, in order to point out that the law with regard to the Dhimmīs (disbelievers under the protection of Muslims), or Mu'āhids (disbelievers belonging to a people in alliance with Muslims) is the same as for the Muslims.

651. It is worthy of note that disbelievers who are in alliance with Muslims have not only been placed on a par with the latter, but even a distinction has been made in their favour. In case a Muslim is slain, the command relating to the payment of penalty has been placed after the injunction to free a slave; while in case one belonging to a people in alliance with Muslims is slain, the order has been reversed; the injunction to pay the penalty to his heirs having been put before the injunction to free a slave. This has been done to impress upon Muslims the need of showing special regard for treaties and pacts. The payment of penalty was an obligation which Muslims owed to disbelievers with whom they had made a pact, and it is in order to bring home to them the lesson that they should have particular regard for their pacts and treaties, that the injunction to pay the penalty has in their case been placed before the injunction to free a slave.

652. When a people offers peace or shows a peaceful attitude towards Muslims, the latter are enjoined to respect that attitude and refrain from hostilities. Moreover, as the Muslim Community at Medina was surrounded by hostile tribes, they were enjoined to presume a person who greeted them with Islamic salutation, to be a Muslim unless proved otherwise by investigation.

653. That is to say, if you hold such a person to be a disbeliever without proper investigation, this would mean that you desire to kill him and take possession of his goods. Such conduct would show that you prefer worldly goods to God's pleasure.

654. The verse speaks of two classes of believers: (1) Those who sincerely accept Islām and then try to live up to its teachings but take no part in the struggle to defend and propagate the Faith. These are, as it were, passive believers—"sitters" as the verse calls them. (2) Those who not only live up to the teachings of Islām but also vigorously participate in the work of its propagation. These are active believers—the "strivers" or Mujāhids as they are called. There is, however, a third class of believers who, even though they do not join their brethren in actually fighting disbelievers get an equal reward with those who take part in the actual struggle. They are heart and soul with the Muslims who are Mujāhids, wherever the latter go to fight in the cause of God; but their particular circumstances—disease, poverty, etc., do not allow them to join the expeditions in person.

655. Islām would not be satisfied with a weak or passive belief. If the environments of a believer are not congenial to the Faith he must shift to a

657. The particle 'asā does not indicate doubt on the part of God but is used to keep the believers referred to here in a state of suspense—between hope and fear—so that they may not become lax in Prayer and good deeds. The expression is designed to hold out hope without creating a false sense of security or a state of complacency.

[659] The subject of Prayers in time of fear has been dealt with in the Qur'ān in three separate verses, viz. (1) in 2:240 which deals with Prayers performed in time of extreme fear when no formal Prayer is possible; (2) in the present verse which deals with Prayers performed individually in time of ordinary fear; and (3) in the following verse which deals with Prayers performed in congregation in time of fear. The "shortening of Prayer" as mentioned in the present verse, which relates to the saying of Prayers individually, does not here signify the lessening of the number of Rak'ats which has from the very beginning been fixed at two in a state of journey. It only signifies the saying of the prescribed Prayers quickly when there is danger of an attack from the enemy. The number of Rak'ats to be said when a man is on a journey has ever been two; but in time of danger when one has to say one's Prayers individually, even these two Rak'ats may be gone through quickly (Kathīr). This view is endorsed by Mujāhid, Ḍaḥḥāk, and Bukhārī (ch. on Ṣalātul-Khauf). 'Ā'ishah is reported to have said, 'At first the number of Rak'ats enjoined was two, whether one was on a journey or at home. Later on, however, it was increased to four for those staying at home, but for those on journey it continued to be the same as before' (Bukhārī, ch. on Ṣalāt). 'Umar said, 'The Prayer to be said on a journey is two Rak'ats; the Prayer of the two 'Īds is also two Rak'ats each; the Friday Prayer is also two Rak'ats; this is the full number of Rak'ats without having undergone any curtailment. We learnt this from the very lips of the Holy Prophet' (Musnad, Nasa'ī, & Mājah). Khālid bin Sa'īd once asked Ibn-e-'Umar where was Prayer for the wayfarer mentioned in the Qur'ān which prescribes only the Prayer in time of fear. To this Ibn-e-'Umar replied that they did what they saw the Holy Prophet doing, i.e. saying two Rak'ats of Prayer while on a journey (Jarīr, v. 144; Nasa'ī ch. on Ṣalāt).

لَوْ تَغْفُلُوْنَ عَنْ اَسْلِحَتِكُمْ وَاَمْتِعَتِكُمْ فَيَمِيْلُوْنَ عَلَيْكُمْ مَّيْلَةً وَّاحِدَةً ؕ وَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْكُمْ اِنْ كَانَ بِكُمْ اَذًى مِّنْ مَّطَرٍ اَوْ كُنْتُمْ مَّرْضٰٓى اَنْ تَضَعُوْٓا اَسْلِحَتَكُمْ ۚ وَخُذُوْا حِذْرَكُمْ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ اَعَدَّ لِلْكٰفِرِيْنَ عَذَابًا مُّهِيْنًا ﴿۱۰۳﴾

with thee,[660] and let them take their means of defence and their arms.[661] The disbelievers wish that you were neglectful of your arms and your baggage that they may fall upon you at once. And it shall be no sin for you, because of the inconvenience caused by rain or because you are sick, that you lay aside your arms. But you should always take your precautions. Surely, Allāh has prepared an humiliating punishment for the disbelievers.

فَاِذَا قَضَيْتُمُ الصَّلٰوةَ فَاذْكُرُوا اللّٰهَ قِيٰمًا وَّقُعُوْدًا وَّعَلٰى جُنُوْبِكُمْ ۚ فَاِذَا اطْمَاْنَنْتُمْ فَاَقِيْمُوا الصَّلٰوةَ ۚ اِنَّ الصَّلٰوةَ كَانَتْ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ كِتٰبًا مَّوْقُوْتًا ﴿۱۰۴﴾

104. And when you have finished the Prayer, [a]remember Allāh, standing and sitting, and lying on your sides.[662] And [b]when you are secure from danger, then observe Prayer in the prescribed form; verily Prayer is enjoined on the believers to be performed at fixed hours.

660. Whereas the preceding verse spoke of Prayer in time of fear in the case of individuals, the present one gives the details of the manner of its performance when the Faithful are in the form of a company or group and the Prayer is to be performed in congregation. As many as eleven different forms in which the Prayer was said on different occasions are described in the Ḥadīth (Muḥīṭ).

661. The verse observes a difference between Asliḥah (arms) and Ḥidhr (precautions). Whereas the former may be put aside in moments of comparative security, the latter should never be neglected. See also 4:72.

662. As in the midst of a battle formal Prayers are either said in haste, or performed in the form of one Rak'at, Muslims are enjoined in this verse, that in order to make up the deficiency, they should remember God and pray to Him in an informal manner after the obligatory service is over. This is to compensate for the shortening of Prayer.

وَلَا تَهِنُوْا فِي ابْتِغَآءِ الْقَوْمِ ؕ اِنْ تَكُوْنُوْا تَاْلَمُوْنَ فَاِنَّهُمْ يَاْلَمُوْنَ كَمَا تَاْلَمُوْنَ ۚ وَتَرْجُوْنَ مِنَ اللّٰهِ مَا لَا يَرْجُوْنَ ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ عَلِيْمًا حَكِيْمًا ﴿۱۰۵﴾ ع ۱۲

105. And [a]slacken not in seeking these people. If you suffer, they too suffer even as you suffer. But you hope from Allāh what they hope not. And Allāh is All-Knowing, Wise.

663. The address is to every Muslim.

664. Istighfār constitutes the keystone of all spiritual progress. It does not merely mean verbal asking for forgiveness but extends to such acts as lead to the covering up of one's sins and shortcomings.

665. The word Anfusahum may also mean "their brethren" (2:85, 86; 4:67). The address is general as in the preceding verses.

يَرْضٰى مِنَ الْقَوْلِ ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ بِمَا

113. And whoso commits a fault or a sin,[667] then [c]throws the blame thereof on an innocent person, certainly bears the burden of calumny and a manifest sin.

666. The word Antum (you) shows that in the previous verses it was not the Holy Prophet but Muslims in general who were addressed. The Holy Prophet could not be expected to dispute on behalf of dishonest people. The Qur'ān addresses him because he was the recipient of Divine commandment for the believers.

667. The difference between Khaṭī'ah (fault) and Ithm (sin) mentioned side by side in this verse is that the former can be both intentional and unintentional and is often confined to the doer, while the latter is intentional and its scope may extend to other people as well. Moreover, the former may signify a dereliction of duty due to God, but the latter is often an offence against both God and man and is, therefore, more serious and is deserving of greater punishment than the former. of a fault or a sin makes it doubly grave, if the offender tries to shift the blame to an innocent person. This is why such an attempt has been termed not only as Buhtān (calumny) but also as Ithmun Mubīn (manifest sin).

668. The words Faḍl (grace) and Raḥmah (mercy), though general in their significance, sometimes denote, "worldly goods" and "spiritual blessings" respectively (2:65). Thus the verse would mean that the Holy Prophet enjoyed God's protection in temporal as well as in spiritual matters.

669. The Hypocrites adopted various ways to bring the Holy Prophet to grief. They would try to mislead him into coming to a wrong decision in matters of vital importance. But their evil designs were always frustrated because he was invariably led by God to the right course concerning matters affecting the future of Islām.

670. Najwā means, a secret talk between two or more persons or telling secrets to another person or holding secret conferences. The word is not restricted to secret conferences but applies to all sorts of conferences whether secret or otherwise in which specially invited people meet to discuss vital matters (Lisān & Muḥīṭ).

672. As a mark of their devotion to false deities, the Arabs used to cut the ears of dedicated animals in order to distinguish them from other animals. This foolish practice persists even to this day in some countries.

or disfiguring the body of a newborn child; and (4) by turning to evil use that which Allāh has created for good use.

674. The verse places men and women on the same level so far as their works and rewards are concerned. Both are equally entitled to good reward if they do good works.

675. This verse gives the essence of Islām which is complete submission to the will of God and the complete devotion of all one's faculties and powers to His service and holds out Abraham as true model for a Muslim to imitate and follow.

676. The "decision" is referred to in the following three verses.

مَا كُتِبَ لَهُنَّ وَ تَرْغَبُوْنَ اَنْ تَنْكِحُوْهُنَّ وَالْمُسْتَضْعَفِيْنَ مِنَ الْوِلْدَانِ ۙ وَاَنْ تَقُوْمُوْا لِلْيَتٰمٰى بِالْقِسْطِ ؕ وَمَا تَفْعَلُوْا مِنْ خَيْرٍ فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ بِهٖ عَلِيْمًا ﴿۱۲۷﴾ concerning them. And [a]that which is recited to you elsewhere in the Book[677] concerns the orphan girls whom you give not what is prescribed for them and whom you desire to marry, and also concerns the weak among children.[677A] And He enjoins you to deal equitably with the orphans. And whatever good you do, surely Allāh knows it well.

وَاِنِ امْرَاَةٌ خَافَتْ مِنْۢ بَعْلِهَا نُشُوْزًا اَوْ اِعْرَاضًا فَلَا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْهِمَاۤ اَنْ يُّصْلِحَا بَيْنَهُمَا صُلْحًا ؕ وَالصُّلْحُ خَيْرٌ ؕ وَاُحْضِرَتِ الْاَنْفُسُ الشُّحَّ ؕ وَاِنْ تُحْسِنُوْا

129. And [b]if a woman fears ill-treatment or indifference from her husband, it shall be no sin[678] for them that they be suitably reconciled to each other; and reconciliation is best. And people are prone to covetousness.[679] And if you do

[a]4:4. [b]4:35.

677. The allusion in the words, that which is recited to you in the Book, is to the 4th verse of the present Sūrah. It was prohibited to Muslims to marry those orphan girls whose rights they could not adequately safeguard. 'Umar, the Second Caliph would not allow the guardians of wealthy and handsome orphan girls to marry them and would insist on other and better husbands being found for them. The verse signifies that some instructions about women have already been given in the Qur'ān and that other instructions follow.

677A. Walad which is singular of Wildān is used both for a boy and a girl, but here Wildān signifies girls, marriage with whom is mentioned here.

678. The words, it shall be no sin for them that they be suitably reconciled to each other, constitute a peculiar Quranic expression denoting both exhortation and rebuke. They may be interpreted as something like this: "Do the contending parties think that they would be committing a sin if they became reconciled to each other? It is no sin to do so. On the contrary, it is a commendable thing."

679. These words give the real cause that often leads to estrangement between husband and wife. It is niggardliness on the part of the husband and covetousness on the part of the wife.

وَتَتَّقُوْا فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ بِمَا تَعْمَلُوْنَ خَبِيْرًا ﴿١٢٩﴾

good and are righteous, surely Allāh is aware of what you do.

وَلَنْ تَسْتَطِيْعُوْٓا اَنْ تَعْدِلُوْا بَيْنَ النِّسَآءِ وَلَوْ حَرَصْتُمْ فَلَا تَمِيْلُوْا كُلَّ الْمَيْلِ فَتَذَرُوْهَا كَالْمُعَلَّقَةِ ؕ وَاِنْ تُصْلِحُوْا وَتَتَّقُوْا فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ غَفُوْرًا رَّحِيْمًا ﴿١٣٠﴾

130. And [a]you cannot keep perfect balance[680] between wives, however much you may desire it. But incline not wholly to one so [b]that you leave the other like a thing suspended. And if you are reconciled and act righteously, surely Allāh is Most Forgiving and Merciful.

وَاِنْ يَّتَفَرَّقَا يُغْنِ اللّٰهُ كُلًّا مِّنْ سَعَتِهٖ ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ وَاسِعًا حَكِيْمًا ﴿١٣١﴾

131. And if they separate, Allāh will make both independent[681] out of His abundance; and Allāh is Bountiful, Wise.

وَلِلّٰهِ مَا فِى السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِى الْاَرْضِ ؕ وَلَقَدْ وَصَّيْنَا الَّذِيْنَ اُوْتُوا الْكِتٰبَ مِنْ قَبْلِكُمْ وَاِيَّاكُمْ اَنِ اتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ ؕ وَاِنْ تَكْفُرُوْا فَاِنَّ لِلّٰهِ مَا فِى السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِى

132. And [c]to Allāh belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth. And [d]We have assuredly commanded those who were given the Book before you and commanded you also to fear Allāh. But if you disbelieve,

[a]4:4. [b]2:232. [c]See 4:127. [d]42:14.

680. It is humanly impossible for a man to keep perfect balance between his wives in all respects; for instance love being an affair of the heart over which man has no control, a husband cannot be expected to have equal love for all his wives. But he can certainly deal by them with equity in other respects, and this he must do. So acting equitably between one's wives pertains only to such acts over which one has control. This is the interpretation the Holy Prophet himself put upon this verse.

681. If, in spite of the husband and the wife having done their utmost to live amicably, they find that they cannot pull on together, and separation takes place, then God promises to provide for both parties more suitable matches. But according to Islām divorce is "Of all permissible things most hateful in the eyes of God" (Dāwūd, ch. on Ṭalāq).

الْاَرْضِ ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ غَنِيًّا حَمِيْدًا ﴿١٣٢﴾

then remember that to Allāh belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth, and Allāh is Self-Sufficient, Praiseworthy.

682A. The words also mean, lest you deviate.

683. O ye who profess to be believers show by your deeds and actions that your faith is genuine and firmly founded.

684. The verse incidentally refutes the baseless allegation that apostasy in Islām is punishable with death.

وَقَدْ نَزَّلَ عَلَيْكُمْ فِي الْكِتٰبِ اَنْ اِذَا سَمِعْتُمْ اٰيٰتِ اللّٰهِ يُكْفَرُ بِهَا وَيُسْتَهْزَاُ بِهَا فَلَا تَقْعُدُوْا مَعَهُمْ حَتّٰى يَخُوْضُوْا فِيْ حَدِيْثٍ غَيْرِهٖٓ ۚ اِنَّكُمْ اِذًا مِّثْلُهُمْ ۭ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ جَامِعُ الْمُنٰفِقِيْنَ وَالْكٰفِرِيْنَ فِيْ جَهَنَّمَ جَمِيْعَۨا ۙ﴿۱۴۰﴾

141. And He has already revealed to you in the Book[685] that, when you hear the Signs of God being denied and mocked at, sit not with those who indulge in such talk [a]until they engage in some other talk; for in that case you would be like them.[686] Surely, Allāh will assemble the hypocrites and the disbelievers in Hell, all together;

142. [b]Those who await your ruin. If you have a victory from Allāh, they say, 'Were we not with you?' And if the disbelievers have a share of it, they say to them, 'Did we not on a previous occasion get the better of you and save you from the believers?' Allāh will judge between you on the Day of Resurrection; and Allāh will not grant the disbelievers a way to prevail against the believers.

685. The reference in the words, He has already revealed to you in the Book, is to 6:69 which was revealed at Mecca prior to the verse under comment; yet 6:69 has been placed after it in the existing arrangement of the Qur'ān which shows that the present arrangement of the Quranic verses is not the same in which they were revealed.

686. The underlying principle in the injunction contained in the present verse is threefold: (1) To emphasize the seriousness and importance of religious matters; (2) to protect the believers against the demoralizing influences of the disbelievers' company and (3) to engender and promote feelings of pious jealousy for religion in the hearts of Muslims.

[a]2:10. [b]9:54. [c]3:29, 119; 4:140.

687. It is not God but the Holy Prophet whom, in reality, the hypocrites seek to deceive because the Prophet is an agent of God and all plots hatched against him are really so many plots hatched to frustrate the purpose of God. Therefore God Himself will punish them for their deceitful conduct. See also 2:16.

688. The expression means, "between belief and disbelief" or "between believers and disbelievers".

689. The Qur'ān's strong denunciation of the hypocrites is a clear refutation of the charge that it exhorts its followers to spread Islām by means of the sword. If a man is forced to accept Islām against his will, he will never make a sincere believer.

إِلَّا الَّذِينَ تَابُوا وَأَصْلَحُوا وَاعْتَصَمُوا بِاللَّهِ وَأَخْلَصُوا دِينَهُمْ لِلَّهِ فَأُولَٰئِكَ مَعَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ ۖ وَسَوْفَ يُؤْتِ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ أَجْرًا عَظِيمًا ﴿١٤٦﴾

690. Shukr on the part of God consists in forgiving a person or commending him or regarding him with satisfaction, goodwill or favour and hence necessarily recompensing him or rewarding him (Lane).

691. Islām does not allow Muslims to speak ill of other people in public, but he who is wronged may cry aloud when he is actually being transgressed against, so that other men may come to his help. He may as well seek redress in a law court, but should not go about complaining to all and sundry.

وَيَقُوْلُوْنَ نُؤْمِنُ بِبَعْضٍ وَّنَكْفُرُ بِبَعْضٍ ۙ

154. The People of the Book ask thee to bring down upon them a Book from Heaven. [b]They asked Moses a greater thing than this. They said, [c]'Show us Allāh openly.'[693] Thereupon a destructive punishment overtook them because of their transgression. Then [d]they took the calf for worship after clear Signs had come to them, but We pardoned even that. And We gave Moses manifest authority.

692. The verse means that they accept God and reject His Prophets; or accept some Prophets and reject others; or accept some claims of a Prophet and reject other claims. True faith lies in total submission, accepting God and all His Messengers with all their claims. No middle course is permissible.

695. See 27.

696. The Jews accused Mary of fornication ("Jewish Life of Jesus" by Panther). The fact that the Jews uttered "a calumny" against Mary constitutes clear evidence of the fatherless birth of Jesus. For, if Jesus had a father, what "calumny" was it that the Jews uttered against Mary? Merely taunting her for the claims made by Jesus could in no sense be called a calumny. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān refutes this charge by saying that the mother of Jesus was a righteous woman (3:43; 5:76).

صَلَبُوْهُ وَلٰكِنْ شُبِّهَ لَهُمْ ؕ وَاِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ
اخْتَلَفُوْا فِيْهِ لَفِيْ شَكٍّ مِّنْهُ ؕ مَا لَهُمْ بِهٖ مِنْ
عِلْمٍ اِلَّا اتِّبَاعَ الظَّنِّ ۚ وَمَا قَتَلُوْهُ يَقِيْنًا ۙ﴿۱۵۸﴾ not, nor did they bring about his death on the cross,[697] but he was made to appear[698] to them like one crucified; and those who differ therein are certainly in a state of doubt about it; [a]they have no certain knowledge thereof, but only pursue a conjecture; and they did not arrive at a certainty concerning it.[699]

[a]10:37; 53:29.

697. Mā Ṣalabū-hu means, they did not cause his death on the cross. Ṣalab being a well-known manner of killing. They say Ṣalabul-Liṣṣa, i.e. he put the thief to death by putting him on the cross. The verse does not deny the fact of Jesus's being nailed to the cross but denies his having died on it.

698. The words Shubbiha La-hum mean, Jesus was made to appear to the Jews like one crucified; or the matter of the death of Jesus became obscure or dubious to them. Shubbiha 'Alaihil-Amru means, the matter was rendered confused, obscure or dubious to him (Lane).

699. The expression, Mā Qatalū-hu Yaqīnan, means, (1) they did not kill him for certain; (2) they did not convert it (their conjecture) into certainty, i.e. their knowledge about the death of Jesus on the cross was not so certain as to have left no doubt in their minds that they had really killed him. In this case the pronoun hu in Qatalū-hu would refer to the noun Ẓann (conjecture). The Arabs say Qatalash-Shai'a Khubran, i.e. he acquired full and certain knowledge of the thing so as to dispel all possibility of doubt about it (Lane, Lisān & Mufradāt). That Jesus did not die on the cross but died a natural death is clear from the Qur'ān. The following facts, as narrated in the Gospels themselves lend powerful support to the Quranic version:

1. Being a Divine Prophet Jesus could not have died on the cross because according to the Bible "he that is hanged is accursed of God" (Deut. 21:23).

2. He had prayed to God in great agony to "take away this cup (of death on the cross) from me" (Mark, 14:36; Matt. 26:29; Luke, 22:42); and his prayer was heard (Heb. 5:7).

3. He had predicted that like Jonah who had gone into the belly of the whale alive and had come out of it alive (Matt. 12:40) he would remain in an excavated sepulchre for three days and would come out of it alive.

4. He had also prophesied that he would go to seek out the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel (John, 10:16). Even Jews in Jesus's time believed that the Lost Tribes of Israel had become dispersed in different lands (John, 7:34, 35).

5. Jesus had remained hung on the cross only for about three hours (John, 19:14) and being a person of normal constitution he could not have died in such a short time.

6. Immediately after he had been taken down from the cross his side was pierced and blood and water flowed out of it which was a certain sign of life (John, 19:34).

7. The Jews themselves were not sure of Jesus's death because they had asked Pilate to have a guard posted at his sepulchre "lest his disciples come by night and steal him away and say unto the people, 'He is risen from the dead' " (Matt. 27:64).

8. There is not to be found in all the Gospels a single recorded statement of an eyewitness to the effect that Jesus was dead when he was taken down from the cross or when he was placed in the tomb. Moreover, none of the disciples was present at the scene of Crucifixion, all having fled when Jesus was taken to Calvary. The fact of the case seems to be that, presumably due to the dream of his wife "to have nothing to do with that just man," Pilate had believed Jesus to be innocent and had, therefore, conspired with Joseph of Arimathea, a respected member of the Essene Order to which Jesus himself belonged before he was commissioned as a Prophet, to save his life. The trial of Jesus took place on Friday, Pilate having purposely prolonged it, knowing that the next day being the Sabbath Day the condemned persons could not be left on the cross after sunset. When at last he found himself compelled to condemn Jesus, Pilate gave his judgment only three hours before sunset, thus making himself sure that no person of normal health could die in such a short time by remaining on the cross. He took additional care to see that Jesus was given wine or vinegar mingled with myrrh to render him less sensitive to pain. When after three hours' suspension he was taken down from the cross in an unconscious state (probably under the influence of vinegar which was administered to him), Pilate readily granted Joseph of Arimathea's request and handed over his body to him. Unlike those of the two malefactors who were hung along with Jesus, his bones were not broken and Joseph had him placed in a spacious room hewn in the side of a rock. There was no medical autopsy, no stethoscopic test, no inquest with the aid of the evidence of those who were last with him ("Mystical life of Jesus" by H. Spencer Lewis).

9. An ointment, the famous Marham-e-'Īsā, (Ointment of Jesus) was prepared and applied to Jesus's wounds and he was tended and looked after by Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus, also a very learned and highly respected member of the Essene Brotherhood.

10. After his wounds had been sufficiently healed, Jesus left the tomb and met some of his disciples and had his food with them and walked the whole distance from Jerusalem to Galilee on foot (Luke, 24:50).

11. "The Crucifixion by an Eye Witness", a book, which was at first published in 1873 in U.S.A. and which is an English translation of an ancient Latin copy of a letter written seven years after the Crucifixion by an Essene Brother in Jerusalem to a member of this Brotherhood in Alexandria, lends powerful support to the view that Jesus had been taken down from the cross alive. The book narrates in detail all the events leading to the Crucifixion, the scenes at the Calvary and also the incidents that took place afterwards. See also 'The Larger Edition of the Commentary'.

Two different views prevail among the Jews regarding Jesus's alleged death by Crucifixion. Some of them hold that he was first killed and then his dead body was hung on the cross, while others are of the view that he was put to death by being fixed to the cross. The former view is reflected in The Acts 5:30 where we read "which ye slew and hanged on a tree". The Qur'ān refutes both these views by saying, they slew him not, nor did they bring about his death on the cross. The Qur'ān first rejects the slaying of Jesus in any form, and then proceeds to deny the particular way of killing by hanging on the cross. It does not deny that Jesus was hung on the cross; it only denies his death on it.

700. The Jews exultingly claimed to have killed Jesus on the cross and thus to have proved that his claim to be a Divine Prophet was not true. The verse along with the preceding one contains a strong refutation of the charge and clears him of the insinuated blemish and speaks of his spiritual elevation and of his having been honoured in the presence of God. There is absolutely no reference in the verse to his physical ascension to heavens. It only says that God exalted him towards Himself which clearly signifies a spiritual exaltation, because no fixed abode can be assigned to God.

701. The pronoun "his" in the expression "before his death" stands for the noun "none", meaning every one among the People of the Book before his own death……This meaning is supported by the second reading of Mautihī which is Mautihim (their death) as reported by Ubayy (Jarīr, vi. 13). The Jews believe that they killed Jesus on the cross because they seek to prove that he was not a true Prophet. The Christians believe that he had died on the cross, and this is because they have adopted the doctrine of Atonement.

161. So, because of the transgression of the Jews, [a]We forbade[702] them pure things which had been allowed to them, and also because of their hindering many men from Allāh's way,

وَّاَخْذِهِمُ الرِّبٰوا وَقَدْ نُهُوْا عَنْهُ وَاَكْلِهِمْ اَمْوَالَ النَّاسِ بِالْبَاطِلِ ؕ وَاَعْتَدْنَا لِلْكٰفِرِيْنَ مِنْهُمْ عَذَابًا اَلِيْمًا ﴿١٦٢﴾

702. The verse does not refer to any material thing which was forbidden to the Jews after having been allowed before, because no Law-giving Prophet had appeared among them after Moses to forbid them things that had been allowed to them by the Torah. It refers to the spiritual Divine favours of which they had become deprived. It was also to the spiritual blessings the Jews had lost that Jesus referred when he said, I come to allow you some of that which had been forbidden to you (3:51), i.e. I come to restore to you some of the Divine blessings of which you have been deprived on account of your misdeeds.

703. The Jews were forbidden to lend money on interest to other Jews, but they were permitted to take interest from non-Jews (Exod. 22:25; Lev. 25:36, 37; Deut. 23:19, 20). But they broke the Law and began to take interest even from Jews (Neh. 5:7). Later they promised Nehemiah to give up this evil practice (Neh. 5:12). But they again broke their word; and so, in accordance with the prophecy of Ezekiel (Ezek. 18:13), they, as a nation, suffered death and were scattered over the earth to be persecuted at the hands of their enemies.

704. This means those learned men among the Jews who embraced Islām. The word "believers" has been added to indicate that only those Jews are meant here who became Muslims.

وَمَآ اُنْزِلَ مِنْ قَبْلِكَ وَالْمُقِيْمِيْنَ الصَّلٰوةَ وَالْمُؤْتُوْنَ الزَّكٰوةَ وَالْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِاللّٰهِ وَالْيَوْمِ الْاٰخِرِ ؕ اُولٰٓئِكَ سَنُؤْتِيْهِمْ اَجْرًا عَظِيْمًا ﴿۱۶۳﴾ ع ۲۲ ۱۰ ۲

been sent down to thee and what was sent down before thee, and especially those who observe[705] Prayer and those who pay the Zakāt and those who believe in Allāh and the Last Day. To these We will surely give a mighty reward.

R. 23.

اِنَّآ اَوْحَيْنَآ اِلَيْكَ كَمَآ اَوْحَيْنَآ اِلٰى نُوْحٍ وَّالنَّبِيّٖنَ مِنْۢ بَعْدِهٖ ۚ وَاَوْحَيْنَآ اِلٰٓى اِبْرٰهِيْمَ وَاِسْمٰعِيْلَ وَاِسْحٰقَ وَيَعْقُوْبَ وَالْاَسْبَاطِ وَعِيْسٰى وَاَيُّوْبَ وَيُوْنُسَ وَهٰرُوْنَ وَسُلَيْمٰنَ ۚ وَاٰتَيْنَا دَاوٗدَ زَبُوْرًا ﴿۱۶۴﴾

164. Surely, [a]We have sent revelation to thee, as We sent revelation to Noah and the Prophets after him; and We sent revelation to Abraham and Ishmael and Isaac and Jacob and his children and to Jesus and Job and Jonah and Aaron and Solomon, and [b]We gave David a Book.[706]

وَرُسُلًا قَدْ قَصَصْنٰهُمْ عَلَيْكَ مِنْ قَبْلُ وَرُسُلًا لَّمْ نَقْصُصْهُمْ عَلَيْكَ ؕ وَكَلَّمَ اللّٰهُ مُوْسٰى تَكْلِيْمًا ﴿۱۶۵﴾

[a]2:137; 3:85; 6:85-88. [b]17:56. [c]40:79.

705. The variation in the vowel-points of Muqīmīn is permissible according to rules of Arabic grammar. It is resorted to for the purpose of emphasis (Kashshāf, i. 336).

706. Some Prophets have been mentioned here, and in the succeeding verse, to point out that the mission of the Prophet of Islām was not a new thing. The specific mention of Zabūr, the Book of Wisdom given to David in the present verse and of the Law-bearing revelation vouchsafed to Moses in the succeeding one, is made to hint that the Qur'ān combines in itself both "Law and wisdom".

707. The Qur'ān mentions by name only 24 Prophets whereas according to a saying of the Holy Prophet as many as 124,000 Prophets appeared in the spoke at great length[707A]—

رُسُلًا مُّبَشِّرِيْنَ وَمُنْذِرِيْنَ لِئَلَّا يَكُوْنَ لِلنَّاسِ عَلَى اللّٰهِ حُجَّةٌۢ بَعْدَ الرُّسُلِ ؕ وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ عَزِيْزًا حَكِيْمًا ﴿۱۶۶﴾

166. Messengers, [a]bearers of glad tidings and Warners,[708] so that people may have no plea against Allāh after the coming of the Messengers.[709] And Allāh is Mighty, Wise.

لٰكِنِ اللّٰهُ يَشْهَدُ بِمَآ اَنْزَلَ اِلَيْكَ اَنْزَلَهٗ بِعِلْمِهٖ ۚ وَالْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ يَشْهَدُوْنَ ؕ وَكَفٰى بِاللّٰهِ شَهِيْدًا ﴿۱۶۷﴾ؕ

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا وَصَدُّوْا عَنْ سَبِيْلِ اللّٰهِ قَدْ ضَلُّوْا ضَلٰلًۢا بَعِيْدًا ﴿۱۶۸﴾

168. [c]Those who disbelieve and hinder others from the way of Allāh, have certainly strayed far away.

world (Musnad, v. 266). Elsewhere, the Qur'ān says: There is not a people to whom a Warner has not been sent (35:25).

707A. Besides the translation given in the text, the clause also means, "to Moses Allāh spoke particularly or directly".

708. The words, bearers of glad tidings and Warners, point to two essential functions of God's Messengers. They are bearers of glad tidings for those who accept them, promising them prosperity in this world and blissful felicity in the life to come, and are warners of impending misery and afflictions for those who reject them.

709. God sends His Messengers so that the people, on being punished, should have no excuse to say that no Warner was sent to them to point to their evil deeds and to warn them (20:135).

710. God has placed in the Qur'ān vast treasures of eternal truth and spiritual knowledge that bear witness to its being the Word of God. The manifold qualities of the Qur'ān furnish irrefutable evidence of its Divine origin for those who ponder over it.

إِنَّ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا وَظَلَمُوا لَمْ يَكُنِ اللَّهُ

169. Surely, [a]those who have disbelieved and have acted unjustly, Allāh will not forgive them, nor will He show them any way;

170. Except the way of Hell, wherein they shall abide for a long, long period. And [b]that is easy for Allāh.

يَا أَيُّهَا النَّاسُ قَدْ جَاءَكُمُ الرَّسُولُ بِالْحَقِّ

وَالْأَرْضِ ۚ وَكَانَ اللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَكِيمًا ﴿١٧١﴾

171. O mankind! the Messenger has indeed come to you with Truth from your Lord; believe therefore, it will be better for you. But if you disbelieve, verily, to Allāh belongs whatever is in the heavens and in the earth. And Allāh is All-Knowing, Wise.

172. [c]O People of the Book! exceed not the limits in your religion, and say not of Allāh anything but the truth. Verily, the Messiah, Jesus, son of Mary, was only a Messenger of Allāh, and a fulfilment of His Word[711] which He sent down to Mary, and [d]a mercy[712]

[a]4:138. [b]33:31; 64:8. [c]5:78. [d]58:23.

711. See 414.

712. Rūḥ means, soul or spirit; the breath which pervades the whole body after the exit of which man dies; Divine revelation or inspiration; the Qur'ān; angel; joy and happiness; mercy (Lane). From the above-mentioned different meanings of Rūḥ and Kalimah it becomes clear that no special spiritual status attaches to Jesus. These and similar expressions have been used in the Qur'ān about other Prophets and also about other righteous persons such as Mary (15:30; 32:10; 58:23). They have been used to clear Jesus and Mary of the foul charges that were brought against them by the Jews and not to assign to them any special spiritual status.

To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth. And sufficient is Allāh as a Guardian.

Then as for those who believe and do good works, [e]He will give them their rewards in full and will give them more out of His grace; but as for those who disdain and are proud, He will punish them with a painful punishment. And [f]they shall find for themselves beside Allāh no friend, nor helper.

713. "Manifest proof" may either refer to the Qur'ān which contains great and manifest Signs and proofs; or to the Holy Prophet who, by his personal example, demonstrated that the Quranic teachings are a great blessing for mankind.

But if there be two sisters, then they shall have two-thirds of what he leaves. And if the heirs be

[a]7:158; 64:9. [b]3:102; 4:147. [c]4:13.

714. "A clear Light" may also either refer to the Holy Prophet or to the Qur'ān.

715. In 4:13 mention was made of one kind of Kalālah who leaves behind neither a parent nor an offspring and who has brothers and sisters from the side of mother only. The present verse refers to a Kalālah who has brothers and sisters from both his parents, or from the side of his father only. By comparing the verse under comment with 4:13 it becomes clear that for obvious reasons the share allotted to the former class of brothers and sisters is less than that allotted to those of the latter class.

This part of the law of inheritance has been purposely treated separately from the law dealt with in 4:12, 13. After dealing at some length with the charges levelled against Jesus by the Jews, the Qur'ān reverts to the subject of Kalālah at the end of the Sūrah, thus seeking (beside completing the law relating to Kalālah) to draw attention to the spiritual heirlessness of Jesus who in a sense was also a Kalālah. Jesus was born without the agency of a father, and he left behind no spiritual successor. Ibn-e-'Abbās defines a Kalālah as one who leaves no child and Jesus was spiritually a Kalālah since he left behind him no spiritual successor.

AL-MĀ'IDAH
(Revealed after Hijrah)

Date of Revelation

According to Commentators of the Qur'ān this Sūrah belongs to the Medinite period. 'Ā'ishah is reported by Ḥākim and Imām Aḥmad to have said that this is the last Sūrah which was revealed to the Holy Prophet. Taking into consideration all the relevant data one is inevitably led to the conclusion that the Sūrah was revealed in the last years of the Holy Prophet's ministry and some of its verses were actually among the last to be revealed. Though Imām Aḥmad says on the authority of 'Asmā', daughter of Yazīd, that the whole of this Sūrah was revealed together, it seems that because a major portion of it was revealed at one time, the whole of it came to be regarded as having been revealed at the same time. This is why perhaps Rodwell has assigned the Sūrah the last place in order of revelation.

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah, like Sūrahs Āl-e-'Imrān and An-Nisā', deals mainly with Christian doctrines and particularly denounces the doctrine that the Law is a curse. It opens with the injunction that all covenants must be fulfilled and that it was necessary to lay down laws as to what is lawful and what is unlawful. It further claims that the Qur'ān has laid down ordinances bearing upon man's complete moral and spiritual development, and it is in this respect that the Qur'ān constitutes the final and irrevocable Divine Law for all mankind. This claim of the Qur'ān is embodied in the fourth verse of the Sūrah, which also implies that because the Law is most essential for the spiritual guidance of man and his moral development, it is wrong to regard it as a curse. The verse further hints that when the eating of meat offered to idols and of blood and of strangled animals was forbidden to Christians and this commandment constituted an ordinance of the Law (The Acts, 15:20, 29), they could not take exception to the Law and condemn it as a curse. The Sūrah proceeds to lay down Islamic commandments with regard to eatables and enjoins that they should be Ḥalāl, i.e. allowed by the Law and Ṭayyib (pure), i.e. their use should in no way contravene or offend against medical or hygienic regulations. Islām, alone of all religions, while laying down ordinances regarding lawful and unlawful things, has pointed out the nice distinction between what is only lawful and what is both lawful and pure. Next, it is stated that the Jews and the Christians broke God's covenants and disregarded and defied Divine commandments which led to their moral and spiritual ruin and brought disgrace and humiliation on them. But they could now rehabilitate themselves into Divine favour by accepting the Holy Prophet. Christians are further warned that at first by deifying Jesus they caused the wrath of God to come down upon them and that now they have become jealous of the Holy Prophet because God has chosen him for His favours. This jealous attitude of theirs towards the Holy Prophet resembles that of Cain towards Abel. The Sūrah proceeds to state that while Jews and Christians lose no opportunity to oppose Islām, they themselves have become so depraved as to have ceased to act upon their own religious Scriptures and are increasingly becoming ignorant of the teachings of their own religions. They are told that if they do not see their way to accepting Islām they should at least follow their own Scriptures and abide by their own Law. But if, owing to the political supremacy of Islām, they have sometimes to seek the judgment of the Islamic Government, that judgment will and must inevitably be according to the Quranic Law. Then attention of the Muslims is drawn to the great change that has come over their political position and they are told that as the power of the infidels has been finally broken and Christians now are to be their principal enemies, and Jews, in spite of their enmity towards Christianity, are to side with Christians, they (Muslims) should be on their guard against both of them. Some light is then shed on the stratagems and machinations employed by the enemies of Islām to turn Muslims away from their Faith and to lower it in their estimation. After this, importance of the preaching of Islām is impressed upon Muslims. They are told that the one real method effectively to defeat the activities of Jews and Christians is to preach the Message of Islām to them and to bring home to them its truth from their own Scriptures. It should also be made clear to them that now their salvation lies in Islām and that their idolatrous beliefs are false, particularly the doctrine that Jesus was son of God. Similarly, mention is made of Jews who, by opposing and persecuting the two great Prophets—David and Jesus—incurred God's displeasure. Their attention is drawn to their past faults and failings, and Christians being more amenable to accepting the truth than Jews, commandments have been laid down which particularly concern them, viz. commandments about what is lawful and what is unlawful; commandments about oaths; about the use of wine and games of chance and about hunting; and also commandments regarding criticism of religion and ordinances about religious rites and ceremonies and about evidence. Last of all a somewhat detailed mention is made of the particular circumstances of Jesus's ministry, and it is shown that they closely resemble those of other Prophets of God and that therefore there was nothing of Godhead or Divinity about him and that all material progress of Christian people was due to a prayer of his. But they have made improper use of their material progress and prosperity and have succumbed to polytheistic beliefs and practices. God will, on the Day of Judgment, establish their guilt and put them to shame from the mouth of Jesus himself. The Sūrah ends with the declaration that to God belongs the Kingdom of the heavens and the earth and He has power over all things, which implies the hint that the belief that the Kingdom of God is only in heaven as the Christians say, has no foundation.

716. The expression Bahīmatul-An'ām does not mean the quadrupeds from among cattle for the obvious reason that quadrupeds form a class wider than cattle. It means the quadrupeds which belong to the class of cattle or which resemble cattle. This peculiar construction has been used to signify that whereas all quadrupeds do not make lawful food, those of them that form the counterparts of cattle are allowed. Thus the expression is intended to comprise not only cattle but also such beasts of the forest as correspond to cattle, i.e. wild goat, wild cow, wild buffalo, etc.

717. The words, other than those which are being announced to you, refer to the animals mentioned in the verse below. The words, however, do not refer to the flesh of an animal which dies of itself and blood and the flesh of swine, because "swine" is not included among cattle and the exception here made is from among the cattle only and not from among all animals and also because this portion had already been revealed in 2:174.

718. "Signs of Allāh" signifies anything that leads to the knowledge and realization of God (2:159).

719. Abstaining from profaning the Sacred Month may also mean, paying due respect to the works performed therein.

And when you put off the pilgrims' garb[720A] and are clear of the Sacred Territory, you may hunt. And [b]let not the enmity of a people, that they hindered you from the Sacred Mosque, incite you to transgress. And help one another in righteousness and piety; but help not one another in sin and transgression.[720B] And fear Allāh; surely, Allāh is Severe in punishment.

4. [c]Forbidden to you is the flesh of an animal which dies of itself, and blood and the flesh of swine; and that on which is invoked the name of any other than Allāh; and that which has been strangled; and that which has been beaten to death; and that which has been

[a]59:9. [b]5:9; 11:90. [c]2:174; 6:146.

720. Hady and Qalā'id both signify animals that are taken to Mecca for sacrifice during the Pilgrimage, Qalā'id meaning particularly such animals as have collars round their necks (Muḥīṭ); and Hady meaning all animals without distinction that are brought to Mecca for sacrifice.

720A. Hunting is lawful for a pilgrim after he has finally put off the pilgrim's garb on completion of the Pilgrimage and he has gone out of the Sacred Territory.

720B. What a beautiful principle of individual and international conduct. If this principle were carried into effect, all rancour, hatred and mutual animosity would disappear.

That is an act of disobedience. This day have those who disbelieve despaired of harming your religion. So fear them not, but fear Me. This day have I perfected your religion for you and completed[721] My favour upon you and [b]have chosen for you Islām as religion. But [c]whoso is forced by hunger, without being willfully inclined to sin, then, surely, Allāh is Most Forgiving and is Merciful.

721. Ikmāl (perfecting) and Itmām (completing) are noun-infinitives, the first relating to quality and the second to quantity. The first word shows that doctrines and commandments affecting the physical, moral and spiritual development of man have been embodied in the Qur'ān in their most perfect form; while the second signifies that nothing which was needed by man has been left out. Again, the former word pertains to commandments relating to the physical side of man or his external self, while the latter relates to his spiritual side or his inner self. The perfection and completion of God's religion and favour have been mentioned side by side with the law relating to eatables in order to point out that the use of lawful and good food forms one of the very important bases of good morals which in turn provide a pedestal for spiritual progress. Incidentally, the verse was the last to be revealed, the Holy Prophet having died only 82 days after its revelation.

5. They ask thee what is made lawful[722] for them. Say, 'All good things have been made lawful for you; and what you have taught the beasts and birds of prey to catch for you,[722A] training them for hunting and teaching them of what Allāh has taught you. So eat of that which they catch for you, and [a]pronounce thereon the name of Allāh. And fear Allāh, surely Allāh is Quick in reckoning.'

6. This day all good things have been made lawful for you. And the food[723] of the People of the Book is lawful for you. And your food is lawful for them. And lawful for you are chaste believing

[a]6:119.

722. The forbidden things having been mentioned in the preceding verse, the rest are here declared lawful, provided they are Ṭayyib (good and pure) and are not harmful to one's health or morals, it being left to each individual to decide what is good for him and what is not, in view of his particular circumstances and the condition of his health. The Holy Prophet has definitely excluded beasts of prey and birds having claws from the category of lawful food.

722A. That which is caught by a trained beast or bird of prey is equated with that which is properly slaughtered, inasmuch as it has been killed through an agency trained by man. It is necessary, however, to pronounce the name of God over it to make its eating lawful.

723. This means that the meat of animals slaughtered in accordance with the Law of Torah is lawful for the Muslims inasmuch as all food permissible under the Law of Torah is lawful under the Law of Islām. As a precautionary measure, however, the name of Allāh may be invoked over such food. According to Ibn-e-'Abbās "food" here means, "lawful food" (Dhabīḥah) or the meat of an animal properly slaughtered (Bukhārī; ch. Dhabīḥatu Ahlil-Kitāb).

And if you be unclean, purify yourselves by bathing. And if you are ill or you are on a journey while unclean, or one of you comes from the privy or you have touched women, and you find not water, betake yourselves to

724. Whereas Islām permits marriage of Muslim men with non-Muslim women from among the People of the Book, it certainly prefers that Muslim men should ordinarily marry only Muslim women.

725. The feet are here mentioned after the head, not because they are intended to be only wiped like the head, but because they come last in the process of ablution. This is apparent from the fact that the word Arjula (feet) has been put in the accusative case in the standard text, like the words Wujūha (faces) and Aidiya (hands), thus showing that, like the latter, the word "feet" is also governed in the accusative case by the verb "wash" and not by the particle bā' (over) which governs the word Ru'ūs (heads) only.

725A. See 610-612.

726. It is the Muslims, and not the People of the Book, that are addressed here. As, however, no special covenant is known to have ever been made with Muslims, the "covenant" mentioned here must be taken to refer to the process of Bai'ah (oath of allegiance) taken from every new convert to Islām, or the word may refer to the Law revealed in the Qur'ān and accepted by Muslims.

وَالَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا وَكَذَّبُوْا بِاٰيٰتِنَآ

727. The verse may not necessarily be applied to any particular incident and may be taken to refer generally to the protection which God vouchsafed to Muslims from the aggressive attacks of their enemies. By the words "a people" are here primarily meant the disbelievers of Mecca who spared no pains to extirpate Islām and the Muslims.

727A. By "twelve leaders" are meant the twelve Prophets of Israel who came after Moses. According to some authorities, these were the twelve "princes" said to have been appointed by Moses (Num. 1:5-16; 43:3-15). See also 2:61.

14. So, because of their breaking their covenant, We have cursed them, and have hardened their hearts. They pervert the words from their proper places and have forgotten a good part of that with which they were exhorted. And thou wilt not cease to discover treachery on their part, except a few of them. So pardon them and show forbearance. Surely, Allāh loves those who do good to others.[727B]

15. And from those also who say, 'We are Christians,' We took a covenant,[727C] but they too have forgotten a good part of that with which they were exhorted. So We have caused enmity and hatred among them till the Day of Resurrection. And Allāh will soon let them know what they have been doing.

727B. The verse contains a very apt description of the Jewish people.

727C. This seems to be a reference to Jesus's prophecy about the advent of the Holy Prophet (John, 16:12, 13) which his followers deliberately ignored or upon which they vainly sought to put a wrong interpretation.

727D. The Holy Prophet (33:46, 47).

And Allāh has power over all things.

[a]62:7. [b]2:285 3:130; 5:41. [c]5:16.

729. History is silent whether any Prophet had appeared in any country between the Holy Prophet and Jesus, at least not among the People of the Book. The world was, in fact, expecting and preparing for the advent of humanity's greatest Deliverer. Some statements of doubtful authenticity (Kalbī) mention that Jesus was followed by some Prophets, Khālid bin Salām, being one of them. But the Holy Prophet himself is reported to have said that there was no Prophet between him and Jesus (Bukhārī).

وَاِذْ قَالَ مُوْسٰى لِقَوْمِهٖ يٰقَوْمِ اذْكُرُوْا نِعْمَةَ اللّٰهِ عَلَيْكُمْ اِذْ جَعَلَ فِيْكُمْ اَنْۢبِيَآءَ وَجَعَلَكُمْ مُّلُوْكًا ۖ وَّاٰتٰىكُمْ مَّا لَمْ يُؤْتِ اَحَدًا مِّنَ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ﴿٢١﴾

21. And remember when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, call to mind [a]Allāh's favour upon you when He raised Prophets among you and made you kings,[730] and gave you what He gave not to any other among the peoples;

يٰقَوْمِ ادْخُلُوا الْاَرْضَ الْمُقَدَّسَةَ الَّتِيْ كَتَبَ اللّٰهُ لَكُمْ وَلَا تَرْتَدُّوْا عَلٰٓى اَدْبَارِكُمْ فَتَنْقَلِبُوْا خٰسِرِيْنَ ﴿٢٢﴾

23. They said, 'O Moses, there is in that land an unruly and powerful people,[732] and we shall not enter it until they go forth from it. But if they go forth from it, then we will enter it.'[733]

[a]1:7; 4:70; 19:59.

730. The substitution of the word kum (you) instead of Fī-kum implies the hint that whereas each and every member of a nation to which a ruling monarch belongs possesses, as it were, dominion and sovereignty, the followers of a Prophet are not sharers in his Prophethood.

731. The expression, ordained for you, contains an implied promise that God would help them and make them victorious, if only the Israelites had the courage to enter the Holy Land.

732. This means that the annals of these people were known to the Israelites. The Amalekites and other unruly Arab tribes lived in the Holy Land at that time. The Israelites were very much afraid of them.

733. Compare this insolent and cowardly attitude of the companions of Moses to the willing and almost unbelievable sacrifices of the Companions of the Holy Prophet, who were ever eager to jump into the very jaws of death at the slightest bidding of their Master. When the Holy Prophet, with a handful of his ill-equipped Companions intended to go forth to meet the vastly

قَالَ رَجُلٰنِ مِنَ الَّذِيْنَ يَخَافُوْنَ اَنْعَمَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِمَا ادْخُلُوْا عَلَيْهِمُ الْبَابَ ۚ فَاِذَا دَخَلْتُمُوْهُ فَاِنَّكُمْ غٰلِبُوْنَ ۚ وَعَلَى اللّٰهِ فَتَوَكَّلُوْٓا اِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُّؤْمِنِيْنَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24. Thereupon two men[734] from among those who feared their Lord, on whom Allāh had conferred His special favour, said, 'Enter the gate advancing against them; when once you have entered it, then surely you will be victorious. And [a]put your trust in Allāh, if you are believers.'

قَالُوْا يٰمُوْسٰٓى اِنَّا لَنْ نَّدْخُلَهَآ اَبَدًا مَّا دَامُوْا فِيْهَا فَاذْهَبْ اَنْتَ وَرَبُّكَ فَقَاتِلَآ اِنَّا هٰهُنَا قٰعِدُوْنَ ﴿٢٥﴾

superior and much better-equipped Meccan force at Badr, he consulted them about it. Thereupon one of the Companions stood up and addressed the Holy Prophet in the memorable words: "We would not say to thee, O Prophet of God, as was said by the companions of Moses, 'go thou and thy Lord and fight and here we sit.' On the contrary, O Prophet of the Lord! We are ever with thee and we will go with thee whither thou goest. We will fight the enemy on thy right and on thy left and in thy front and behind thy back; and we trust God that thou wilt see from us what will comfort thine eyes" (Bukhārī).

734. The "two men" spoken of here are generally supposed to be Joshua, the son of Nun; and Caleb, the son of Jephunneh (Num. 14:6). But from the context Moses and Aaron appear more likely to be the "two men" here referred to. The word Rajul (man) is expressive of manliness and courage. That these two brave men were Moses and Aaron themselves may also be inferred from the fact that Moses prayed for himself and his brother, Aaron (5:26). God does not name these two men but simply speaks of them as "two brave men" in order to praise their manliness and courage and also to condemn by implication the cowardice of the other Israelites who were with them.

28. And relate to them with truth the story of the two sons of Adam,[736] when they each offered an offering, and it was accepted from one of them and was not accepted from the other. The latter said, 'I will surely kill thee.' The former replied, 'Allāh accepts only from the righteous;'

لَئِنْ بَسَطْتَ إِلَيَّ يَدَكَ لِتَقْتُلَنِي مَا أَنَا بِبَاسِطٍ يَدِيَ إِلَيْكَ لِأَقْتُلَكَ ۚ إِنِّي أَخَافُ اللَّهَ رَبَّ الْعَالَمِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

29. 'If thou stretch out thy hand against me to kill me, I shall not stretch out my hand against thee to kill thee. I do fear Allāh, the Lord of the Universe;'

[a]2:244.

735. When the Israelites behaved in a cowardly manner, God decreed that they should continue to wander in the wilderness for 40 years in order that the life of the desert should invigorate them and infuse in them a new life and should strengthen their morals. In the meantime, the old generation had become practically extinct and the younger generation grew brave and strong enough to conquer the Promised Land.

736. "The two sons of Adam" figuratively signify any two individuals from among mankind. The parable also illustrates the inimical attitude of the Israelites towards the descendants of Ishmael because Prophethood had become transferred from them to the Ishmaelites in the person of the Holy Prophet.

اِنِّیْۤ اُرِیْدُ اَنْ تَبُوْٓاَ بِاِثْمِیْ وَاِثْمِكَ فَتَكُوْنَ مِنْ اَصْحٰبِ النَّارِ ۚ وَذٰلِكَ جَزٰٓؤُا الظّٰلِمِیْنَ ﴿۳۰﴾

31. But his evil self induced him to kill his brother, so he killed him and became one of the losers.

فَبَعَثَ اللّٰهُ غُرَابًا یَّبْحَثُ فِی الْاَرْضِ لِیُرِیَهٗ كَیْفَ یُوَارِیْ سَوْءَةَ اَخِیْهِ ؕ قَالَ یٰوَیْلَتٰۤى اَعَجَزْتُ اَنْ اَكُوْنَ مِثْلَ هٰذَا الْغُرَابِ فَاُوَارِیَ سَوْءَةَ اَخِیْ ۚ فَاَصْبَحَ مِنَ النّٰدِمِیْنَ ﴿۳۲﴾

32. Then Allāh sent a raven which scratched in the ground,[739] that He might show him how to hide the corpse of his brother. He said, 'Woe is me! Am I not able to be even like this raven so that I may hide the corpse of my brother?' And then he became remorseful.

737. Urīdu is derived from Rāda which sometimes does not express an actual wish but simply a practical state or condition likely to develop in a certain manner (18:78). The verse does not mean that Abel desired his brother Cain to be cast into Hell. What he meant was simply that the natural and inevitable result of his own non-aggressive attitude would be that his brother would go to Hell.

738. Ithmī means, "the sin committed against me." The would-be victim is only describing the consequences of his brother's intended action.

739. Commentators differ as to whether the incident of the raven did actually happen or it is only a parable. It is not improbable that an incident of this nature might have actually occurred. Study of the ways and habits of birds has led to many useful discoveries. See Gen. 4:1-15; and 'The Jerusalem Targum.'

34. The only reward of those, [b]who wage war against Allāh and His Messenger and strive to create disorder in the land, is that they be slain or crucified or their hands and feet be cut off on account of their enmity, or they be expelled from the land.[741]

[a]7:102; 9:70; 14:10; 40:23. [b]9:107.

740. What is hinted at in the verse is that an incident similar to that of the two sons of Adam mentioned here but of much greater import was to take place later. There was to appear among the brethren of the Israelites a Prophet. This fact was to enrage the Israelites against that Prophet and they were to become thirsty for his blood on account of envy, even as Cain had become thirsty for the blood of his brother Abel. The Prophet was to be no ordinary soul. He was to be a World-Reformer, ordained to bring the eternal Law for all mankind whose entire future depended on him, and therefore slaying him was equivalent to slaying the whole of mankind, and the preservation of his life was, as it were, the preservation of the whole of mankind.

741. Islām does not hesitate to take extreme measures when the interests of the State or society at large so demand to uproot a dangerous evil. It refuses to pander to the false sentiments of emotional visionaries but follows the dictates of reason and sound judgment while prescribing punishment for public offences. The punishment prescribed here is of four categories, the form of the punishment to be inflicted in a particular case would depend upon the attending circumstances. Awarding or imposition of punishment is the concern of Government and not that of any individual. The words "expelled

يَا أَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا اتَّقُوا اللَّهَ وَابْتَغُوا إِلَيْهِ الْوَسِيلَةَ وَجَاهِدُوا فِي سَبِيلِهِ لَعَلَّكُمْ تُفْلِحُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

37. Surely, if [d]those who disbelieve had all that is in the earth and as much over again to from the land" according to Imām Abū Ḥanīfah signify imprisonment.

742. This and the preceding verse refer not to ordinary dacoits and robbers but to rebels and those miscreants who make aggressive war upon the Muslim State, as is clear from the words, who wage war against Allāh and His Messenger. The inference finds further support from the fact that the present verse promises amnesty to offenders if they repent. But obviously those who commit heinous offences against individuals or society, such as dacoits, robbers and thieves, cannot, in ordinary circumstances, be pardoned by the State even if they repent. They must suffer the penalty of their evil deeds as prescribed by the Law. Surely, repentance may secure for them pardon from God, but the powers of the State are limited in this respect. Political offenders, however, may be forgiven if they repent and desist from further acts of rebellion and other offences against the State.

743. Wasīlah signifies, a means of access to a thing; honourable rank with a king; degree; affinity, a tie or connection (Lane). The word does not mean "an intermediary between God and man." This latter meaning is not only unsupported by the usage of the Arabic language, but is also opposed to the Qur'ān and the sayings of the Holy Prophet. The prayer after the usual 'Call to Prayer' includes the words, "O God! Give Muḥammad Wasīlah," meaning that God may vouchsafe to the Prophet increasing nearness to Himself, and not that the Prophet may have someone to act as intermediary between him and God.

ransom themselves therewith from the punishment of the Day of Resurrection, it would not be accepted from them; and they shall have a painful punishment.

38. They would wish to come out of the Fire, but they will not be able to come out of it and they shall have a lasting punishment.

39. And as for the man who steals and the woman who steals, cut off their hands in retribution of their offence as an exemplary punishment[744] from Allāh. And Allāh is Mighty, Wise.

وَالسَّارِقُ وَالسَّارِقَةُ فَاقْطَعُوْٓا اَيْدِيَهُمَا جَزَآءًۢ بِمَا كَسَبَا نَكَالًا مِّنَ اللّٰهِ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ عَزِيْزٌ حَكِيْمٌ ﴿٣٩﴾

744. Whereas in this verse the words the man who steals have been put before the words the woman who steals because stealing is more common among men than among women, in 24:3 the word fornicatress precedes the word fornicator because the guilt of fornication can more easily be proved against women than against men. This arrangement of words shows that there exists not only an intelligent order in the verses of the Qur'ān, as shown elsewhere, but also an intelligent order in its words. The punishment prescribed for stealing may appear to be too severe. But human experience shows that punishment, if it is to be deterrent, should be exemplary. It is better to be severe to one and save a thousand than to be indulgent to all and ruin many. He certainly is a good surgeon who does not hesitate to amputate a rotten limb to save the whole body. In the heyday of Islām there were extremely rare cases of the cutting of hands of thieves because the punishment prescribed was deterrent and was put in force. Even today incidents of theft are very rare in Arabia where punishment for theft prescribed by the Qur'ān is in force. In order to arrive at a right understanding of the nature of this punishment, it is necessary to know both the literal and metaphorical use of the two words used here, viz. Qaṭ' and Yad. The Arabic expression Qaṭa'a-hū bil-Ḥujjati, means, he silenced him with argument (Lane). And Yad among other things means, the power and capacity to do a certain thing. Thus the

فَمَنْ تَابَ مِنْۢ بَعْدِ ظُلْمِهٖ وَاَصْلَحَ فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ يَتُوْبُ عَلَيْهِ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ غَفُوْرٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ﴿۴۰﴾

40. But [a]whoso repents after his transgression and amends, then will Allāh surely turn to him in mercy; verily, Allāh is Most Forgiving and Merciful.

اَلَمْ تَعْلَمْ اَنَّ اللّٰهَ لَهٗ مُلْكُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ؕ يُعَذِّبُ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ وَيَغْفِرُ لِمَنْ يَّشَآءُ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ عَلٰى كُلِّ شَىْءٍ قَدِيْرٌ ﴿۴۱﴾

41. Dost thou not know that Allāh is He to Whom belongs the [b]Kingdom of the heavens and the earth? He punishes whom He pleases and forgives whom He pleases; and Allāh has power over all things.[745] phrase, Qaṭa'a Yada-hū, metaphorically means, he deprived him of the power to do the thing; or he restrained him from doing it. See also 12:32. In view of this signification of the two words the Arabic expression used in the verse may mean, "deprive them of the power to commit theft or employ any practical means calculated to restrain them from committing theft." Taking the verse literally the punishment prescribed in the verse is maximum punishment, and maximum punishment is awarded in extreme cases only, the lesser punishment being the adoption of any practical means by which the offender is deprived of the capacity of, or restrained from, committing the offence. In awarding the punishment the nature and scope of all the attending circumstances are also to be taken into consideration. Moreover, the use of the word as-Sāriq which is a noun (instead of the verb Saraqa—he stole) implying the sense of intensiveness signifies an habitual thief or one addicted to theft, is worthy of special consideration. Scholars differ as to the amount of money or property stolen for which the prescribed punishment is to be imposed. Whereas according to some traditions it is three dirhams or a quarter of a dīnār, according to others the hand is not to be cut off for stealing fruit on a tree or when theft is committed in the course of journey (Dāwūd). Imām Abū Hanīfah holds it to be ten dirhams, while Imām Mālik and Imām Shāfi'ī consider three dirhams to be the least amount. This disagreement among theologians shows that much discretion is left to the judge who awards the punishment regarding its form and scope.

745. Expressions like these do not mean that the Divine Government of the universe is arbitrary and is based on no system or law. They are intended to point out that God being the Final Authority in the universe, His Word is the law, there being no appeal or redress against His decrees.

748. The verse does not mean that the Qur'ān regarded the Torah as it existed at the time of the Holy Prophet as containing God's judgment on matters of dispute. It only expresses the attitude of the Jews towards the Torah. But at the same time the Qur'ān does not regard it even in its present form as devoid of all truth. According to it the Torah did contain certain truths in their original, pure form, though it also believes that it has been tampered with (2:79). The verse further shows that the Torah in its pristine purity was meant only for the Israelites for a limited period while the Message of the Qur'ān is meant for all peoples for all times.

750. Aḥbār is the plural of Ḥibr which means, a learned man of the Jews; or any learned man; a good or righteous man (Lane). In this verse the Qur'ān brings home to the Jews the charge mentioned in the previous verse, viz. when even the Prophets of God who followed Moses were required to judge according to the Torah, who else can refuse to refer his disputes to it?

وَلَا تَشْتَرُوْا بِاٰيٰتِيْ ثَمَنًا قَلِيْلًا ؕ وَمَنْ لَّمْ يَحْكُمْ بِمَآ اَنْزَلَ اللّٰهُ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْكٰفِرُوْنَ ﴿۴۵﴾

Gospels. It also formed part of the teaching of Moses though Moses's teaching lays stress on retaliation, as does that of Jesus on forgiveness and non-resistance.

752. Muhaimin means, witness; afforder of security and peace; controller and superintendent of the affairs of men; guardian and protector (Lisān). The Qur'ān is here spoken of as a guardian over the previous Scriptures in the sense that it has preserved all that was imperishable and of permanent worth and value in them, and has left out that which lacked the element of permanence and failed to meet the needs of mankind. Again, it is called a guardian over the previous Scriptures because it enjoys Divine protection against being tampered with, a blessing denied to them.

753. Shir'ah signifies the religious Law of God consisting of such ordinances as those about Fasting, Prayer and Pilgrimage and other acts of piety; a way of belief and conduct which is manifest and right (Lane). Minhāj means, manifest, plainly apparent and open road or way (Lane). Al-Mubarrad says that the former word signifies the beginning of a way and the latter the well-trodden body of it (Qadīr). Thus Shir'ah is the law that mostly relates to spiritual matters and Minhāj is the law that relates to secular matters. Shir'ah also means, a way leading to water. The meaning is that God has equipped all His creatures, according to the capacity of each, with the means to find the way to the spring of spiritual water, i.e. Divine revelation.

754. Ḥukm means, judgment, rule, jurisdiction, dominion, government, ordinance, decree, law; predicament (Lane).

756. The verse should not be construed to prohibit or discourage just or benevolent treatment of Jews, Christians and other disbelievers (60:9). It refers only to those Jews or Christians who are at war with Muslims and who are always hatching plots against them.

757. Jews and Christians forget their own differences and become united in their opposition to Islām. Truly, has the Holy Prophet said, "All disbelief forms one community," viz. all disbelievers, however inimical to one another, behave like one people when opposed to Muslims.

758. Dā'irah means, a turn of fortune, specially an evil accident, a misfortune; a calamity; defeat or rout; slaughter or death (Lane).

759. "Victory" mentioned in the verse may either refer to the Fall of Mecca or to victory in general. The word "event" coming after victory evidently refers to something greater than victory. It seems to refer to the entry into the fold of Islām of the whole of the Arabian Peninsula and its establishment in it.

761. In 5:52 Muslims were forbidden to make friends with disbelievers because of the latter's hostile and belligerent attitude towards them. The present verse gives the reason for that commandment, but does not mean that Muslims are prevented from having friendly dealings of any kind with all disbelievers or from doing good to them and treating them kindly.

762. Hal is an interrogative particle which, when followed by illā, may signify, as in the present verse, a negative statement. The words besides the meaning given in the text may also mean, "you do not find fault with us but because we believe." Sometimes it is used to express a positive statement as in 76:2.

763. Dhālika may either refer to the persecution of the Muslims or to their persecutors.

63. And thou seest many of them hastening towards sin and transgression and [d]the eating of things forbidden. Evil indeed is that which they practise.

لَوْلَا يَنْهٰهُمُ الرَّبّٰنِيُّوْنَ وَالْاَحْبَارُ عَنْ قَوْلِهِمُ الْاِثْمَ وَاَكْلِهِمُ السُّحْتَ ؕ لَبِئْسَ

64. Why do not the divines and those learned in the Law prohibit them from uttering sin[766] and eating things

[a]2:66; 7:167. [b]2:258; 4:52. [c]12:78; 25:35. [d]5:43.

764. The words "apes" and "swine" have been used here in a figurative sense. Certain traits are peculiar to particular animals, and these cannot be fully described unless the animal to which they are known to belong is expressly named. The ape is noted for its mimicry and the swine is characterized by filthy and shameless habits and also by its stupidity. The expression, "who worship the Evil One," shows that the words "apes" and "swine" have been used here figuratively. See 107.

765. By hypocritically uttering the words, we believe, the Jews merely copied the believers' mode of expressing their belief without understanding and realizing their real import; thus they displayed (as hinted in the foregoing verse) the mimicking characteristic of the ape. See also the next verse.

766. As Ithm (sin) is generally committed and not uttered, some Commentators have suggested that the word Qaul (uttering) has been used here in the sense of "doing." But more probably it has been joined to the word Ithm (sin) in order to express the combined idea of both "uttering" and "doing," signifying both sinful words and evil deeds.

And [d]We have cast among them enmity and hatred till the Day of Resurrection. Whenever they [e]kindle a fire for war,[769] Allāh extinguishes it. And they strive to create disorder in the earth, and Allāh loves not those who create disorder.

767. The expression signifies that the Jews shall be punished for their insolence in saying that the hand of Allāh is tied up. They shall become a miserly and stingy nation.

768. The hand is used both as an instrument for bestowing a favour or bounty and as a symbol of power and dominion for seizing and punishing an offender. God's both hands are wide open—the one to bestow plenty on the believers and the other to punish the Jews for their insolence.

769. The words refer to the attempts of Jews to incite the idolaters of Arabia to wage war against Muslims as well as to their own hostile activities against Islām.

770. The expression, Gardens of bliss denotes a perfect state of spiritual joy as well as an abode of bliss. While qualifying the words "Garden" and "Heaven" the Qur'ān has used four distinct expressions: (1) "Gardens of bliss" as in the present verse; (2) "Gardens of Refuge" (32:20); (3) "Gardens of Eternity" (9:72) and (4) "Gardens of Paradise" (18:108). These expressions represent different aspects as well as different grades of Heaven.

771. (1) They would have received heavenly blessings, such as Divine revelation and communion with God, as well as worldly prosperity. (2) They would have had not only timely and abundant rains from above but the earth would also have yielded its produce for them in abundance. (3) God would have provided them with both heavenly and earthly means of progress.

772. The words do not indicate any remissness on the part of the Holy Prophet to convey the Divine Message. They only state a general principle that anyone who fails to convey a part of the message he is entrusted with, in fact, fails to deliver it at all.

773. The expression means that God will not suffer the disbelievers to take the life of the Holy Prophet or disable him permanently so as to render him unfit to discharge his duty.

قُلْ يٰٓاَهْلَ الْكِتٰبِ لَسْتُمْ عَلٰى شَيْءٍ حَتّٰى تُقِيْمُوا التَّوْرٰىةَ وَالْاِنْجِيْلَ وَمَآ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْكُمْ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ ؕ وَلَيَزِيْدَنَّ كَثِيْرًا مِّنْهُمْ مَّآ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْكَ مِنْ رَّبِّكَ طُغْيَانًا وَّكُفْرًا ۚ فَلَا تَاْسَ عَلَى الْقَوْمِ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿٦٩﴾

And surely what has been sent down to thee from thy Lord will increase many of them in [a]rebellion and disbelief; so grieve not for the disbelieving people.

774. In 2:114 Jews and Christians were rebuked for saying about one another that they stood on nothing, and in the present verse the Qur'ān itself uses an identical expression about the People of the Book. But there is an obvious difference between the two statements. Whereas the statement referred to in 2:114 was unqualified, that in the present verse is qualified by the clause, 'unless you observe the Torah……'

775. See 104.

776. By comparing this verse with 5:13, it appears that "the leaders" mentioned in the latter verse are the "Messengers" mentioned in the present verse.

لَا تَهْوٰٓى اَنْفُسُهُمْ ۙ فَرِيْقًا كَذَّبُوْا وَفَرِيْقًا يَّقْتُلُوْنَ ﴿٧١﴾

Indeed, [b]they are disbelievers who say, 'Allāh, He is the Messiah, son of Mary,' whereas the Messiah himself said, 'O children of Israel, [c]worship Allāh Who is my Lord and your Lord.'[777] Surely, whoso associates partners with Allāh, him has Allāh forbidden Heaven, and the Fire will be his resort. And the wrongdoers shall have no helpers.

777. That Jesus taught that God alone is to be worshipped is apparent from the Gospels even in their present distorted form (Matt. 4:10; Luke 4:8).

778. The reference in this verse is to the doctrine of Trinity, that mysterious and abstruse dogma of the three persons of Godhead—the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost—coexisting and co-equal in all respects, combining to make one God and yet remaining three. It was the Nicene Council and especially the the One God. And if they do not desist from what they say, a grievous punishment shall surely befall those of them that disbelieve.

76. The Messiah, son of Mary, was only a Messenger; surely Messengers like unto him had passed away before him. And his mother was a truthful woman. [a]They both used to eat food.[780] See how We explain the Signs for their good, and see how they are turned away.

779. No vicarious sacrifice is needed for the salvation of man. God Himself can forgive all sins. Only a truly penitent and contrite heart is required to attract His forgiveness.

780. The verse advances a number of arguments against the alleged divinity of Jesus; (a) Jesus was no better than other Messengers of God in any way; (b) he was born of a woman; (c) like other human beings he was subject to the natural laws of hunger and thirst and was subject also to the natural ensuing phenomena.

781. Jesus possessed no power to do good or harm to any person. He could not hear prayer, nor was he conversant with the needs of men that he could satisfy them. These are all Divine prerogatives.

782. Of all the Israelite Prophets, David and Jesus suffered most at the hands of the Jews. Jewish persecution of Jesus culminated in his being hung on the cross, and the hardships and privations to which David was subjected by these ungrateful people are reflected in the deep pathos of his Psalms. From the agony of their hearts did David and Jesus curse them. The curse of David resulted in the Israelites being punished by Nebuchadnezzar, who destroyed Jerusalem and carried the Israelites into captivity in 556 B.C.; and as a result of the curse of Jesus, they were visited by terrible afflictions by Titus, who captured Jerusalem in about 70 A.D., devastated the city and profaned the Temple by causing swine—an animal most hated and abhorred by Jews—to be slaughtered therein.

783. One of the great sins which drew the wrath of God upon the Jewish people was that they did not prohibit one another from the evil practices which were so rife among them.

تَرٰى كَثِيْرًا مِّنْهُمْ يَتَوَلَّوْنَ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا ؕ لَبِئْسَ مَا قَدَّمَتْ لَهُمْ اَنْفُسُهُمْ اَنْ سَخِطَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِمْ وَ فِي الْعَذَابِ هُمْ خٰلِدُوْنَ ﴿۸۱﴾

وَلَوْ كَانُوْا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِاللّٰهِ وَالنَّبِيِّ وَمَاۤ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْهِ مَا اتَّخَذُوْهُمْ اَوْلِيَآءَ وَلٰكِنَّ كَثِيْرًا مِّنْهُمْ فٰسِقُوْنَ ﴿۸۲﴾

82. And if they had believed in Allāh and this Prophet,[784] and in that which has been revealed to him, they would not have taken them for their friends, but many of them are transgressors.

لَتَجِدَنَّ اَشَدَّ النَّاسِ عَدَاوَةً لِّلَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا الْيَهُوْدَ وَالَّذِيْنَ اَشْرَكُوْا ۚ وَلَتَجِدَنَّ اَقْرَبَهُمْ مَّوَدَّةً لِّلَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا الَّذِيْنَ قَالُوْۤا اِنَّا نَصٰرٰى ؕ ذٰلِكَ بِاَنَّ مِنْهُمْ قِسِّيْسِيْنَ وَرُهْبَانًا وَّاَنَّهُمْ لَا يَسْتَكْبِرُوْنَ ﴿۸۳﴾

83. Thou shalt certainly find the Jews and those who associate partners with Allāh to be the most vehement of men in enmity against the believers. And thou shalt assuredly find those who say, 'We are Christians,' to be the nearest of them in friendship to the believers. That is because amongst them are savants[785] and monks[786] and because they

[b]3:163.

784. The Prophet referred to in this verse is the Holy Prophet, for wherever in the Qur'ān the word an-Nabī (the Prophet) is used, it invariably refers to the Holy Prophet. Even the Gospels referred to him as "that Prophet" (John, 1:21-25), i.e. the Prophet whose advent was foretold in Deut. 18:18.

785. Qissīs means, the head or chief of the Christians in knowledge or science; a learned man of the Christians who has sought after and acquired great knowledge; an intelligent and learned man (Lane).

786. Ruhbān is the plural of Rāhib which means an ascetic, a Christian monk; a religious recluse; one who devotes himself to religious services or exercises in a cell or monastery (Lane).

are not arrogant.[787]

وَإِذَا سَمِعُوا مَا أُنزِلَ إِلَى الرَّسُولِ تَرَىٰ أَعْيُنَهُمْ تَفِيضُ مِنَ الدَّمْعِ مِمَّا عَرَفُوا مِنَ الْحَقِّ ۖ يَقُولُونَ رَبَّنَا آمَنَّا فَاكْتُبْنَا مَعَ الشَّاهِدِينَ ﴿٨٤﴾

84. And when they hear what has been revealed to this Messenger, thou seest their eyes overflow with tears,[788] because of the truth which they have recognized. They say, [a]'Our Lord, we believe, so write us down among the witnesses;

وَمَا لَنَا لَا نُؤْمِنُ بِاللَّهِ وَمَا جَاءَنَا مِنَ الْحَقِّ وَنَطْمَعُ أَن يُدْخِلَنَا رَبُّنَا مَعَ الْقَوْمِ الصَّالِحِينَ ﴿٨٥﴾

[a]3:54, 194. [b]26:52.

787. This state of affairs, however, was not to last for ever. The Qur'ān elsewhere warns Muslims that they were destined to suffer most grievously at the hands of Christians who would attack them from all sides (21:97). In the Ḥadīth also there are prophecies to this effect. The verse applies only to the Christians of the Holy Prophet's time. History bears out this inference. Najāshī, the Christian King of Abyssinia, gave shelter to Muslim refugees; and Muqauqas, the Christian ruler of Egypt, sent presents to the Holy Prophet. Humility seemed to be one of the chief characteristics of the early Christians. This is evident from the different ways in which the epistles of the Holy Prophet were treated by the King of Persia, who was a heathen, and by Heraclius, Emperor of the Eastern Roman Empire, who was a Christian. The former tore the letter to pieces, while the latter received it with respect and even evinced some inclination towards Islām.

788. The verse has also been applied to the Najāshī in particular. When Ja'far, a cousin of the Holy Prophet and spokesman of Muslim refugees in Abyssinia read to him the opening verses of the Sūrah Maryam, the Najāshī was visibly moved and tears rolled down his cheeks and he said in a voice full of pathos that that exactly was his belief about Jesus, and that he did not look upon him by even a twig more than that (Hishām).

فَاَثَابَهُمُ اللّٰهُ بِمَا قَالُوْا جَنّٰتٍ تَجْرِیْ مِنْ

790A. After stating that the four things mentioned in the previous verse are all abomination in one sense or another, the present verse is confined to two of them—wine and games of chance—and gives additional reasons against them. These reasons rest on political, social, spiritual and socio-religious grounds, these being implied in the words "enmity and hatred and keeping back from the remembrance of Allāh and from Prayer."

[a]57:26. [b]5:2, 97.

791. Two important principles emerge from this verse: (a) That the things of this world having been made for the use and benefit of man are, as a rule, pure and clean; the forbidden things being only exceptions. (b) That clean and pure food exercises a beneficial influence on man's moral development, while unclean and impure food produces an adverse effect. The verse lays down three stages of spiritual progress. In the first stage, believers fear God and believe and do good works; in the second stage they fear God and believe, their belief at this stage being so strong that the doing of good works becomes, as it were, a part and parcel of their belief. In the third stage they fear God and do good to their fellow beings as if they are actually seeing God.

792. As hunting is ordinarily done in a jungle where one is generally alone and where there is none beside God to observe one breaking the Divine commandments, the verse fittingly mentions hunting to illustrate God-fearingness. It also serves as an introduction to the commandment that follows in the next verse.

796. The basis of the Islamic Sharī'ah is threefold: (1) The Law as embodied in the Qur'ān, (2) the Sunnah or the practice of the Holy Prophet, and (3) injunctions and precepts contained in his authentic sayings. These three sources of Islamic Law deal with all the fundamental problems of man, but minor details are left to his discretion to solve them in the light of the above three torch-bearers of guidance, aided and assisted by his own God-given intellectual powers and faculties. It is to matters relating to minor details that the present verse refers.

797. Unnecessary questioning about minor details or seeking legislation on them is generally to the detriment of the questioner himself. It limits his discretion and fetters his judgment, besides binding him to unnecessary and irksome legislation. The Israelites put unnecessary questions to Moses in regard to minor details with the result that they created difficulties for themselves and ended by breaking the commandments of God (2:109).

798C. Ḥāmin: A camel which had fathered seven young ones. It was let loose and was not used for riding or carrying. It was free to pasture and water.

798D. After having stated that minor matters and details have been left to man to legislate as he thinks proper, the verse fittingly draws attention to the fact that such freedom and discretion are not allowed in fundamentals, because in fundamentals unanimity is essential and divergence of opinion may prove immensely harmful. The verse gives an illustration to show that human intellect cannot be trusted with the making of the laws on fundamental matters. The Arabs used to let loose the animals mentioned in the verse in honour of their idols. Besides being based on disbelief and superstition, the practice was also highly foolish. The animals thus let loose wrought great havoc wherever they went. The Qur'ān refers to this evil practice as an example of man-made laws and warns Christians who question the wisdom of a revealed Law to learn a lesson from the morally degrading practices to which the pagan Arabs had resorted because they had no revealed Law to guide them.

799. Our duty only is to preach the truth to others. If they accept it, well and good, but if in spite of our best efforts they refuse to be weaned from their evil course, their rejection of truth will do us no harm. In no case should we

107. O ye who believe! The right evidence among you, when death comes to one of you, at the time of making a will, is of two just men from among you; or of two others not from among you, in case you be journeying in the land and the calamity of death befalls[800] you. You shall detain them both after Prayer[801] for giving evidence; and if you have doubt concerning compromise our principles in order to win others over to our way of thinking. That would be ruining our own souls to save the souls of others and that indeed would be a bad bargain.

800. An incident is reported to have occurred in the time of the Holy Prophet which throws some light on this and the following two verses. A Muslim who died far from home entrusted his goods to two Christian brothers—Tamīm Dārīy and 'Adī—before his death and asked them to deliver the same to his heirs at Medina. On receiving the goods the heirs found that a silver bowl was missing. The two men were thereupon called to explain the loss of the bowl, but they denied all knowledge of it on oath. Later, the heirs of the deceased person happened to see the bowl with some persons at Mecca who told them that it had been sold to them by the two men to whom the deceased had entrusted his belongings. Thereupon the two men were again summoned, and in their presence the heirs of the belongings stated on oath that the bowl was theirs, whereupon it was handed over to them (Manthūr).

801. The Prayer should preferably be the 'Aṣr (Late Afternoon) Prayer, because it was after this Prayer that the Holy Prophet summoned the two witnesses to whom reference has been made above and who were believed to have stolen the silver bowl. The time after Prayer has been chosen with a view to inspiring the witnesses with God-fearingness and inclining their minds to truthfulness. If the witnesses be non-Muslims, then they may be called upon to swear after the time of their own worship, so that the solemnity of the hour may incline them to make true statement.

their evidence, they shall both swear by Allāh, saying, 'We will not take for this any price, even though the person affected thereby be a near relation, nor will we [a]hide the testimony enjoined by Allāh; surely, in that case, we shall be among the sinners.'

فَإِنْ عُثِرَ عَلَىٰ أَنَّهُمَا اسْتَحَقَّا إِثْمًا

اعْتَدَيْنَا ۖ إِنَّا إِذًا لَّمِنَ الظَّالِمِينَ ﴿١٠٨﴾

108. But if it be discovered that the two witnesses are guilty of sin, then two others shall take their place from among those against whom the former two witnesses[802]—who were in a better position to give true evidence—had deposed, and the two latter witnesses shall swear by Allāh, saying, 'Surely, our testimony is truer than the testimony of the former two, and we have not been unfair in any way; for then, indeed, we should be of the unjust.'

بَعْدَ أَيْمَانِهِمْ ۗ وَاتَّقُوا اللَّهَ وَاسْمَعُوا ۗ

109. Thus it is more likely that they will give evidence according to facts or that they will fear that other oaths will be taken after their oaths. And

[a]2:141, 284.

802. The word Aulayān refers to the first two witnesses and signifies that these two were in a better position to give true evidence, being the persons who were with the deceased at the time of his death and in whose presence the will was made and to whom the property was entrusted to be handed over to the heirs of the deceased. The "other" two witnesses should be from among the deceased person's heirs.

803. The answer of the Prophets implies that the object of God's questioning would not be to elicit information from them or to supplement His own knowledge, but that they should give testimony against the disbelievers, as is also clear from 4:42.

804. The act of speaking in the cradle signifies speaking words of wisdom and piety in childhood. This sort of speaking by Jesus reflected great credit on his mother, who, herself being a wise and pious lady, brought him up as a wise and pious child. And the speaking of good words in middle age shows that not only was Mary a pious woman, but Jesus too was a righteous man so that even when he was of middle age and was no longer under the direct influence of his mother, he spoke words of piety and wisdom. See also 418.

808A. The Christians were granted temporal power in the beginning as under the Romans and they hold sway now over vast areas of the earth.

809. There were to be two periods of prosperity and progress for the Christian peoples, as the word 'Īd literally meaning "a day which returns," shows. Christian peoples were granted worldly goods in abundance in the early ages after Constantine and then in the 18th and 19th centuries they had material prosperity and political grandeur in such measure as has no parallel in the history of any other people.

810. The punishment referred to in the verse is the same as mentioned in

R. 16.

And when Allāh will say, "O Jesus, son of Mary, didst thou say to men, 'Take me and my mother for two gods[811] beside Allāh?'", He will answer, "Holy art Thou, I could never say[812] that to which I had no right. 19:91. The last two World Wars along with their repercussions may constitute one phase of the fulfilment of this prophecy and God alone knows what dire punishments are yet in store for the Christian nations of the West.

811. The verse refers to the practice of the Christian Church to ascribe Divine powers to Mary. Mary's help is invoked in Litany, and in Catechism of the Roman Church the doctrine that she is the mother of God is inculcated. Church Fathers in the past have regarded her as Divine and only a few years ago Pope Pius XII incorporated the bodily ascension of Mary in the doctrine of the Church. All this amounts to raising her to the pedestal of Divinity and this is what Protestants denounce as Mariolatry.

812. The Arabic expression in the text which is translated as "I could never" may also be interpreted as: It did not behove me; or it was impossible for me; or I had no right; to do so, etc.

813. Jesus taught the worship of one God alone (Matt. 4:10 & Luke, 4:8).

814. As long as Jesus was alive, he kept a careful watch over his followers and saw to it that they did not deviate from the right path, but he did not know how they behaved and what false doctrines they held after his death. Now, as his followers have gone astray, it conclusively follows that Jesus is dead, for, as the verse points out, it was after his death that he was to be worshipped as God. Similarly, the fact that this verse speaks of Jesus as expressing ignorance that his followers took him and his mother for two gods after he had left them, proves that he is not to come back to this world. For, if he were to come back and see with his own eyes that his followers had become corrupt and had deified him he could not plead ignorance of his deification by them. If he would do so, his answer pleading his ignorance would amount to a veritable lie. The verse thus positively proves that Jesus is dead and that he will never come back to this world. Moreover, according to a well-known saying of his, the Holy Prophet will use the same words on the Day of Resurrection as are put here in the mouth of Jesus, when he will see some of his followers being led to Hell. This lends further support to the fact that Jesus is dead like the Holy Prophet.

816. The verse forms a befitting sequel to this Sūrah in which the errors of the Christian people are effectively exposed and demolished, containing a veiled declaration that their glory will not last and God will finally transfer His Kingdom to those who are more deserving of it.

CHAPTER 6

AL-AN'ĀM

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

This Sūrah belongs to the Meccan period. According to most accounts, the whole of it was revealed in one portion; and as reported by some traditionists, as many as 70,000 angels stood guard when it was being revealed, which points to the special protection which was afforded to its subject-matter. The Sūrah probably derives its title from vv. 137-139 where the An'ām have been condemned as one of the causes of idolatry.

Subject-Matter

In this Sūrah there is a change in the treatment of the subject-matter from that adopted in the previous Sūrahs. It contains a refutation of non-Israelite religions and starts with the refutation of the Zoroastrian Faith, which believes in the duality of Godhead—in two separate gods of good and evil. The Qur'ān exposes this doctrine by declaring that both the powers of doing good and evil are, in reality, two links of the same chain, one remaining incomplete without the other; so they cannot be said to have been created by two different gods. Light and darkness are indeed Divine creation of the same God, and instead of pointing to the duality of the Godhead, they really constitute a strong argument in favour of Oneness of God and possess a peculiar affinity with the creation of man and his natural powers and faculties. The Sūrah proceeds to discuss the important subject that evil is born of the wrong use of God-given faculties, and that whenever men cease to make right use of them God raises a Prophet to teach them their right use. After this it is stated that the delay in Divine punishment overtaking disbelievers often emboldens them all the more, though the delay is always due to God's mercy. They persecute their Prophet and his followers, entertaining a false hope that in this way they would succeed in weakening the faith of the believers, but the faith of believers remains unflinching and steadfast under severest trials and tribulations, while disbelievers at once disown their own idolatrous beliefs whenever they are overtaken by misfortunes. Further, light is shed on the subject that irreligiousness is born of lack of faith in Life after death or in the failure of disbelievers to establish real connection with God. This dual lack of faith makes them bold in the rejection of truth. Opposition to the Prophets by the disbelievers appears to be not quite unnatural, since only those people seek God who possess some natural kinship with spiritual matters, for the spiritually-deaf cannot hear the Voice of God. They see Sign after Sign and yet continue to repeat parrot-like that no Sign has been shown to them. The opponents of the Holy Prophet have seen many Signs but have not profited by them. They are, therefore, warned that now they will see only the Sign of punishment. But God is not quick to punish. It is when disbelievers wilfully and persistently shut the door of repentance upon themselves and scornfully reject the Divine Message that they are punished. Next, it is stated that only those who have fear of God in their hearts accept the truth, and the Holy Prophet is told to address his appeal only to the God-fearing. For the others, it is necessary that fear of God should first be created in their hearts, then will arguments and reasons benefit them. Further, it is stated that it is essential for the progress of Islām that special attention be paid to the spiritual training of believers, because the Prophet is mortal and must die one day and only the community of believers will remain behind to preach and propagate the Divine Message. Next, the disbelievers are told that they are foolish to find fault with the Holy Prophet merely because the promised punishment has not already overtaken them. They are told that to punish the haughty and boastful rejecters of truth rests entirely in the hand of God Who punishes them as He thinks fit or opportune. It may be that a person, who is today the enemy of truth and seems to deserve Divine punishment, may bring about true reformation in himself tomorrow and deserve Divine mercy. So the infliction of punishment, or deferring thereof, is God's own work. The Sūrah then exposes the falsity of polytheistic doctrines by means of an argument which the Patriarch Abraham had with his people; and then mention is made of the favours and blessings which God bestowed upon him and his descendants because they strove hard to establish truth in the world. The Sūrah proceeds to state that the mission of God's Messengers never fails. Like rain-water it gives fertility and freshness to a soil spiritually bleak and barren, and as it is not possible to attain true realization of God unless He reveals Himself to men, it is necessary that Divine Messengers should appear time after time as it is through them that God reveals Himself to the world. Then it is stated that for the attainment of true faith a corresponding wholesome change of heart is a sine qua non. Without such a change, even Signs and miracles prove of no avail. Next, a contrast is instituted between Islamic Teaching, which answers and satisfies the demands of reason and justice and the doctrines and practices of idolaters, which are based neither on reason nor on argument. Towards the end of the Sūrah we are told that the Qur'ān has been revealed to raise and honour even those nations to whom no revelation has so far been sent in order that they may not suffer from a feeling of inferiority before the People of the Book. The Message of the Qur'ān, unlike that of former revealed Scriptures, is for the whole of mankind, and it seeks to establish real and permanent peace between different sections of humanity as well as between man and his Creator.

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

2. All praise belongs to Allāh Who created the heavens and the earth and brought into being darkness and[817] light; yet [b]those who disbelieve set up equals to their Lord.

3. He it is [c]Who created you from clay, and then He decreed a term.[818] And there is [d]another term fixed with Him.[819] Yet you doubt.

4. And [e]He is Allāh, the God, both in the heavens and in the earth.[820] He knows what you

[a]See 1:1. [b]6:151; 27:61. [c]15:27; 23:13; 32:8; 37:12; 38:72. [d]71:5. [e]43:85.

817. The word Ja‘ala is sometimes used synonymously with Khalaqa (He created); but whereas the latter word gives the sense of creating a thing after measuring and designing it, the former word signifies the making of a thing in a particular state or condition, or constituting or appointing it for a definite purpose (Lane). Idolatry seems to be based on two theories. The Hindus are the chief protagonists of the theory that God has delegated His powers to certain beings. The Zoroastrians believe in two gods—Ormuzd—the god of light, and Ahriman—the god of darkness. The present verse refutes both these theories and says that God is the Creator of heavens and earth and that He is also the Creator of light and darkness; and since all power and praise belong to Him, what need is there for Him to delegate His powers and entrust part of His work to others?

818. Both the creation of man and his death (decreeing of a term) have been mentioned as acts of Divine mercy.

819. The first "term" refers to the span of individual life and the second "term" has reference to the life of the universe.

820. The verse does not mean that God’s Person pervades the heavens and the earth. What is meant is that His knowledge comprehends the entire universe.

مَا تَكْسِبُوْنَ ۝٤ disclose and your secrets. And He knows what you earn.

وَمَا تَاْتِيْهِمْ مِّنْ اٰيَةٍ مِّنْ اٰيٰتِ رَبِّهِمْ اِلَّا كَانُوْا عَنْهَا مُعْرِضِيْنَ ۝٥

5. And [a]there comes not to them any Sign[821] of the Signs of their Lord, but they turn away from it.

فَقَدْ كَذَّبُوْا بِالْحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمْ ؕ فَسَوْفَ يَاْتِيْهِمْ اَنْۢبٰٓؤُا مَا كَانُوْا بِهٖ يَسْتَهْزِءُوْنَ ۝٦

6. So [b]they rejected the truth when it came to them; but soon shall come to them the tidings[822] of that at which they mocked.

اَلَمْ يَرَوْا كَمْ اَهْلَكْنَا مِنْ قَبْلِهِمْ مِّنْ قَرْنٍ مَّكَّنّٰهُمْ فِى الْاَرْضِ مَا لَمْ نُمَكِّنْ لَّكُمْ وَاَرْسَلْنَا السَّمَآءَ عَلَيْهِمْ مِّدْرَارًا ۪ وَّجَعَلْنَا الْاَنْهٰرَ تَجْرِىْ مِنْ تَحْتِهِمْ فَاَهْلَكْنٰهُمْ بِذُنُوْبِهِمْ وَاَنْشَاْنَا مِنْۢ بَعْدِهِمْ قَرْنًا اٰخَرِيْنَ ۝٧

7. See they not how many a generation[823] We have destroyed before them? [c]We had established them in the earth as We have not established you[824] and [d]We sent the clouds over them, pouring down abundant rain; and We caused streams to flow beneath them; then did We destroy them because of their sins and raised up after them another generation.

821. An important evidence of the knowledge and power of God are the prophecies that He reveals to His Messengers and the support and assistance that He vouchsafes to them against overwhelming odds. These are called Signs.

822. Ambā’ is the plural of Naba’ which is generally used in the Qur’ān about important news relating to some great event (Kulliyyāt).

823. Qarn means, a generation of men succeeding or preceding another generation, as if both were conjoined; people of one time (Lane).

824. The words do not mean that the world is retrogressing. It is no doubt progressing as a whole, but some of the older nations which rose to heights of civilization in the past were so advanced in certain branches of art and science that in those specific branches they were not equalled by the generations that

وَقَالُوْا لَوْلَآ اُنْزِلَ عَلَيْهِ مَلَكٌ ؕ وَلَوْ اَنْزَلْنَا مَلَكًا لَّقُضِيَ الْاَمْرُ ثُمَّ لَا يُنْظَرُوْنَ ۝٩

9. And they say, [a]'Why has not an angel been sent down to him?' And if We had sent down an angel,[826] the matter would have been decided, and then they would have been granted no respite.

وَلَوْ جَعَلْنٰهُ مَلَكًا لَّجَعَلْنٰهُ رَجُلًا وَّلَلَبَسْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ مَّا يَلْبِسُوْنَ ۝١٠ followed. For instance, the modern age, in spite of the marvels it has wrought in the domain of science, still gazes with wonder at some of the works of ancient Egyptian civilization.

825. They had made sure that it was a heavenly and not an earthly thing.

826. "The coming of angels" signifies the imminent approach of heavenly punishment.

827. The verse exposes the folly of the disbelievers' demand that an angel should have come to guide them.

R. 2.

قُلْ سِيْرُوْا فِي الْاَرْضِ ثُمَّ انْظُرُوْا كَيْفَ كَانَ عَاقِبَةُ الْمُكَذِّبِيْنَ ﴿١١﴾

15. Say, 'Shall I take any protector other than Allāh, [d]the Maker[829] of the heavens and the earth, Who [e]feeds and is not fed?' Say, [f]'I have been commanded to be the first of those who submit.' And be thou not of those who associate partners with Allāh.

828. As all things in the heavens and the earth belong to Allāh, the enemies of Faith also belong to Him. No one would like to destroy his own handiwork, much less would God do so. He is Merciful and grants respite to disbelievers in order that they may repent and be shown mercy.

829. The word Fāṭir when used about God means, the Originator or the Creator, or the Maker.

قُلْ اِنِّیْۤ اَخَافُ اِنْ عَصَیْتُ رَبِّیْ عَذَابَ یَوْمٍ عَظِیْمٍ ﴿۱۶﴾

[a]10:16; 39:14. [b]10:108. [c]6:62. [d]4:167; 13:44; 29:53.

830. The verse constitutes an emphatic exhortation to men to be on their guard against being disobedient to God, not that the Holy Prophet could ever disobey Him.

831. Dhālika may either refer to "the averting of punishment" or to "mercy."

832. The Divine attribute Al-Qāhir refutes the theory that matter and soul are coexistent with God and have not been created by Him. If they were not created by Him then He had no right or power to subdue or overrule them.

833. God bears witness in three different ways,—by the revelation of the Qur'ān. This is the first witness. The second and the third witnesses are mentioned in the following verses.

أُخْرٰى ؕ قُلْ لَّاۤ اَشْهَدُ ۚ قُلْ اِنَّمَا هُوَ اِلٰهٌ وَّاحِدٌ وَّاِنَّنِيْ بَرِيْٓءٌ مِّمَّا تُشْرِكُوْنَ ﴿۲۰﴾

اَلَّذِيْنَ اٰتَيْنٰهُمُ الْكِتٰبَ يَعْرِفُوْنَهٗ كَمَا يَعْرِفُوْنَ اَبْنَآءَهُمْ ؕ اَلَّذِيْنَ خَسِرُوْٓا اَنْفُسَهُمْ فَهُمْ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ ﴿۲۱﴾

21. [a]Those to whom We gave the Book recognize him as they recognize[834] their sons. But those who ruin their souls—they will not believe.

834. A Prophet (or for that matter anything pertaining to faith) is not recognized in the beginning. He is recognized only as a father recognizes his son, more as a matter of probability than of dead certainty. Faith must always begin in the region of the unseen.

835. The third kind of testimony is based on human reason. Every sane man will admit that if a person claims to speak in the name of God and forges lies against Him, he would but end his life in utter failure and destruction. On the other hand, those who oppose a Divine Messenger are never allowed to prosper and their efforts to arrest or retard the progress of the new Faith end in complete frustration.

24. Then they will have no excuse save that they shall say, ‘By Allāh, our Lord, we were not idolaters.’[837]

وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ يَّسْتَمِعُ إِلَيْكَ ۚ وَجَعَلْنَا عَلٰى قُلُوبِهِمْ أَكِنَّةً أَنْ يَّفْقَهُوهُ وَفِيٓ اٰذَانِهِمْ وَقْرًا ۖ وَإِنْ يَّرَوْا كُلَّ اٰيَةٍ لَّا يُؤْمِنُوا بِهَا ۖ حَتّٰٓى إِذَا جَآءُوكَ يُجَادِلُونَكَ يَقُولُ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓا إِنْ هٰذَآ إِلَّآ أَسَاطِيرُ الْأَوَّلِينَ ﴿٢٦﴾

26. And among them are some [b]who give ear to thee; but [c]We have put veils on their hearts, that they should not understand, and deafness in their ears. And even if they see every Sign, they would not believe therein, so much so that when they come to thee, disputing with thee, those who disbelieve say, ‘This is nothing but fables of the ancients.’

وَهُمْ يَنْهَوْنَ عَنْهُ وَيَنْـَٔوْنَ عَنْهُ ۚ وَإِنْ يُّهْلِكُونَ إِلَّآ أَنْفُسَهُمْ وَمَا يَشْعُرُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27. And they forbid others to believe in it and themselves too they keep away from it.[838] And they ruin none but their ownselves; only they perceive not.

836. You asserted, claimed, or spoke of.

837. This denial on the part of idolaters will really be a confession of their helplessness and a form of petition for Divine mercy.

838. The verse constitutes an eloquent commentary on the captivating power of the Qur’ān.

وَلَوْ تَرٰٓى اِذْ وُقِفُوْا عَلَى النَّارِ فَقَالُوْا يٰلَيْتَنَا نُرَدُّ وَلَا نُكَذِّبَ بِاٰيٰتِ رَبِّنَا وَنَكُوْنَ مِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ ﴿٢٨﴾

28. And if thou couldst only see [a]when they are made to stand before the Fire! [b]They will say, 'Oh, would that we might be sent back! And then we would not treat the Signs of our Lord as lies, and we would be of the believers.'

بَلْ بَدَا لَهُمْ مَّا كَانُوْا يُخْفُوْنَ مِنْ قَبْلُ ؕ وَلَوْ رُدُّوْا لَعَادُوْا لِمَا نُهُوْا عَنْهُ وَاِنَّهُمْ لَكٰذِبُوْنَ ﴿٢٩﴾

29. Nay, that which they used to hide before has now become clear to them.[839] And if they were sent back, they would surely return to that which they are forbidden. And they are certainly liars.

وَقَالُوْٓا اِنْ هِيَ اِلَّا حَيَاتُنَا الدُّنْيَا وَمَا نَحْنُ بِمَبْعُوْثِيْنَ ﴿٣٠﴾

30. And they say, [c]'There is nothing except this our present life, and we shall not be raised again.'

31. And if thou couldst only see when they are made to stand before their Lord, [d]He will say, 'Is not this second life the truth?' They will say, 'Yea, by our Lord.' He will say, 'Then taste the punishment because you disbelieved.'

839. The words, has now become clear to them, signify that even the enemies of God's Prophets have in their minds a certain consciousness of the truth of Divine Messengers; but owing to their bigotry and waywardness they try to suppress such thoughts. On the Day of Judgment, however, these latent thoughts of theirs, which they tried to hide in this life, would become apparent, and the truthfulness of the Prophets of which they had dim consciousness would become manifest.

840. The verse means that their burdens would be exceedingly heavy.

841. The Holy Prophet was full of the milk of human kindness. He was not upset by what the disbelievers said concerning him. He was grieved not because the disbelievers accused him of falsehood but because by rejecting Allāh’s Signs they had shut on themselves the door of Divine mercy.

842. God lovingly addresses the Holy Prophet with these words of comfort and solace. He is told that Prophets before him were also rejected, scoffed at and ridiculed.

جَآءَكَ مِنْ نَّبَاِی الْمُرْسَلِيْنَ ﴿٣٥﴾

[f]Our help came to them. [a]There is none to change the words of Allāh.[843] And there have already come to thee some of the tidings of past Messengers.

And [b]had Allāh enforced His will, He could surely have brought them all together to the guidance. So be thou not of those who lack knowledge.

37. Only those can accept the truth who listen. And as for the dead,[844A] Allāh will raise them to life,[845] then to Him shall they all be brought back.

[a]6:116. [b]5:49; 6:150; 11:119; 13:32; 16:10.

843. The Divine law that Divine help comes to the Prophets of God and their enemies come to grief is unalterable.

844. The words, to seek a passage into the earth, signify 'using worldly means,' i.e. preaching and propagating the truth; and the words, a ladder unto heaven, imply 'using spiritual means,' i.e. offering prayers to God for the guidance of disbelievers, etc. Prayer is indeed the ladder by which a man can spiritually mount to heaven. The Holy Prophet is told to employ both these means. The word Jāhil as in 2:274 means "one not knowing" or "unacquainted." The Holy Prophet is exhorted not to remain unacquainted with the law of God in this respect. The verse also sheds light on the Holy Prophet's great solicitude and concern for the spiritual well-being of his people. He was prepared to go to any length to bring them a Sign, even if he had "to seek a passage in the earth or a ladder unto heaven."

844A. This shows that the word Mautā has also been used in the Qur'ān about those deprived of truth.

845. The verse mentions two classes of men: (a) Those who are good at heart and listen to, and readily accept, the truth; and (b) those who are potentially dead but are fit for spiritual regeneration. God will quicken them with a Sign and then they will also listen and embrace Islām.

وَقَالُوْا لَوْلَا نُزِّلَ عَلَيْهِ اٰيَةٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّهٖ ؕ قُلْ

846. The verse points out that even birds and insects, like ants, can understand from atmospheric change that a storm is imminent, and animals like dogs understand the orders of their masters but the foolish disbelievers do not see the writing on the wall and do not realize that by rejecting the Holy Prophet they are incurring the displeasure of God. They are warned that all their actions have been recorded and they will have to answer for them. The verse further seems to point to two classes of men: (a) Those who like the beasts are wholly bent upon the earth and their entire life is confined to satisfying their physical desires. (b) Those who like birds soar high into spiritual regions—highly spiritual persons having been likened to birds in the Qur'ān (3:50).

847. "Hour" refers to the hour of the decisive victory of Islām, or, to the Fall of Mecca.

848. The words, you will forget what you associate with Him, were literally fulfilled on the day of the Fall of Mecca. On that day the Meccans lost all faith in their gods, as Abū Sufyān and his wife, Hindah and others had frankly admitted in the presence of the Holy Prophet. Ultimately, idolatry completely disappeared from Arabia.

849. The preceding verses referred to Divine punishment in general. In this verse its various forms have been mentioned.

850. The words lau lā are not here used to express mere interrogation but also a feeling of pity. Thus the verse signifies: "They ought to have humbled themselves before God; but it is a pity that they did not."

851. Dābir means, last remains of a people; the roots, stock, race, or the like. The words Quṭi‘a Dābirul-Qaum mean: (1) The people were cut off to the last man. (2) The leaders of the people were cut off just as a tree is cut down to its roots. (3) The leaders’ followers were cut off, i.e. the leaders were deprived of their political power, for it is on the strength of their followers that the political power of their leaders depends.

854. This and the next verse lay down the guiding principle that it has not been left in the hands of the Holy Prophet to bring down punishment on disbelievers as demanded by them. If this had been the case, they would have since long met their deserved end, and then perhaps many erstwhile enemies of Islam like 'Umar and Khālid who later on were destined to play a leading role in extending and consolidating the power of Islām, would have died in disbelief. But God being All-Powerful is slow to punish and, being fully conversant with the inner working of the human heart, knows when and whom to punish. He alone knows how far hardships or ease can influence the actions of a man and whether or not good works done by a man are rendered null and void through the operation of other causes. He alone has knowledge of the grains of virtue that lie embedded in the heart of man and knows whether or not these grains will sprout forth and grow and thrive and bring forth fruit. He alone can tell whether a person who, to all appearances, is "dry" and "devoid of all spiritual life," will turn "green" when supplied with heavenly water or whether he is "dead" and beyond revival. In short, God alone has full knowledge of all things and of all conditions and all possibilities and potentialities and therefore He alone can say who is to be punished and who not.

855. God alone knows the condition of man by night and his actions by day, and all times are subject to His control, and therefore it is He alone Who knows the true character of the pious and the wicked, and consequently He alone is in a position to punish.

856. The "term" spoken of here is determined by the faculties and powers with which man is endowed from the time of his birth, and is liable to be extended or curtailed according as right or wrong use is made of it. There is no reference here to the eternal knowledge of God.

857. This verse provides another reason why God alone is entitled to punish. He is Qāhir, i.e. Powerful and Mighty over all, therefore He can punish any of His creatures in His infallible knowledge whenever He thinks proper. The powerful are never in a hurry to punish.

859. "Punishments from above" signifies famines, earthquakes, floods, hurricanes, the oppression of the weak by the powerful, mental agony, etc., and "punishments from beneath" signifies diseases, pestilences, revolt by subject peoples, etc. Then there is the punishment of discord, disunity and dissension which sometimes end in civil war. This is hinted in the words make you taste the violence of one another.

860. The pronoun "it" refers to (1) the matter under discussion; (2) the Qur'ān; (3) Divine punishment. Taking the last meaning, the words "it is the truth" would mean that the promised punishment is sure to come.

863. A Divine Prophet is indeed a trumpet through whom the Voice of God is heard, and the sounding of it is a symbol for the wide dissemination of his teachings and the great revolution to be brought about by him in the lives of his people. The verse means that when the teachings of the Holy Prophet are widely published and accepted in the world and when Islam triumphs and predominates, then the Kingdom of God will become demonstrably established in the earth and on that day will idols be broken to pieces.

864. In the Old Testament the name of Abraham’s father is given as Terah (Gen.11:26) and in the New Testament (Luke, 3:34) it is Tharah. The Talmud agrees with Luke. Eusebius, the father of ecclesiastical history, gives Āthar as the name of Abraham’s father (Sale). This shows that even among the Jews there existed no unanimity of opinion about the name of Abraham’s father. Eusebius must have strong reasons for differing from Genesis and Luke. The correct form appears to be Āthar, which later became changed into Tharah or Terah. Āthar closely resembles the name given in the Qur’ān (Āzar), only there is a slight difference of pronunciation, the two forms being almost identical. Christian writers, therefore, have no reason to quarrel with the Qur’ān for calling Abraham’s father by the name Āzar. Moreover, Abraham’s father is also called Zarah in the Talmud (Sale), and Zarah is approximately the same as Āzar. This shows that the Quranic version is much more reliable. Besides, Āzar has been called Abraham’s Ab) (26:87), a word applied both to father, uncle and grandfather, etc. In 2:133 Ishmael who was Jacob’s uncle has been called his Ab. It, however, appears from the Qur’ān that Āzar, though called the Ab of Abraham, was not really his father. Abraham had made a promise to Āzar, his Ab, to pray to God to forgive him but when he came to know that he was an enemy of God, he abstained from praying for him; he was even actually forbidden to do so (9:114). But in 14:42 Abraham prays for his Wālid which word is applied only to father. This shows that Āzar who has been called the Ab of Abraham was a person different from his Wālid. Most probably he was his uncle. Some passages of the Bible also support this inference. Abraham married Sarah the daughter of Terah (Gen. 20:12) which shows that Terah was not his father, because he could not marry his own sister. It appears that his father being dead, Abraham was brought up by his uncle, Āzar or Āthar, who gave him his daughter, Sarah, in marriage. As Āzar brought up Abraham and was like a father to him, the latter seemed to have been called his son, and this led to the error of Āzar or Āthar being taken as the real father of Abraham. It also appears from the Talmud that Āzar prosecuted Abraham and took him to the King for the offence of breaking the idols. If Āzar had been the father of Abraham, he would not have taken such a drastic step against his own son.

866. Verses 77 to 79 contain an argument which Abraham employed to bring home to his idolatrous people the absurdity of their belief that the sun, the moon and the stars were so many gods which they worshipped (Jew. Enc.). It is wrong to infer from these verses that Abraham was himself groping in the dark and did not know Who his God was, and that he took the evening star, the moon, and the sun for God one after the other and, when each of them set in its turn, he gave up his belief in their divinity and turned to the One God, the Creator of heavens and earth. In fact, the passage contains several arguments to show that Abraham, far from taking these heavenly bodies for gods, sought to demonstrate to his people the vanity of their beliefs step by step. Verses 75, 76 show that Abraham was a firm believer in One God. He could not, therefore, be considered as groping in the dark and wandering from one deity to another. The words, "can this be my Lord" constituted an argument against star-worship. He said these words to expose his people’s belief that the star was their Lord. Moreover, he already knew that the star must set. So his argument contained in the words, "I like not those that set" must have been already present in his mind. In reality, he wanted to use his argument in a most effective manner. So he first assumed the star to be his Lord and, when it disappeared, he hastened to declare, I like not those that set. Similar was the case with the setting of the moon and the sun. Of the sun he used the word "greater" or "greatest" ironically in order to taunt his people for their folly. This clearly shows that by the line of arguments he adopted Abraham intended gradually to draw his people to God. A simple glance over vv. 80-82 makes it crystal clear that Abraham not only possessed firm faith in God but also had a deep knowledge of Divine attributes.

867. This and the preceding two verses definitely show that the incident related in vv. 77-79 was deliberately used by Abraham by way of argument; otherwise he himself was a staunch monotheist and had drunk deep at the fount of Divine love and knowledge.

868. This verse definitely settles the question whether Abraham gradually came to have faith in God by taking one heavenly body after another for his Lord or whether it was a skilfully graduated argument by means of which he sought to demonstrate the error of his people in worshipping these heavenly bodies as gods. The verse shows that Abraham had, from the beginning, been clear and firm in his faith in the Unity of God and that what he said concerning the sun and the moon, etc. was part of the argument which God had taught him.

869. Ayyūb or Job is the hero of the Book of Job. He is mentioned in the Bible as living in the land of Uz. Some authorities say that this is Idumea or Arabia Deserta; others fix Mesopotamia as his native place. It appears that Uz was somewhere in the north of Arabia. It is said that Job lived there before the departure of the Israelites from Egypt. He thus lived before Moses or, as some say, he was a compatriot of Moses, having received his prophetic mission about 20 years before him. He was not an Israelite, having descended from Esau, the elder brother of Israel. He had a very chequered career, being "tried" by God in diverse ways; but he proved most faithful and righteous and was patient and steadfast in extreme adversity. He still lives in the memory of mankind as a paragon of patience (Jewish Enc. & Enc. of Islām).

870. The prophets descending from Noah have been divided in the present and the preceding two verses into three different groups and to each group has been added a distinctive adjective. The first group comprises David, Solomon, Job, Joseph, Moses and Aaron—Prophets who were given power and prosperity, and who consequently were able to do good to their fellow human beings. Hence members of this group have been designated as "doers of good," for, through their temporal power and prosperity they were able to do material good to their people. David and Solomon were kings; Joseph and Job were blessed with prosperity after they had been tried with afflictions which they both bore with extraordinary patience. Moses and Aaron enjoyed supreme authority over their people. The second group includes Zachariah, John, Jesus and Elias. None of these Prophets possessed temporal power or worldly goods; each lived a humble and lowly life, so much so that of Elias it is said that he was rarely seen and generally lived in the woods. The Prophets of this group have been described as "righteous." The third group consists of Ishmael, Elisha, Jonah and Lot. They had no worldly power, but God granted them grace and excellence. They were alleged to have coveted power and riches. Of Ishmael, we read in the Bible: "He will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man’s hand against him" (Gen. 16:12). Of Elisha it is said that he caused a king who did not obey him to be slain so that he might thus gain political power. Jonah is supposed to have become displeased with God, because, as he thought, he was disgraced by the non-fulfilment of his prophecy, which, it is alleged, showed that he sought power for himself. Of Lot it is alleged that he coveted fertile pasture-lands and was always quarrelling with his kinsman, Abraham. Thus all these Prophets have been accused of coveting wealth and power. But Qur’ān declares all these charges to be false. They were a group of heavenly people whom God had exalted.

871 The verse does not mean that every Prophet was given a separate Book. "Giving of the Book" is an expression used in the Qur’ān generally in the sense of giving it through a Law-bearing Prophet. Elsewhere in the Qur’ān (45:17) it is stated that three things, viz. Book, dominion and Prophethood were given to all the Children of Israel. In 5:45 we read that a galaxy of

92. And [a]they do not make a just estimate of the attributes of Allāh, when [b]they say, 'Allāh has not revealed anything to any man.'[873] Say,

[a]22:75; 39:68. [b]36:16; 67:10.

Prophets appeared after Moses who were given no new Law but followed the Law as given in the Torah and judged by it. In fact, Prophets are of two categories—Law-bearing Prophets to whom a Book (Law or the Sharī'ah) is given and Prophets, who are given no Book or Sharī'ah, and who follow the Sharī'ah of the Law-bearing Prophet. In their case the expression "We gave them the Book" means that they were given the knowledge of the Book or they inherited the Book or the Sharī'ah from their Law-bearing predecessor.

872 The words may be taken to have been addressed either to the Holy Prophet or to every Muslim, because the fundamental teaching of all Prophets is the same. Or they may signify that the spiritual self or nature of the Holy Prophet was such that it was, as if, commanded to combine in itself all the excellent qualities that were to be found individually in all other Divine Prophets. The command expressed by the words "follow them" is in spiritual terminology called Amre Kaunī or Khalqī signifying a wish or quality inherent in a thing or person. For instances of such a command see 3:60 and 21:70.

873. The words mean, "If this Book (the Qur'ān) has not been revealed by God, then who embodied in it such wise and comprehensive teachings as were known neither to you nor to your forefathers—teachings which it was beyond your power to produce. Only God could give such teachings."

وَّهُدًى لِّلنَّاسِ تَجْعَلُوْنَهٗ قَرَاطِيْسَ تُبْدُوْنَهَا وَتُخْفُوْنَ كَثِيْرًا ۚ وَعُلِّمْتُمْ مَّا لَمْ تَعْلَمُوْٓا اَنْتُمْ وَلَآ اٰبَآؤُكُمْ ۭ قُلِ اللّٰهُ ۙ ثُمَّ ذَرْهُمْ فِيْ خَوْضِهِمْ يَلْعَبُوْنَ ﴿۹۲﴾

‘Who revealed the Book which Moses brought, a light and guidance for the people—though you treat it as scraps of paper, some of which you show while you hide much thereof[874] and you have been taught that which neither you nor your fathers knew?’—Say, ‘Allāh’. Then leave them to amuse themselves with their idle talk.

وَهٰذَا كِتٰبٌ اَنْزَلْنٰهُ مُبٰرَكٌ مُّصَدِّقُ الَّذِيْ بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَلِتُنْذِرَ اُمَّ الْقُرٰى وَمَنْ حَوْلَهَا ۭ وَالَّذِيْنَ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِالْاٰخِرَةِ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِهٖ وَهُمْ عَلٰي صَلَاتِهِمْ يُحَافِظُوْنَ ﴿۹۳﴾

93. And [a]this is a Book which We have revealed, full of blessings, to fulfil that which preceded it, and to enable thee [b]to warn the Mother of towns[875] and those around her. And those, who believe in the Hereafter believe therein[876] and [c]they strictly observe their Prayers.

وَمَنْ اَظْلَمُ مِمَّنِ افْتَرٰى عَلَي اللّٰهِ كَذِبًا اَوْ قَالَ اُوْحِيَ اِلَيَّ وَلَمْ يُوْحَ اِلَيْهِ شَيْءٌ

94. And [d]who is more unjust than he who forges a lie against Allāh, or says, ‘It has been revealed to me,’ while

[a]6:156; 21:51; 38:30. [b]42:8. [c]23:10; 70:24. [d]6:22; 7:38; 10:18; 11:19; 61:8.

874. The Jews have been condemned here for disclosing one part of the Torah and hiding the other part which contains prophecies and Signs about the advent of the Holy Prophet.

875. The place where a Prophet of God appears is called "The Mother of towns," for it is there that men drink spiritual milk, even as a child sucks milk from the breast of its mother. The words, those around her, may signify the whole world as the Message of the Holy Prophet was meant for the whole of mankind.

876. These words show that a believer in the life to come must believe in the Qur’ān also. Thus belief in the Qur’ān and belief in the Hereafter are inseparably linked together; the one is meaningless without the other.

nothing has been revealed to him; and who says, 'I will send down the like of that which Allāh has sent down?' And if thou couldst only see, when the wrongdoers are in the agonies of death,[877] and the angels stretch forth their hands, saying, 'Yield up your souls. [a]This day shall you be awarded the punishment of disgrace because of that which you spoke against Allāh falsely and because you turned away from His Signs with disdain.'

وَلَقَدْ جِئْتُمُوْنَا فُرَادٰى كَمَا خَلَقْنٰكُمْ أَوَّلَ مَرَّةٍ وَّتَرَكْتُمْ مَّا خَوَّلْنٰكُمْ وَرَآءَ ظُهُوْرِكُمْ ۚ وَمَا نَرٰى مَعَكُمْ شُفَعَآءَكُمُ الَّذِيْنَ زَعَمْتُمْ أَنَّهُمْ فِيْكُمْ شُرَكٰٓؤُا ؕ لَقَدْ تَّقَطَّعَ بَيْنَكُمْ وَضَلَّ عَنْكُمْ مَّا كُنْتُمْ تَزْعُمُوْنَ ﴿٩٥﴾ ع ١٧

95. And now [b]you come to Us one by one even as We created you at first, and you have left behind your[878] backs that which We bestowed upon you, and We do not see with you your intercessors of whom you asserted that they were partners with Allāh in your affairs. Now you have been cut off from one another and that which you asserted has failed you.

877. This torment is not to be identified with the ordinary agonies of death, which are shared, under the general law of nature, by righteous and unrighteous alike, but to the specific punishment that clings to the rejectors of Prophets from the very moment of their death.

878. The words mean, "We gave you certain things so that you might thereby improve your spiritual condition, but you have left them behind your backs, i.e. you made no use of them, and now the time for their use has passed away."

R. 12.

إِنَّ اللّٰهَ فَالِقُ الْحَبِّ وَالنَّوٰى ؕ يُخْرِجُ الْحَيَّ مِنَ الْمَيِّتِ وَمُخْرِجُ الْمَيِّتِ مِنَ الْحَيِّ ؕ ذٰلِكُمُ اللّٰهُ فَأَنّٰى تُؤْفَكُوْنَ ﴿٩٦﴾

[a]3:28; 10:32; 30:20. [b]113:2. [c]25:48; 78:11. [d]36:39, 40; 55:6. [e]16:17.

879. Attention is drawn to the seed from which a plant sprouts. How insignificant it is but how it grows and develops into a big tree. Similarly, like a seed, man is capable of growing into the recipient of Divine revelation and of being the reflector of God's great attributes.

880. Just as by working during the day, a man gets tired and he goes to sleep at night and is refreshed similarly, the people among whom the Holy Prophet made his appearance had a long night of rest, and their faculties having been reinvigorated they were full of spiritual energy and were eminently fitted to ascend the heights of spiritual development under his lead.

881. Just as in the physical world the sun and the moon are indispensable for measuring time and as sources of light, so are the Prophets of God indispensable in the spiritual world.

882. Like the stars which guide the wayfarers in the night, the Divine and spiritual savants give guidance to the erring people groping in spiritual darkness.

100. And [c]He it is He Who sends down water from the cloud; and We bring forth therewith every kind of growth; then We bring forth with that green foliage wherefrom We produce clustered grain. And from the date-palm, out of its sheaths, come forth bunches hanging low. And We produce therewith [d]gardens of grapes, and the olive and the pomegranate—like and unlike. Look at the fruit thereof when it bears fruit, and the ripening thereof. Surely, in this are Signs for a people who believe.[884]

[a]4:3; 7:190; 39:7. [b]11:7. [c]14:33; 16:11; 22:64; 35:28. [d]6:142; 13:5.

883. Mustaqarr signifies the life of this world and Mustauda' the life after death, or the former word signifies the span between death and Resurrection and the latter the life after Resurrection. The verse signifies that when God has multiplied humanity out of "a single soul," it could not have been without a purpose. The great object for which He has created and multiplied human beings is that He has appointed for them not only a period of residence on this earth but also an everlasting life beyond the grave where the righteous will meet their Lord—a lofty goal indeed to which they can only rise under the guidance of Divine Messengers.

884. Revelation is likened here to rainwater, and the verse answers the question, why, if revelation is indeed a blessing, is there discord and strife whenever a Prophet is raised? It says that just as after rainfall all kinds of vegetation grow up, both bad and good, according to the seeds lying concealed in the earth, similarly, at the advent of a Divine Messenger, men, who so far had remained mixed up, become divided into good and bad. The words "like and unlike" imply that whereas some fruits resemble, and some differ from, each other.

وَجَعَلُوْا لِلّٰهِ شُرَكَآءَ الْجِنَّ وَخَلَقَهُمْ وَخَرَقُوْا لَهٗ بَنِيْنَ وَبَنٰتٍۢ بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ ؕ سُبْحٰنَهٗ وَتَعٰلٰى عَمَّا يَصِفُوْنَ ﴿۱۰۱﴾ ع ۱۳

This may apply either to fruits of different kinds, which resemble one another in certain respects and differ in others, or to fruits of the same kind which, although resembling one another in the main points, differ from one another in minor details, some tasting sweeter than others and some varying in colour or size. The same is the case with those persons who accept a Prophet and follow Divine guidance. Whereas they bear great resemblance to each other in one respect, they differ in another. Some are morally and spiritually more advanced than others. Again, some are more advanced in one phase of spiritual growth, others are more advanced in another. They attain to different stages of spiritual perfection and develop different characteristics according to their respective natural capacities and dispositions. The words "the ripening thereof" refer to the analogy of the ripening of fruit. Just as it is unfair to judge a fruit by an unripe specimen, similarly it is unfair to find fault with the fruits of revelation because some believers are as yet in the process of spiritual development and have not attained perfection.

885. Jinn are such beings as remain hidden or aloof from the common people. The verse signifies that man stumbles when he rejects Divine revelation and follows his own judgment and reason and associates the jinn and the angels as co-partners with God and attributes sons and daughters to Him.

886. The word Waladun, Wuldun or Waldun means, a child, a son, a daughter, or any young one; children; sons, daughters; or young ones; also offspring (Lane). One can have a son only when one has a wife. God has no spouse, so He cannot have a son. Moreover, as God is the Creator of everything and possesses perfect knowledge, He does not need a son to help Him or succeed Him.

887. Abṣār being the plural of Baṣar which means, sight or understanding, and Laṭīf meaning, incomprehensible; subtle (Lane & Tāj), the verse means that human reason alone, unaided by Divine revelation, is incapable of comprehending God. He cannot be seen with physical eyes but reveals Himself to man through His Prophets or through the working of His attributes. He is also perceived by spiritual eyes.

888. Baṣā'ir (plural of Baṣīrah) means, proofs, arguments, signs, evidences (Lane).

889. Makes use of reason.

890. Shuts his eyes to truth and virtually becomes blind.

891. The duty of a Divine Prophet is confined to conveying what is revealed to him by God. It is not his business to compel people to accept it. Incidentally; the verse constitutes a refutation of the charge that Islām encourages or countenances the use of force for the propagation of its teaching.

وَكَذٰلِكَ نُصَرِّفُ الْاٰيٰتِ وَلِيَقُوْلُوْا

892. In His infinite wisdom God has made man a free agent. If at all He should have compelled the people He would certainly have compelled them to follow the truth; but in the interest of man himself it has not pleased God to use compulsion.

893. The words "guardian," "keeper" or "disposer of affairs" used for the Holy Prophet in the Qur’ān are intended to signify that he is not responsible for the actions of other people.

894. The verse not only inculcates respect for the susceptibilities of even the idol-worshippers but also seeks to create amity among different nations and communities.

895. Zayyannā does not mean that God Himself causes the evil actions of

R. 14.

112. And even if We send down unto them angels, and [b]the dead[898] speak to them, man to look fair. It only signifies that He has so created human nature (and in this law of God lies the secret of man’s all-round progress) that when he persists in doing a certain action he acquires a liking for it, and his action begins to appear good in his sight. In accordance with this general Divine law, the idolaters come to like their worship of idols, which appears to them to be good and meritorious.

[a]2:16. [b]13:32.

896. Besides the meaning given in the text the latter part of the verse may be rendered as: "Surely, Signs are with Allāh, and also that is with Allāh which will make you know that when the Signs come, they will not believe."

897. The past evil deeds of disbelievers, which are preserved with God, stand in the way of their accepting the truth even after Signs come to them, unless they give up their idolatrous practices.

898. One of the functions of the angels is to suggest good ideas to men and to invite them to truth (41:32, 33). Sometimes they perform this function and We gather to them all things face to face,[899] they would not believe, unless God enforced His Will. But most of them are ignorant.

وَكَلَّمَهُمُ الْمَوْتٰى وَحَشَرْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ كُلَّ شَيْءٍ قُبُلًا مَّا كَانُوْا لِيُؤْمِنُوْٓا اِلَّآ اَنْ يَّشَآءَ اللّٰهُ وَلٰكِنَّ اَكْثَرَهُمْ يَجْهَلُوْنَ ﴿١١١﴾

وَكَذٰلِكَ جَعَلْنَا لِكُلِّ نَبِيٍّ عَدُوًّا شَيٰطِيْنَ الْاِنْسِ وَالْجِنِّ يُوْحِيْ بَعْضُهُمْ اِلٰى بَعْضٍ زُخْرُفَ الْقَوْلِ غُرُوْرًا ؕ وَلَوْ شَآءَ رَبُّكَ مَا فَعَلُوْهُ فَذَرْهُمْ وَمَا يَفْتَرُوْنَ ﴿١١٢﴾

113. And [a]in like manner have We made for every Prophet an enemy, the evil ones from among men and jinn.[900] They suggest one to another gilded speech in order to deceive. And if thy Lord had enforced His Will, they would not have done it; so leave them alone with that which they fabricate.

through dreams and visions. The righteous, who are dead, appear to men in dreams to testify to the claim of the Prophets. There is another way in which the dead speak to men. When a people who are spiritually dead are quickened to a new spiritual life by the teaching of their Prophet, their spiritual regeneration, as it were, speaks to the disbelievers and testifies to the truth of his claim.

899. The words refer to the testimony of the different objects of nature which bear testimony to the truth of a Prophet in the form of earthquakes, pestilences, famines, wars and other visitations. Thus nature itself appears to be angry with disbelievers; the very elements are up in arms against them.

900. The words, men and jinn, which occur in many verses of the Qur’ān do not signify two different species of God’s creatures, but two classes of human beings; "men" denoting the masses or the common folk, and "jinn" standing for the big people who often remain aloof from the common people and do not mix with them, practically remaining hidden from public gaze.

900A. That they may persist in their evil course. The words also mean that they experience the consequences of what they earn.

901. The "Book" may also refer to the Qur'ān; for not only the previous Divine Scriptures but also the Qur'ān itself bears testimony to the truth of the Holy Prophet. It contains teachings which, though they run counter to current views and beliefs, yet fair-minded people to whom these teachings are rehearsed and explained feel constrained to acknowledge their reasonableness.

901A. It is reported that when Mecca fell and the Holy Prophet entered the Ka‘bah which was at that time full of idols, and struck the idols one after the other with his stick, he recited the very words of this prophecy: The word of thy Lord has been fulfilled in truth and justice, thus alluding to the fact that with the Fall of Mecca the word of God had indeed been fulfilled (Manthūr).

902. The Divine prophecies or the way and manner in which God's laws work in favour of Divine Prophets.

And what reason have you that you should not eat of that over which the name of Allāh has been pronounced when [c]He has already explained to you that which He has forbidden unto you,—save that which you are forced to. And surely many mislead others by their evil desires through lack of knowledge. Assuredly, thy Lord knows best the transgressors.

903. In matters of faith it is neither the majority nor the minority that can be accepted as judge of what is right or wrong. God alone is the Infallible Judge. He gives His judgment by showing heavenly Signs and by helping the party which pursues the path of truth.

904. Vv. 2:173 and 23:52 show that the eating of good and pure food has a direct bearing on the actions of man. So believers are here enjoined to partake of pure and wholesome food to strengthen their faith and cleanse their hearts of impurity.

وَلَا تَاْكُلُوْا مِمَّا لَمْ يُذْكَرِ اسْمُ اللّٰهِ عَلَيْهِ وَاِنَّهٗ لَفِسْقٌ ؕ وَاِنَّ الشَّيٰطِيْنَ لَيُوْحُوْنَ اِلٰٓى اَوْلِيٰٓـئِهِمْ لِيُجَادِلُوْكُمْ ۚ وَاِنْ اَطَعْتُمُوْهُمْ اِنَّكُمْ لَمُشْرِكُوْنَ ﴿۱۲۱﴾ ع

The pronouncement of the name of God produces sanctifying effect on man’s heart which nullifies the hardening effect which the killing of the animal is likely to produce.

906. In the foregoing verses it was pointed out that man-made laws are always defective. Now it is mentioned in the present verse that man-made teachings cannot stand against Divine teachings. The case of those who devise laws, with the aid of human reason alone, is like one who gropes in darkness from which he will never come out.

difficulty and mental trouble in carrying them out. His bosom, as it were, becomes narrow like one who is climbing up a steep height.

908. Ma‘shar means, a company of men whose affair is the same (Lane). In this verse the word jinn clearly signifies great and powerful men as opposed to Ins, i.e. the weak and poor classes.

909. The Arabic words may mean: (1) You have won over many from among the common masses to your side and have made them follow you; (2) you have exploited them; (3) you have attached great importance to the masses, i.e. you did not accept the Truth out of fear lest the masses should cease to follow you. Just as weak people do not accept the Truth out of fear of the great, similarly the great ones are sometimes afraid of their followers and do not accept the Truth out of fear lest they should desert them.

910. The verse provides another proof of the fact that by the word "jinn" is here meant only a class of human beings, viz. the great and the powerful, for it is only one class of men that exploits another class, jinn as beings different from men have never been found to exploit men, neither are Divine Messengers known to have ever been raised among them.

911. As the Holy Prophet was raised for all mankind, the word al-Qurā would in his case apply to the whole world.

912. God never sends down general calamities unless He first warns people of the impending visitation by raising a Warner. Calamities referred to here are general calamities such as earthquakes, devastating wars, epidemics, etc. which smite a whole people.

But that which is for their associate-gods reaches not Allāh, while that which is for Allāh reaches their associate-gods. Evil is what they judge.[914]

[a]4:134; 14:20; 35:17. [b]11:34; 42:32. [c]11:94, 122; 39:40, 41. [d]16:57.

913. The words also mean, (1) act according to your way; (2) do your worst. The verse holds out a challenge to the idolatrous Meccans to do their worst and exert themselves to the utmost of their power and resources to extirpate Islam and destroy the small Muslim Community, but they will utterly fail in their nefarious designs and endeavours.

914. The reference is to an idolatrous custom of the Arabs. They would divide the produce of their lands between God and their deities. If the portion which they set apart for their deities was spent for other purposes, then the portion which they had reserved for God was given away as charity in the name of their deities, but if the portion set apart for God was spent for other ends, then the portion set aside for the deities was not transferred to God.

And if Allāh had enforced His Will, they would not have done this; so leave them alone with that which they invent.

915. The "associate-gods" here referred to are divines, soothsayers and astrologers, etc.

916. The reference is to the most atrocious practice among some Arab tribes of slaying or burying alive their female children or offering them as sacrifice at the altar of their deities to avert natural calamities. Or it may be to their superstitious vow that if they had a certain number of children they would offer one of them as sacrifice.

917. By "forbidden crops" are meant such cultivated fields as were dedicated to the idols. These could be used only by the priests that attended upon them.

918. The cattle mentioned in 5:104. They were not used for riding or as beasts of burden.

922. Apart from its primary meaning the verse also hints that the eating of lawful things is a means of safeguarding one against the attacks of Satan.

923. The idolaters are asked whether they were present when Allāh forbade the eating of oxen and camels. They are called upon to produce a Divine authority showing that the cow and the camel were really forbidden. This is so because eating of the flesh of cows and the camel is regarded as forbidden by some people on Scriptural authority—the cow by the Hindus and the camel by some Jews.

Say, [b]'I find not in what has been revealed to me aught forbidden to an eater who desires to eat it, except it be that which dies of itself or blood poured forth, or the flesh of swine—for all that is unclean—or [c]what is profane, on which is invoked the name of other than Allāh.[924] But whoso is driven by necessity, being neither disobedient nor exceeding the limit, then, surely, thy Lord is Most Forgiving, Merciful.'

[a]6:22; 7:38; 11:19. [b]2:174; 5:4; 16:116. [c]6:122.

924. The verse points out that the laws made by pagan Arabs with regard to permissible and forbidden foods were arbitrary, without any wisdom underlying them; while the food-laws prescribed by Islam are based on reason and wisdom. Basically speaking, Islām forbids four things—three on the basis of their being Rijs, i.e. unclean and impure; and one on the basis of its being Fisq, i.e. profane and irreligious. The first-mentioned three things are carrion, the blood which pours out when an animal is slaughtered or wounded and the flesh of swine. All these are, as the verse says, Rijs (unclean and impure), i.e. they are harmful both to the physical and moral health of man. The word Rijs, it must be noted, is to be read with each of the three first-mentioned forbidden things. The fourth thing forbidden is that on which the name of anything other than Allāh, is pronounced. It is Fisq (profane), i.e. a source of disobedience or rebellion against God. The eating of such food is calculated to injure the spiritual health of man and to kill his feelings of love and jealousy for Him.

147. And [a]to those who are Jews We forbade all animals having claws; and of the oxen and the sheep and goats did We forbid them their fats, save that which their backs bear or the entrails or that which is mixed with the bones.[925] With that did we recompense them for their rebellion.[926] And most surely We are truthful.

149. [c]Those who associate gods with Allāh will say, ‘If Allāh had pleased, we would not have associated gods with Him, nor would our fathers, nor would we have made anything unlawful.’ In like manner did those who were before them accuse God’s Messengers of falsehood, until they tasted of Our wrath. Say, ‘Have you any knowledge? Then produce it for us. You only follow mere conjecture. And you only tell lies.’

926. These things were forbidden to the Jews as a punishment for their transgression.

151. Say, 'Produce your witnesses who testify that Allāh has forbidden this.' If they bear witness, bear thou not witness with them, [b]nor follow thou the evil desires of those who treat Our Signs as lies and those who believe not in the Hereafter and [c]who set up [d]equals to their Lord.

R. 19.

قُلْ تَعَالَوْا اَتْلُ مَا حَرَّمَ رَبُّكُمْ عَلَيْكُمْ ۖ اَلَّا تُشْرِكُوْا بِهٖ شَيْـًٔا وَّبِالْوَالِدَيْنِ اِحْسَانًا ۚ وَلَا تَقْتُلُوْٓا اَوْلَادَكُمْ مِّنْ اِمْلَاقٍ ۭ نَحْنُ نَرْزُقُكُمْ وَاِيَّاهُمْ ۚ وَلَا تَقْرَبُوا

[a]5:49; 11:119; 13:32; 16:10. [b]5:49; 45:19. [c]6:2; 27:61. [d]4:37; 17:24. [e]17:32.

927. If God had decided to force men to do His Will, He would certainly have made them do things which are right and not the things which are wrong. But in His infinite wisdom He has made man a free agent. He has explained to him what is right and what is wrong, and then has left him free to follow whichever course he may like to choose.

928. The injunctions which follow the word "forbidden" are what God commands us to carry out. The injunctions are expressly mentioned but the converse of them which is forbidden is implied. Thus, on the one hand, by using the word "forbidden" and, on the other, by following it up with positive commandments, the verse combines in itself both the direct injunctions and their converse. The verse may be construed in another way also. The first sentence should be taken as having ended with the words what your Lord has forbidden, and the next sentence as beginning with the word 'Alaikum which would in this case mean, "It is enjoined on you." The verse will then read as follows: "Come, I will rehearse to you what your Lord has forbidden. It is enjoined on you that you associate not anything as partner with Him..."

929. Next to the injunctions about the protection of life is mentioned the commandment to protect property.

930. After the injunction to guard the tongue comes the injunction to guard the heart, implied in the words and fulfil the covenant of Allāh; for whereas the previous injunctions pertained to the covenant with men, the present one relates to the covenant with God.

R. 20.

وَهٰذَا كِتٰبٌ اَنْزَلْنٰهُ مُبٰرَكٌ فَاتَّبِعُوْهُ وَاتَّقُوْا لَعَلَّكُمْ تُرْحَمُوْنَ ﴿١٥٦﴾

157. Lest you should say, 'The Book was sent down only to two peoples[933] before us, and we were indeed unaware of what they read;'

[a]2:54; 5:45. [b]7:146. [c]6:93; 21:51.

931. The words "all things" signify all those things which satisfied the moral and spiritual needs of the Jews. The Torah fulfilled all those needs.

932. The verse signifies that the Qur'ān is a revealed Book which contains all the imperishable teachings and eternal truths which were contained in the former Scriptures, this being the meaning of the word Mubārak (Lane). Thus by following the Qur'ān Muslims are relieved of the necessity of seeking guidance from them.

933. The "two peoples" mentioned in the verse may be the Jews to whom was given the Torah and whose religion originated in the region in the north of Arabia, and the Zoroastrians to whom was given the Zend-Avesta and who lived on the east side of Arabia. Or the words may refer to Jews and Christians, the two peoples who lived in Arabia and with whom the Arabs had come into contact.

158. [a]Or lest you should say, 'Had the Book been sent down to us, we should surely have been better guided than they.' There has now come to you a clear evidence from your Lord, and a guidance and a mercy. [b]Who, then, is more unjust than he who rejects the Signs of Allāh and turns away from them? We will requite those who turn away from Our Signs with an evil punishment because of their turning away.

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ فَرَّقُوْا دِيْنَهُمْ وَكَانُوْا شِيَعًا

[a]35:43. [b]6:22; 7:38; 10:18. [c]2:211; 16:34. [d]30:33.

934. The "coming of angels" here refers to the punishment of the people through wars; because the coming of angels has been mentioned in connection with the battles that took place between Muslims and their enemies (3:125, 126 & 8:10).

935. The term "coming of the Lord" expresses complete destruction of the enemies of truth (2:211).

936. "The coming of the Signs" refers to earthly punishments such as famines, pestilences, calamities, etc.

937. The words, "split up their religion" signify that when people begin to

لَّسْتَ مِنْهُمْ فِيْ شَيْءٍ ؕ اِنَّمَاۤ اَمْرُهُمْ اِلَى

938. A good deed is like a good seed that multiplies tenfold and even more (2:262; 4:41; 10:27, 28; also Tirmidhī, ch. on Fasting) whereas an evil deed is counted as only one.

939. Prayer, sacrifice, life and death, cover the entire field of man's actions, and the Holy Prophet had been asked to declare that all phases of his life were devoted to God alone. All his prayers were offered to God; all his sacrifices were made to Him; all his life was devoted to His service; and if in the cause of religion he sought death, that was also to win His pleasure.

قُلْ اَغَيْرَ اللّٰهِ اَبْغِيْ رَبًّا وَّهُوَ رَبُّ كُلِّ

165. Say, [a]‘shall I seek a Lord other than Allāh, while He is the Lord of all things?’ And no soul earns evil but only against itself; [b]nor does any bearer of burden bear the burden of another.[940] Then to your Lord will be your return, and He will inform you of that wherein you used to differ.

وَهُوَ الَّذِيْ جَعَلَكُمْ خَلٰٓئِفَ الْاَرْضِ

سَرِيْعُ الْعِقَابِ ۖ وَاِنَّهٗ لَغَفُوْرٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ﴿١٦٦﴾

166. And He it is Who has made you successors of others on the earth and has exalted some of you over others in degrees of rank, [c]that He may try you by that which He has given you.[941] Surely, thy Lord is quick in punishment; and surely, He is Most Forgiving, Merciful.

940. This verse contains, as do vv. 17:16; 53:40, 41, a forceful repudiation of the doctrine of Atonement and emphatically draws attention to the fact that everyone has to carry his own cross and to account for his own actions. Nobody’s vicarious sacrifice can do one any good.

941. The verse constitutes at once an exhortation and a warning to the Muslims. They are told that they are going to be granted power and authority, and the duty of regulating the affairs of nations is about to devolve on them. They should discharge their responsibilities with equity and justice as they shall have to give account of their charge to their Creator.

CHAPTER 7
AL-A‘RĀF
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Title and Time of Revelation

According to Ibn-e-‘Abbās, Ibn-e-Zubair, Ḥasan, Mujāhid, ‘Ikrimah, ‘Aṭā’ and Jābir bin Zaid, this Sūrah belongs to the Meccan period with the exception of vv.165-172. Qatādah however, is of the opinion that v. 165 was revealed at Medina. The Sūrah takes its title from v. 47. Commentators have not succeeded in finding out any real connection between the word A‘rāf and the subject-matter of the Sūrah. This is because they have assigned a wrong meaning to the word. They think that A‘rāf is the name of an intervening spiritual stage between Paradise and Hell and that the Fellows of A‘rāf will appear distinct from the inmates of Hell but will not as yet have entered Paradise. The Qur’ān rejects this meaning of the word because it has mentioned only two groups of people—the dwellers of Paradise and the inmates of Hell. There is no mention in it of any third group or class of people. It lends no support to the interpretation of the word A‘rāf as the place of persons of a middling spiritual status, nor can any internal evidence be adduced in support of this interpretation. The Qur’ān depicts the Fellows of Al-A‘rāf as at one time addressing the dwellers of Paradise and at another time talking to the inmates of Hell; and their spiritual knowledge has been declared to be so great that they can recognize the dwellers of Paradise by their special marks and also the inmates of Hell by the latter’s particular signs. They rebuke and upbraid the inmates of Hell and pray for the inmates of Paradise (7:47, 49, 50). Can a person, who himself is hanging, as it were, in a state of uncertainty between Paradise and Hell, be so presumptuous as to assume an air of superiority as the Fellows of Al-A‘rāf have been shown to do? The fact is that the Fellows of Al-A‘rāf are the Prophets of God, who will enjoy a special spiritual status on the Day of Judgment and will pray for the dwellers of Paradise and rebuke and reprimand the inmates of Hell. And because the Sūrah is the first among the Quranic Chapters in which the life stories of several Prophets have been dealt with at some length, it has rightly been given the name Al-A‘rāf. Moreover, the very construction of the word supports this inference. A‘rāf is the plural of ‘Urf which means a high and elevated place and means also that spiritual realization which a man acquires by the help of God-given intellect and the testimony of his inner self. So A‘rāf may signify those teachings of which the truth is established by rational arguments and the testimony of human nature; and, as the teachings of Prophets possess all these qualities, they alone deserve this spiritually exalted position and so they can legitimately be called the Fellows of Al-A‘rāf (Elevated Places). In short, the Sūrah Al-A‘rāf is so called because in it illustrations have been given from the lives of those eminent men of very high spiritual position who in the past taught mankind eternal truths in accordance with the demands of human nature and human reason, and whom the men of this world resisted and sought to bring low, but whom the jealous God raised to a very exalted position.

Subject-Matter and Context

Spiritually speaking the Sūrah serves as a kind of Barzakh (intervening link) between the Sūrahs that precede it and those that follow it, which signifies that the subject-matter of the preceding Sūrahs has been developed into a new theme in this Sūrah. In the preceding Sūrahs the main theme consisted of refutation of Judaism and Christianity and that of other Faiths which profess to derive their authority mainly from Philosophy and Reason. In this Sūrah both these themes have been jointly treated and the falsity of the positions of both these sets of creeds is demonstrated and the truth of Islam established. First of all, it is stated that because the Qur'ān is the revealed Word of God, there is no possibility that it will ever meet with destruction or will fail to achieve its object. Then Muslims are warned that they should not, in a fit of despondency, come to a hasty compromise with the followers of other religions, because the opponents of a true religion have always suffered disgrace and humiliation in the end. Next, it is stated that God has created man for the attainment of a most sublime object, but most men forget this noble purpose of their lives. The paradisiacal life of Adam and his expulsion from it have been cited as an illustration of this subject, and it is added that in the very beginning after having created man God provided for him the means to attain a high spiritual status; but man gave no heed to God's plans for him, and followed Satan. Further, it is mentioned that, unlike former Faiths which aimed at individual development, Islām seeks to bring about reformation of whole communities. Whereas former Prophets sought to make individuals enter Paradise, Islām's aim is that whole communities and nations should attain bliss. But, as every effort at reformation has to encounter obstacles and vicissitudes before it attains its consummation, so whenever the Muslim community deviates from Islamic principles and teachings God raises for their reformation divinely-inspired Reformers from among the followers of the Holy Prophet so that man may not lose his newly-gained Paradise by deviating from the path of national progress and development. The Sūrah then proceeds to lay down standards and criteria for the recognition of these promised Reformers and light is also shed on the ultimate doom of their opponents. Next, it is said that all Divine plans work gradually. As in the material world, so in the realm of the spirit, all progress is subject to the law of evolution and it is by a process of progressive evolution that the spiritual development of man has taken place from the time of Adam to that of the Holy Prophet, and in his teaching greater attention has been devoted to the betterment and organization of the whole community. The believers, therefore, should always keep in mind that from small seeds grow big trees and that even great objects seem very insignificant in the beginning and remain hidden. So it behoves believers to keep their eyes open and let not the grand object of their creation remain hidden from their sight because, if once it was allowed to become hidden, it would remain hidden for ever.

With v. 60 begins a brief account of the life-history of some Prophets of antiquity whose mission it was to take man back to the blissful heavenly existence from which he was expelled. After that it is stated that good is ingrained in human nature of which it constitutes an integral part and that evil only comes later and is the result of external influences; and that, in spite of his instinctive goodness, man cannot attain perfection without the help of Divine revelation. By rejecting Divine guidance he deprives himself of his instinctive goodness and is spiritually ruined. Again, reference is made to the mission of the Holy Prophet, and his opponents are warned not to ignore the patent fact that his intellect is sound and motives pure, that his teachings are in perfect harmony with human nature and natural law and that the testimony of the time also is in his favour. Then some misgivings and doubts of disbelievers have been removed and it is stated that they will put up a very strong opposition to the Holy Prophet, but God will protect him from all harm. Muslims, however, are admonished not only to endure patiently the opposition of disbelievers but also to pray for them. Further, the Sūrah observes that like the opponents of former Prophets, the opponents of the Holy Prophet will continue to demand Signs, but it lies entirely with God to show Signs. He shows them when in His infallible wisdom He thinks opportune. But does not, the disbelievers are asked, the Qur'ān which fulfils the real object and purpose of Prophethood, constitute a sufficient Sign? Muslims, therefore, are exhorted to give to the miracle of the Qur'ān that great measure of true appreciation which it richly deserves, because the more the Heavenly light is vouchsafed to man, the truer should be his appreciation of it.

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

الٓمّٓصٓ ②

2. [b]Alif Lām Mīm Ṣād.[942]

كِتٰبٌ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْكَ فَلَا يَكُنْ فِيْ صَدْرِكَ حَرَجٌ مِّنْهُ لِتُنْذِرَ بِهٖ وَ ذِكْرٰى لِلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ ③

3. [c]This is a Book revealed unto thee[943]—so let there be no straitness in thy bosom concerning it—that thou mayest warn thereby and that it be an exhortation to the believers.

اِتَّبِعُوْا مَآ اُنْزِلَ اِلَيْكُمْ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ وَلَا تَتَّبِعُوْا مِنْ دُوْنِهٖٓ اَوْلِيَآءَ ؕ قَلِيْلًا مَّا تَذَكَّرُوْنَ ④

4. [d]Follow that which has been sent down to you from your Lord, and follow no protectors other than Him. But you seldom take warning.

وَكَمْ مِّنْ قَرْيَةٍ اَهْلَكْنٰهَا فَجَآءَهَا بَاْسُنَا بَيَاتًا اَوْ هُمْ قَآئِلُوْنَ ⑤

5. [e]How many a town have We destroyed! And Our punishment came upon it by night or while they slept at noon.[944]

[a]1:1. [b]2:2; 3:2; 29:2; 30:2; 31: 2; 32:2. [c]6:52; 19:98; 25:2. [d]33:3; 39:56. [e]7:98; 21:12; 28:59.

942. According to Ibn-e-‘Abbās, the combined four letters Alif Lām Mīm Ṣād signify "I am Allāh, the All-Knowing and I explain." For the first three letters see note 16, and the letter Ṣād stands for Ufaṣṣilu, i.e. I explain. The contents of this Sūrah justify this interpretation, because the Sūrah not only embodies Divine knowledge of, but explains at greater length and with a greater wealth of illustrations, the subject dealt with in the preceding Sūrah. The letter Ṣād has also been understood to mean, "Most Truthful."

943. This verse is addressed to every believer, and not particularly to the Holy Prophet.

944. Latter part of the night and also midday are here mentioned as particularly the two times when Divine visitations generally come upon a people. These are the hours when they are often asleep or are in a state of negligence.

فَمَا كَانَ دَعْوٰىهُمْ اِذْ جَآءَهُمْ بَاْسُنَآ اِلَّآ اَنْ قَالُوْٓا اِنَّا كُنَّا ظٰلِمِيْنَ ۝٦

6. So when Our punishment came upon them, their cry was nothing but that they said, [a]'We were indeed wrongdoers!'[945]

فَلَنَسْـَٔلَنَّ الَّذِيْنَ اُرْسِلَ اِلَيْهِمْ وَلَنَسْـَٔلَنَّ الْمُرْسَلِيْنَ ۝٧

7. And [b]We will certainly question those to whom the Messengers were sent and [c]We will certainly question the Messengers.[946]

فَلَنَقُصَّنَّ عَلَيْهِمْ بِعِلْمٍ وَّمَا كُنَّا غَآئِبِيْنَ ۝٨

8. Then will We certainly relate to them their deeds with knowledge, for We are never absent.

وَالْوَزْنُ يَوْمَئِذِ ِۨالْحَقُّ ۚ فَمَنْ ثَقُلَتْ مَوَازِيْنُهٗ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْمُفْلِحُوْنَ ۝٩

9. And [d]the weighing[947] on that day will be true. Then as for those whose scales are heavy, it is they who shall prosper.

وَمَنْ خَفَّتْ مَوَازِيْنُهٗ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ الَّذِيْنَ خَسِرُوْٓا اَنْفُسَهُمْ بِمَا كَانُوْا بِاٰيٰتِنَا يَظْلِمُوْنَ ۝١٠

10. And as for those [e]whose scales are light, it is they who shall have ruined their souls because of their being unjust[948] concerning Our Signs.

945. The reason, why even confirmed atheists have sometimes been found to cry to God for help when punishment overtakes them, is that at such a dreadful time realization comes to man not only of his own utter helplessness but also of the might and power of a Higher Being.

946. The verse embodies the important principle that in one form or another all are responsible to God. All people will be questioned how they received God's Messengers, and the Messengers will be questioned how they delivered the Divine Message and what response was made by the people to it.

947. The language used here is figurative. Material things are weighed in scales made of metal or wood, but the weighing of things which are not material signifies determining their real value, worth or importance.

948. The word Ẓulm, literally meaning 'to put a thing in the wrong place'

11. And [a]We have established you in the earth and provided for you therein the means of subsistence. But little thanks do you give.

وَلَقَدْ مَكَّنّٰكُمْ فِي الْاَرْضِ وَجَعَلْنَا لَكُمْ فِيْهَا مَعَايِشَ ؕ قَلِيْلًا مَّا تَشْكُرُوْنَ ﴿۱۱﴾ ع

R. 2.

12. And We indeed created you and then [b]we gave you shape;[949] then said We to the angels, [c]'Submit to Adam;'[950] and they all submitted, But Iblīs[951] did not; he will not be of those who submit.

وَلَقَدْ خَلَقْنٰكُمْ ثُمَّ صَوَّرْنٰكُمْ ثُمَّ قُلْنَا لِلْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ اسْجُدُوْا لِاٰدَمَ ۖ فَسَجَدُوْٓا اِلَّآ اِبْلِيْسَ ؕ لَمْ يَكُنْ مِّنَ السّٰجِدِيْنَ ﴿۱۲﴾

13. [d]God said,[952] 'What prevented thee from submitting when I commanded thee?' He said, 'I

قَالَ مَا مَنَعَكَ اَلَّا تَسْجُدَ اِذْ اَمَرْتُكَ ؕ قَالَ اَنَا خَيْرٌ مِّنْهُ ۚ خَلَقْتَنِيْ مِنْ نَّارٍ

[a]15:21; 46:27. [b]23:15; 39:7; 40:65. [c]2:35; 15:30-31; 17:62; 18:51; 20:117; 38:73-75.
[d]15:33-34; 38:76-77.

(Lane), is here used to signify that the disbelievers did not treat the Signs of God in the manner in which they should have been treated. The Signs were meant to instil fear of God and humility into their minds, but instead they became all the more arrogant and insolent and rejected them with mockery and derision.

949. Man can mould his moral being into various shapes, as clay can be moulded.

950. Whereas the command to submit to Adam was addressed to the angels, it applied to all creation, as angels are Divine agents to give effect to God's commands.

951. Iblīs was not an angel (18:51). He is the chief of the evil spirits as Gabriel is the chief of angels. The incident mentioned here is in no way connected with the first progenitor of the human race, who may be called the first Adam. It is only with the latter Adam (who dwelt in this earth about six thousand years ago and from whom Noah and Abraham and their posterity were directly descended) that the present account deals.

952. What is represented in the present verse as a dialogue between God and Iblīs does not necessarily mean that an exchange of words did actually take place. The words may only depict a state of things, a picture of the conditions that came into existence as a result of the refusal of Iblīs to submit to Adam. See also 61.

وَّخَلَقْتَهٗ مِنْ طِيْنٍ ﴿١٣﴾

am better than he. Thou hast created me of fire while him hast Thou created of clay.'[953]

قَالَ فَاهْبِطْ مِنْهَا فَمَا يَكُوْنُ لَكَ اَنْ تَتَكَبَّرَ فِيْهَا فَاخْرُجْ اِنَّكَ مِنَ الصّٰغِرِيْنَ ﴿١٤﴾

14. God said, [a]'Then go down hence;[954] it is not for thee to be arrogant here. Get out; thou art certainly of those who are abased.'

قَالَ اَنْظِرْنِيْٓ اِلٰى يَوْمِ يُبْعَثُوْنَ ﴿١٥﴾

15. [b]He said, 'Respite me till the day when they will be raised up.'[954A]

قَالَ اِنَّكَ مِنَ الْمُنْظَرِيْنَ ﴿١٦﴾

16. God said, 'Thou art of those who are respited.'

قَالَ فَبِمَآ اَغْوَيْتَنِيْ لَاَقْعُدَنَّ لَهُمْ صِرَاطَكَ الْمُسْتَقِيْمَ ﴿١٧﴾ ۙ

17. [c]He said, 'Now, since Thou hast adjudged me to be erring, I will assuredly lie in wait for them on Thy straight path;

ثُمَّ لَاٰتِيَنَّهُمْ مِّنْۢ بَيْنِ اَيْدِيْهِمْ وَمِنْ خَلْفِهِمْ وَعَنْ اَيْمَانِهِمْ وَعَنْ شَمَآئِلِهِمْ ؕ وَلَا تَجِدُ اَكْثَرَهُمْ شٰكِرِيْنَ ﴿١٨﴾

18. 'Then will I surely come upon them from before them and from behind them and from their right and from their left,[955] and Thou wilt not find most of them to be grateful.'

[a]15:35; 38:78. [b]15:37; 38:80. [c]15:40; 38:83.

953. For an explanation of the word "clay" see [420A].

954. There being no noun mentioned in the verse to which the pronoun hā (it) implied in the expression Minhā (hence) refers, it may be taken to denote the condition or state in which Iblīs was, before he refused to submit to Adam.

954A. The resurrection referred to in this verse is not the great Resurrection of mankind decreed for the Hereafter, but the spiritual resurrection of man, or the state when his spiritual consciousness becomes fully developed. Iblīs can lead him astray only so long as he is not spiritually resurrected. But once he attains that high spiritual stage which is known by the term Baqā' (rebirth), Iblīs can do him no harm (17:66).

955. Note the network of seductions threatened by Satan.

قَالَ اخْرُجْ مِنْهَا مَذْءُوْمًا مَّدْحُوْرًا ؕ لَمَنْ تَبِعَكَ مِنْهُمْ لَاَمْلَـَٔنَّ جَهَنَّمَ مِنْكُمْ اَجْمَعِيْنَ ﴿۱۹﴾

19. God said, 'Get out hence, despised and banished. [a]Whosoever of them shall follow thee, I will surely fill Hell with you all;'

وَيٰۤاٰدَمُ اسْكُنْ اَنْتَ وَزَوْجُكَ الْجَنَّةَ فَكُلَا مِنْ حَيْثُ شِئْتُمَا وَلَا تَقْرَبَا هٰذِهِ الشَّجَرَةَ فَتَكُوْنَا مِنَ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿۲۰﴾

20. 'And [b]O Adam! dwell thou and thy wife in the Garden[955A] and eat therefrom wherever you will,[956] but approach not this tree[957] lest you be among the wrongdoers,'

فَوَسْوَسَ لَهُمَا الشَّيْطٰنُ لِيُبْدِيَ لَهُمَا مَا وٗرِيَ عَنْهُمَا مِنْ سَوْاٰتِهِمَا وَقَالَ مَا نَهٰىكُمَا رَبُّكُمَا عَنْ هٰذِهِ الشَّجَرَةِ اِلَّاۤ اَنْ تَكُوْنَا مَلَكَيْنِ اَوْ تَكُوْنَا مِنَ الْخٰلِدِيْنَ ﴿۲۱﴾

21. But [c]Satan made evil suggestions to them so that he might make known to them what was hidden from them of their shame[957A] and said, 'Your Lord has only forbidden you this tree, lest you become angels or lest you become of the immortals.'

[a]11:20; 15:43-44; 32:14; 38:86. [b]2:38; 20:118. [c]2:37; 20:121.

955A. See 68.

956. This shows that every thing is lawful, except what may be forbidden as being harmful physically or spiritually.

957. "Forbidden tree" may also signify commandments whereby certain things were forbidden to Adam and his wife. "Good word" has been likened to "good tree" in the Qur'ān (14:25) and evil word to "evil tree" (14:27).

957A. While evil thoughts ultimately lead a person to his ruin, they also make manifest to him his weaknesses.

As the place where Adam was made to reside has been metaphorically described in the Qur'ān as a "Garden", therefore in the description that follows the metaphor is continued and Adam is represented as having been forbidden to approach a certain 'tree' which was not a tree in its literal and physical sense, but a certain family or tribe from which he was bidden to keep aloof, because the members of that family were his enemies and they would have spared no pains to do him harm.

وَقَاسَمَهُمَآ اِنِّيْ لَكُمَا لَمِنَ النّٰصِحِيْنَ ۙ﴿۲۲﴾

22. And he swore to them, saying, 'Surely I am a sincere counsellor unto you,'

فَدَلّٰىهُمَا بِغُرُوْرٍ ۚ فَلَمَّا ذَاقَا الشَّجَرَةَ
بَدَتْ لَهُمَا سَوْاٰتُهُمَا وَطَفِقَا يَخْصِفٰنِ
عَلَيْهِمَا مِنْ وَّرَقِ الْجَنَّةِ ؕ وَنَادٰىهُمَا رَبُّهُمَآ
اَلَمْ اَنْهَكُمَا عَنْ تِلْكُمَا الشَّجَرَةِ وَاَقُلْ

23. So he caused them to fall into disobedience by deceit. And when they [a]tasted of the tree, their shame[958] became manifest to them and they both began to cover themselves with the leaves[959]

[a]2:37; 20:122.

958. The word Sayyi'ah which means, any evil, foul, unseemly or abominable saying or habit or action which one would like to hide; shame; nakedness (Lane), is used here in the sense of "object of shame" or "weakness," because no man's nakedness is hidden from him. Some of Adam's weaknesses were indeed hidden from him and he came to realize them when his enemy lured him away from his position of security. Every person has certain weaknesses which are hidden even from himself, but which become exposed at time of strain and stress, or when he is tempted and tried. So it was when Adam was tempted and deceived by Satan that he became aware of some of his natural weaknesses. The Qur'ān does not say that the weaknesses of Adam and his wife became known to other people, but that they only themselves became conscious of them.

959. Waraq, meaning, the prime and freshness of a thing; the young lads of a community (Lisān) signifies that when Satan succeeded in causing a split in Adam's community and some of its weaker members had gone out of its fold, he gathered together the Aurāq (leaves) of the Garden, i.e. the youth of the community, and began to reunite and reorganize his people with their help. It is generally the youth who, being mostly free from preconceived ideas and prejudices, follow and help the Prophets of God (10:84). The being whom the Qur'ān has represented as having refused to submit to Adam is called Iblīs, while the person who tempted him is called Satan. This distinction is observed not only in the verse under comment, but in all the relevant verses throughout the Qur'ān. This shows that, so far as this narrative is concerned, Satan and Iblīs were two different persons. In fact, the word Shaiṭān (Satan) is applied not only to evil spirits but also to those human beings who, on account of their evil nature and wicked deeds, become, as it were, Satan incarnate. The Shaiṭān who tempted Adam and caused him to slip was not an invisible evil spirit but a wicked man of flesh and blood, a devil from among human beings, a manifestation of Satan and an agent of Iblīs. He was a member of the family which Adam had been bidden to avoid. The Holy Prophet is reported to have of the Garden. And their Lord called them, saying, 'Did I not forbid you that tree and tell you, [a]verily Satan is to you an open enemy?'

لَّكُمَآ اِنَّ الشَّيْطٰنَ لَكُمَا عَدُوٌّ مُّبِيْنٌ ﴿٢٣﴾

24. They said, [b]'Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves[960] and if Thou forgive us not and have not mercy on us, we shall surely be of the losers.'

قَالَا رَبَّنَا ظَلَمْنَآ اَنْفُسَنَا ۖ وَاِنْ لَّمْ تَغْفِرْ لَنَا وَتَرْحَمْنَا لَنَكُوْنَنَّ مِنَ الْخٰسِرِيْنَ ﴿٢٤﴾

25. God said, [c]'Go forth,[961] some of you will be enemies of others. And for you there is an abode on the earth and a provision for a time.'

قَالَ اهْبِطُوْا بَعْضُكُمْ لِبَعْضٍ عَدُوٌّ ۚ وَلَكُمْ فِى الْاَرْضِ مُسْتَقَرٌّ وَّمَتَاعٌ اِلٰى حِيْنٍ ﴿٢٥﴾

26. He said. [d]'Therein shall you live and therein shall you die and therefrom shall you be brought forth.'[962]

قَالَ فِيْهَا تَحْيَوْنَ وَفِيْهَا تَمُوْتُوْنَ وَمِنْهَا تُخْرَجُوْنَ ﴿٢٦﴾ ع

said that his name was Ḥārith, (Tirmidhī, ch. on Tafsīr) which is further evidence of his being a human being and not an evil spirit.

960. Adam soon realized his error and hastened to turn to God in repentance. In fact, Adam's error lay in taking this man-devil for a well-wisher, although God had warned him against having anything to do with him.

961. The verse shows that Adam was commanded to emigrate from the land of his birth because enmity and hatred had sprung up between different members of his community. This constitutes a further evidence of the fact that the "Garden" which Adam was commanded to leave was not Paradise. It appears that Adam emigrated from Mesopotamia, the land of his birth, to a neighbouring land. The emigration was perhaps a temporary one and he may have returned to his native land not long after. Indeed, the words, a provision for a time, contain a veiled hint at the emigration being a temporary one. Adam is warned in this verse to be careful in future; for it was in his native land that he was now to live forever.

962. Taken in a general sense the verse hints that no human being can ascend to the heavens with his physical body. Man must live and die on this earth.

يٰبَنِيْٓ اٰدَمَ قَدْ اَنْزَلْنَا عَلَيْكُمْ لِبَاسًا يُّوَارِيْ سَوْاٰتِكُمْ وَرِيْشًا ؕ وَلِبَاسُ التَّقْوٰى ۙ ذٰلِكَ خَيْرٌ ؕ ذٰلِكَ مِنْ اٰيٰتِ اللّٰهِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَذَّكَّرُوْنَ ﴿۲۷﴾

27. O children of Adam, We have indeed sent down to you raiment to cover your nakedness and to be a means of adornment; but the raiment of righteousness[963]—that is the best. That is of the commandments of Allāh, that they may remember.

يٰبَنِيْٓ اٰدَمَ لَا يَفْتِنَنَّكُمُ الشَّيْطٰنُ كَمَآ اَخْرَجَ اَبَوَيْكُمْ مِّنَ الْجَنَّةِ يَنْزِعُ عَنْهُمَا لِبَاسَهُمَا لِيُرِيَهُمَا سَوْاٰتِهِمَا ؕ اِنَّهٗ يَرٰىكُمْ هُوَ وَقَبِيْلُهٗ مِنْ حَيْثُ لَا تَرَوْنَهُمْ ؕ اِنَّا جَعَلْنَا الشَّيٰطِيْنَ اَوْلِيَآءَ لِلَّذِيْنَ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ ﴿۲۸﴾

28. O children of Adam, let not Satan seduce you, even as he turned your parents out of the Garden, stripping them of their raiment that he might show them their nakedness. 29. And when they commit an indecency, they say, 'We found our fathers doing it and 'Allāh has enjoined it upon

963. It was with the apparel of piety that Adam covered his "nakedness" in the "Garden".

964. The Evil Spirit, called Shaiṭān, and those of his kind are generally invisible to the eye. They exercise their influence imperceptibly and search for the hidden weaknesses of man in order to confirm him in his evil ways. God has created Satan only as a trial for men—Satan serves the purpose of a hurdle in the spiritual race in which man is engaged. Hurdles are meant not to block but to make the competitors in the race more vigilant and to redouble their efforts. The careless and the negligent, who stumble over hurdles and thus lose the race, have themselves to blame and not the person or persons who put them in their way in order to try and prove their mettle.

32. O children of Adam! take your adornment[967] at every time and place of worship, and eat and drink, but [d]be not immoderate; surely, He does not love those who are immoderate.

965. When the time of Prayer approaches and Muslims are about to go to a mosque, they should concentrate all their attention on God, taking their mind away from the cares of the world. The ablution performed before every Prayer serves the useful purpose of turning the believer's thoughts towards God and putting him in the right state for Prayer.

966. The words, As He brought you into being, so shall you return, mean that just as our bodies gradually develop in the wombs of our mothers, so will our souls pass through a similar process of development after death.

967. The adornment should either be physical or spiritual. In the physical sense believers are enjoined to go to a place of worship, as far as possible in a clean and decent dress.

Say, 'They are for the believers in the present life and will be exclusively for them on the Day of Resurrection.' Thus do We explain the Signs for a people who have knowledge,

قُلْ اِنَّمَا حَرَّمَ رَبِّيَ الْفَوَاحِشَ مَا ظَهَرَ مِنْهَا وَمَا بَطَنَ وَالْاِثْمَ وَالْبَغْيَ بِغَيْرِ الْحَقِّ وَاَنْ تُشْرِكُوْا بِاللّٰهِ مَا لَمْ يُنَزِّلْ بِهٖ سُلْطٰنًا وَّاَنْ تَقُوْلُوْا عَلَى اللّٰهِ مَا لَا تَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿۳۴﴾

34. Say, [b]'My Lord has only forbidden indecencies, open or secret and sin and wrongful transgression and that [c]you associate with Allāh that for which He has sent down no authority, and that you say of Allāh what you know not.'

وَلِكُلِّ اُمَّةٍ اَجَلٌ ۚ فَاِذَا جَآءَ اَجَلُهُمْ لَا يَسْتَاْخِرُوْنَ سَاعَةً وَّلَا يَسْتَقْدِمُوْنَ ﴿۳۵﴾

35. And for [d]every people there is a term, and when their term is come, they cannot remain behind a single moment, nor can they get ahead[969] of it.

968. The good and pure things provided by God are really meant for believers though they are also shared by disbelievers in this life; but in the life to come they will be enjoyed by believers to the exclusion of disbelievers.

969. When the time fixed for the punishment of a people arrives, it cannot be averted, delayed or postponed.

970. The point is worthy of special note that, like some preceding verses (e.g. 7:27, 28 & 32), the address in the words, O children of Adam, is to the people of the Holy Prophet's time and to the generations that are yet to be

It is these who shall have their lot as ordained[971] till when Our Messengers shall visit them to take away their souls, they shall say, [c]'Where is that which you used to call upon besides Allāh?' They will answer, 'We cannot find them;' and they will [d]bear witness against themselves that they were disbelievers.

He will say, 'For each there is double punishment,[973] but you do not know.'

975. The parenthetical clause, We charge not any soul beyond its capacity, contradicts the Christian dogma that sin being ingrained in human nature, it is beyond the power of man to get rid of it.

976. In fact, heavenly life begins in this very world (55:47) and he is said to be enjoying it whose heart is free from enmity, jealousy, rancour and mental disquiet.

47. And between the two there shall be a partition, and on the Elevated Places[978] in heaven there shall be men who will know all by their marks. And they will call out to the people of Heaven,

977. The expression signifies that the wrongdoers desire to corrupt true religion. They are not only themselves wicked but also try to make others like themselves and even seek to distort and tamper with religious teaching.

978. A'rāf is the plural of 'Urf which means 'an elevated place'. They say 'Arafa 'alal-Qaum, i.e. he was or became manager or superintendent of the affairs of the people, being acquainted with them. It is generally men of high dignity and distinguished position that are seated on elevated places. According to Ḥasan and Mujāhid the men on the Elevated Places will be the elite among the believers or the most learned among them; according to Kirmānī, they will be the Martyrs. Some others think that they will be the Prophets and this appears to be the most correct view. The men seated on the Elevated Places not only will command a better view, but, on account of their high rank and position, will also be better informed. They will know the rank and station of every person from his very appearance. It is evidently a wrong view that the men on the A'rāf (Elevated Places) will be those persons of middling ranks whose case will not have yet been decided, it being, as it were, still under consideration. There is no sense in placing such persons on elevated places while Martyrs and Prophets will be occupying lower positions.

'Peace be on you.' These will not have yet entered it[979] although they will be hoping to do so.

وَ اِذَا صُرِفَتْ اَبْصَارُهُمْ تِلْقَآءَ اَصْحٰبِ النَّارِ ۙ قَالُوْا رَبَّنَا لَا تَجْعَلْنَا مَعَ الْقَوْمِ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿۴۸﴾ ع ۸ ۱۲

49. And the occupants of the Elevated Places will call out to men, whom they will know by their marks,[980] and say, 'Your numbers availed you not, nor your arrogance.'

اَهٰۤؤُلَآءِ الَّذِيْنَ اَقْسَمْتُمْ لَا يَنَالُهُمُ اللّٰهُ بِرَحْمَةٍ ؕ اُدْخُلُوا الْجَنَّةَ لَا خَوْفٌ عَلَيْكُمْ وَلَاۤ اَنْتُمْ تَحْزَنُوْنَ ﴿۵۰﴾

50. [b]'Are these[981] the men about whom you swore that Allāh would not extend mercy to them?' To them God will say, 'Enter Paradise; no fear shall come upon you, nor shall you grieve.'

[a]23:95. [b]23:111.

979. The words refer to would-be dwellers of Heaven who will not have yet entered it, but will be hoping to do so soon. The people on the Elevated Places will recognize them as would-be dwellers of Heaven, even though they will not have yet entered it.

980. The occupants of the Elevated Places, i.e. the Prophets, will call out to certain persons from among the people to whom they had been sent and whom they will recognize by their special marks and will say to them that they must have realized now the sorry end of their opposition to them.

981. The reference in the word "these" is to the would-be inmates of Heaven. The Prophets will address the inmates of Hell and tell them to look at the would-be inmates of Heaven—the poor believers whom they ridiculed and looked down upon and then will ask them, "Are these the men about whom you swore that Allāh would not extend mercy to them?"

982. The disbelievers were convinced in their heart of hearts of the truth of Islām but, as they took their religion for a pastime, they refused to listen to the dictates of reason and to the voice of their conscience. So God will ignore them as they refused to believe that they will ever meet their Creator and they will have to render account of their deeds to Him.

983. For the sake of convenience the word Ta'wīl has been rendered here as fulfilment of warning. See also 372.

984. Ayyām is the plural of Yaum which denotes time absolutely (1:4); or it may signify an indefinite period, or a stage in the development of a thing. It is not possible to surmise and define the length of this period. It may be "a thousand years" (22:48), or "fifty thousand years" (70:5). But the word Yaum definitely does not refer here or in any other verse of the Qur'ān as the period of time determined by the rotation of the earth on its axis. God has not disclosed to us the extent of all His days. If some of God's days extend over a thousand years and others over fifty thousand years, there may be still others which extend over millions or billions of years. Science has disclosed the fact that it took the heavens and the earth millions of years to be evolved into their present shape. A vision of the eminent Muslim scholar, Muḥyud-Dīn Ibn-e-'Arabī, leads one to a similar conclusion. Thus we cannot definitely determine the length of the "six days" during which the creation of the heavens and the earth was completed. God brings about different changes in different periods, some taking a thousand years, others fifty thousand years and yet others even a longer period. All that we can say is that the creation of the heavens and the earth took six long cycles to become perfect and complete.

attributes of God mentioned in Sūrah Ikhlāṣ are His transcendent attributes. These attributes are eternal and unchangeable and are manifested through God's attributes of similitude (Ṣifāte-Tashbīhiyyah), i.e. such attributes as are found more or less in other beings also. These latter attributes are said to be the bearers of the 'Arsh. They are Rabbul-'Ālamīn, Ar-Raḥmān, Ar-Raḥīm and Māliki Yaumid-Dīn. That 'Arsh represents the transcendent attributes of God is also clear from 23:117 which shows that the "Unity of God" and His 'Arsh are intimately connected, for it is the transcendent attributes which constitute the real proof of Divine Unity, other attributes of God being shared by man in different degrees. The words, "Settled Himself on the Throne" signify that after the creation of the physical universe the transcendent attributes of God and His attributes of similitude came into operation and all the affairs of the world began to be conducted through the set laws of nature and became in perfect working order. See also 'The Larger Edition of the Commentary,' pp. 973-976.

987. The distinction between Khalq (creation) and Amr (command) is that while the former word generally means, the measuring out or evolving of a thing out of pre-existing matter, the latter means, bringing into being without matter by uttering the simple command word "be." The clause, His is the creation and the command, may also mean that God has not only created the universe but He also exercises authority and command over it. Amr also means, the making of laws.

988. The expression means that before the revelation of the Qur'ān the disbelievers had some excuse for leading unrighteous lives; but now that a perfect guidance has come to them, they will not be allowed to go on making mischief and grovelling in sin and iniquity and leading unrighteous lives with

989. Muḥsin signifies "one who strives to be perfect in good deeds." A famous saying of the Holy Prophet describes the Muḥsin as one who does a good deed as if he is actually seeing God or that at least God is seeing him (Bukhārī & Muslim).

990. The word Raḥmah here refers to rain. Just as in the physical world rain is preceded by cool breeze, which serves as its harbinger, similarly before a Prophet of God makes his appearance, there is a sort of general religious awakening among men. The verse signifies that just as rainwater gives new life to a dead land and causes fruits, vegetables and corn to grow from it, similarly, the heavenly water of revelation breathes a new life into a people devoid of spiritual life. The verse thus holds out a promise that the bleak, arid and barren land of Arabia would soon blossom into a garden full of trees laden with fruits, and of plants bearing fragrant flowers, in consequence of the heavenly water that has descended on it in the form of the Qur'ān. No wonder that the Arabs, who had hitherto been regarded as the dregs and scum of humanity, suddenly emerged as teachers and leaders thereof.

991. Just as rain produces different effects upon different plots of land according to their nature and quality; so does Divine revelation affect different men in different ways. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that there are three kinds of land: (a) The good, level land which, when watered by rain, absorbs the rainwater and yields good vegetation and brings forth abundant fruit. (b) The land which, being low-lying and rocky, only collects rainwater but does not absorb it and so brings forth no vegetation but provides drinking water for men and beasts. (c) The high stony ground which neither collects the water of rain nor absorbs it and is quite useless both for the purpose of vegetation and as a storage of rainwater. Similarly, men are of three kinds: (1) Those who not only themselves profit by Divine revelation but prove a source of spiritual guidance for others. (2) Those who do not themselves profit by the Divine revelation, but receive it and keep it stored up for others to benefit thereby. (3) Those who neither derive any benefit from the Divine revelation themselves nor keep it stored up for the use of others. They are like that piece of land which neither yields any produce nor collects water so that men and beasts may drink of it.

992. After having briefly described the great moral reformation that the appearance of a Divine Prophet brings about among his people and the evil consequences to which opposition to him leads, the Sūrah with this verse proceeds to give illustrations of some of the nations of antiquity, beginning with the people of Noah.

993. Noah refutes the charge of his being in error. He, in effect, says that a person who is proceeding to a place may indeed be said to be unacquainted with the way leading to it or to have lost the same owing to his having never trodden it before, but how can a person who is returning from a certain place be said not to know the way to that place and how possibly can he lose it? Noah said that he could not be in error, for he had come from God and, therefore, there was no possibility of his wandering away from the path that leads to Him.

Abraham.

1000. The camel formed the chief means of conveyance in those parts and it was on his she-camel that the Prophet Ṣāliḥ used to travel from place to place to preach his Message. Placing obstruction in the way of the free movements of the she-camel or doing it harm was tantamount to obstructing the work with which God had entrusted Ṣāliḥ. There was nothing unusual about the she-camel itself. It was an ordinary animal. The sanctity that attached to it was that God had declared it to be a Sign and a symbol of the sanctity and inviolability of the person of the Prophet Ṣāliḥ, and so doing an injury to it was tantamount to doing an injury to Ṣāliḥ himself and to hampering his work.

1001. The words do not mean that she was to be allowed to graze in any field she entered. The meaning is that no obstruction was to be put in her way and that she was to be permitted to proceed to any place to which Ṣāliḥ might choose to go. The declaration by Ṣāliḥ about the free movements of his she-camel was in harmony with a time-honoured Arab custom.

1002. The words, you build palaces in its plains, refer to the winter residences of the tribe, while the expression, and you hew the mountains into dwellings, allude to their summer resorts in the hills. The tribe of Thamūd were a cultured people—industrious, wealthy and resourceful. Judged by the 1008. It often happens in a severe earthquake that rocks and rubble erupt and are carried to a height and then fall back on the earth. This happened at Pompeii; and at Kangra (India) in 1905.

1009. According to some the country round the Dead Sea is the site of the ruined cities. The Qur’ān, however, appears to place it on the route from Medina to Syria (15:80).

1010. Midian was Abraham’s son from Keturah (Gen. 25:1, 2). His descendants settled in the north of Ḥijāz. Midian was also the name of a town on the Red Sea, opposite to Sinai on the Arabian shore. The town was so called because it was inhabited by the descendants of Midian. Some have referred to it as a seaport on account of its proximity to the sea, being situated only at a distance of about eight miles from the Gulf of ‘Aqabah; others have spoken of it as an inland town. Midian had a large population of the descendants of Ishmael. Shu‘aib had some resemblance with the Holy Prophet in that both had to leave their original home for another town, Midian in the case of Shu‘aib and Medina in the case of the Holy Prophet.

1011. Shu‘aib was the name of a non-Israelite Prophet who lived before Moses. He is generally looked upon as the father-in-law of Moses, though the Bible makes no mention of the name. According to the Bible, the name of the father-in-law of Moses was Jethro, who is not spoken of as a Prophet. The Qur’ān speaks of Moses as having been raised after Shu‘aib, so he could not be his contemporary (7:104). As Shu‘aib has been mentioned in this verse as the "brother" of Midian, the inference is inevitable that he was a descendant of Abraham, Midian being a son of the Patriarch from his bondmaid, Keturah.

1018. The hearts of disbelievers are sealed up when they refuse to make use of their God-given power of reasoning and understanding.

1019. The words "after them", contradict the popular view that Shu'aib was a contemporary and father-in-law of Moses.

1020. Ẓulm meaning to put a thing in the wrong place or to make a wrong use of it (Lane), the clause signifies that Pharaoh and his chiefs made wrong use of the Signs. The Signs were meant to engender fear of God in their hearts but instead they jeered and mocked at them.

1021. Ḥaqīq means, adapted, disposed, apt, meet, right, fit or worthy (Lane).

1022. When Moses went to Pharaoh his object was not so much to preach his Message to him as to call upon him to let the Israelites go with him, though ordinarily he would have preached to him also. As a matter of fact the Message of Moses was meant primarily for the Israelites, but as long as the Israelites remained mixed up with the natives of Egypt, Moses had to preach to them both. When the Israelites left the land, he had no concern with the Egyptians and confined his attention to his own kith and kin to whom he was sent.

1023. The Qur'ān has used three different words to describe the turning of the rod of Moses into a serpent, viz. Ḥayyah as in 20:21, Jānn as in 27:11 and 28:32 and Thu'bān as in 26:33 and in the present verse. The first word is of general application and is used for serpents of all categories. The second word means a small serpent. The third word (Thu'bān) means a bulky and long serpent. Thus the use of three different words at three different places in the Qur'ān is significant and evidently is intended to serve a definite purpose. The word Jānn has been used from the point of view of the serpent's quick movements and Thu'bān from the point of view of its large size. When the mere fact of the turning of the rod into a serpent is mentioned the word Ḥayyah is used, but when the rod is mentioned as turning into a serpent in the presence of Moses alone the word Jānn (a small serpent) is used. But when the miracle of the rod turning into a serpent is shown before Pharaoh, the magicians and the general public, the word Thu'bān is used. The significance of these different words on different occasions is different. The word Ḥayyah signifies that a dead people ('Aṣā signifies a community), as to all intents and purposes the Israelites were, would receive a new and vigorous life through

Moses (this being the significance of the root word Ḥayyah), and the word, Jānn (a small, fast moving serpent) signifies that from a small and decadent community, they would make rapid progress and would become Thu'bān (a large and bulky serpent) for Pharaoh and his people, i.e. they would become the means and instrument of their destruction. It may be noted here that this miracle like other miracles shown by God's Prophets contradicted no law of nature. If a thing is proved to have actually taken place, it must be taken to be true even if it is not explicable or understandable in the light of the laws of nature as we understand them. Our knowledge of the laws of nature is, at best, very limited; so we must not deny an actual fact on the basis of our limited and imperfect knowledge. Moreover, the miracle shown by Moses did not take place in the manner in which it is popularly understood to have occurred. Miracles shown by God's Prophets are not like hand-tricks of jugglers. They are meant to serve some great moral or spiritual purpose—to bring about certainty of faith and engender feelings of piety and fear of God in the minds of those who witness them. If the rod had actually turned into a serpent, the whole performance must have looked more like the trick of a juggler than the miracle of a Prophet. In spite of what the Bible might say about this miracle, the Qur'ān lends no support to the view that the rod actually had turned into a real and living serpent. No such thing seems to have taken place. The rod only looked like a rapidly moving serpent. The miracle was a sort of vision in which God either exercised special control over the sight of onlookers in order to make them see the rod in the form of a serpent or the rod itself was made to look like a serpent; and this vision was shared by Pharaoh and his courtiers and the magicians along with Moses. The rod remained a rod, only it appeared to Moses and others as a serpent. It is a common spiritual phenomenon that in a vision when man rises above the encumbrances of the flesh and becomes temporarily transported to a spiritual sphere, he can see things taking place which are beyond his ken and are quite invisible to his physical eyes. The miracle of the rod turning into a serpent was one such spiritual experience. A similar spiritual phenomenon took place in the time of the Holy Prophet when the moon was seen not only by the Holy Prophet but by some of his followers and opponents, as if it had been rent asunder (Bukhārī, ch. on Tafsīr). Tradition tells us that Gabriel whom the Holy Prophet often saw in his visions, on one occasion was also seen by his Companions, who were sitting with him (Bukhārī, ch. on Īmān). Similarly, some angels were seen even by some of the disbelievers at the Battle of Badr (Jarīr, vi. p. 47). Another instance of this kind occurred when a Muslim army under the well-known Muslim general, Sāriyah, was fighting against the enemy in Iraq. 'Umar, the Second Caliph, while delivering his Friday sermon at Medina, in a vision saw that the Muslim army was being overwhelmed by the superior numbers of the enemy and that a disastrous defeat was imminent. Thereupon he suddenly discontinued his sermon and cried out from the pulpit, saying, 'O Sāriyah, take to the mountain, take to the mountain.' Sāriyah, who was hundreds of miles away, heard the voice of 'Umar amid the deafening noise of the battlefield, and obeyed the Caliph's instructions and the Muslim army was saved from sure destruction (Khamīs, ii. p. 370).

The miracle of Moses possessed a special significance. It may be interpreted something like this. God told Moses to throw down his rod which then appeared to him like a serpent; and when on God's bidding he took it up, it was only a piece of wood. Now the serpent, in the language of visions and dreams, symbolises an enemy, while a rod is emblematic of a community (Ta'ṭīrul-Anām). Thus, by means of this vision God let Moses know that if He cast away his people from him, they would become veritable serpents. But if he kept them under his fostering care, they would grow into a strong and well knit community of righteous and God-fearing men.

1024. The bodies of highly spiritual men are known to emit rays of various colours according to the degree or nature of their spiritual development. The rays that are emitted by the bodies of Prophets are of pure white colour. Similarly, rays that issued from the hand of Moses must have been of that colour and, when they were made visible, his hand naturally appeared white to the beholders. Men are known to have had such spiritual experiences in the times of other Prophets of God as well. God said to Moses: Thrust thy hand into thy bosom; it will come forth white without disease (28:33). This constituted, in symbolic language, a clear hint to Moses that if he kept his followers close to him and under his fostering care, they would not only become men of light themselves but would also impart light to others, otherwise they would become not only black but also morally diseased. The miracle was not, therefore, the performance of a sorcerer but a Sign full of deep spiritual significance.

1025. The word Sāḥir does not necessarily mean, a magician. It also means, a fascinator: one skilful and intelligent; one able to make a thing look other than what it is: a deceiver, deluder or beguiler, etc. (Lane). See also[128].

1029. It was not the "serpent" made out of the rod, but the rod itself which undid the magic of the magicians. The rod of Moses wielded with the spiritual force of a great Prophet and thrown at the command of God exposed the deception they had wrought on the spectators and broke to pieces the things which, by their magic, they had made them take for real serpents. The words, "it swallowed up whatever they feigned" signify that the rod quickly exposed the deception wrought by the magicians, "swallowed up" signifying "destroyed the effect of, or the impression created by."

1030. The verse seems to refer to Pharaoh's party and not to the sorcerers. The latter have been spoken of in the next verse. The word "humiliated" could not have been used about men who had evinced such regard for truth as to have accepted it without even waiting to see what Pharaoh had to say about it. The meaning is that those, (Pharaoh and his party), who a few moments before had come to the scene of combat with a proud and arrogant attitude and were confident of success, now retired humbled and crestfallen.

1031. The discomfiture of the sorcerers was so complete that it appeared that some hidden power had taken the ground from under their feet. They were made to fall down prostrate on the ground in an attitude of prayer and humility before God.

1032. The words "its inhabitants" here signify Pharaoh's own people, who, however, were not the real inhabitants of Egypt, having wrested the country from the sons of the soil.

1033. Although crucifixion meant painful death, the punishment of cutting off the hands and feet was added to make the infliction all the more exemplary and death all the more painful. Incidentally, the verse shows that even as early as in the time of Moses the punishment of death by crucifixion was in vogue.

1034. It were the chiefs themselves who had counselled Pharaoh to give respite to Moses and his brother (7:112); but now the same chiefs blame him for the time he had given to Moses and Aaron in accordance with their own advice. This is how those who meet with disgrace and humiliation become morally degraded.

1035. Pharaoh himself was worshipped as a god by his people (28:39) and he in turn worshipped other deities. Hence the chiefs accused Moses and Aaron of having denounced the worship of Pharaoh and his gods.

1036. The word Nuqattilu is in the intensified form and expresses the sense of ruthlessness and a slow and gradual process of killing.

1037. The verse does not necessarily mean that the Israelites were to be made to inherit Egypt after the destruction of Pharaoh. It only means that Pharaoh's power was to be broken and others were to take possession of his kingdom. We know that after the destruction of Pharaoh and the break-up of his kingdom, another dynasty, friendly to the Israelites, took possession of the land. "Land" mentioned in the verse refers not to Egypt but to the Holy Land which had been promised to the Israelites and which they inherited in accordance with that promise.

1038. Sanah which is the singular of Sinīn signifies a simple revolution of the earth round the sun. It is synonymous with 'Ām (and also with Ḥaul) but whereas every Sanah is an 'Ām, every 'Ām is not a Sanah. It is also said to be longer than the 'Ām which is applied to the twelve Arabian months collectively; but Sanah is also applied to twelve revolutions of the moon. According to Imām Rāghib Sanah is used as denoting a year in which there is difficulty, or drought or barrenness or dearth; and 'Ām as denoting a year which brings ampleness of the means or circumstances of life and abundance of herbage or the like. Sanah also means drought. The verse speaks of loss of life and property.

1041. Ajal means both "term" and "end of term" (2:232). The punishment was removed only for a time to grant Pharaoh an opportunity to repent and comply with the demand of Moses.

1042. The words, the eastern parts of the land and the western parts thereof, signify, according to Arabic idiom, the entire country.

Israelites were to thrive and prosper and grow into a great nation.

1044. God's communion with Moses was completed in the promised thirty nights. The prolongation of the period by ten nights did not form part of the promise but was an additional favour.

1045. The words show that Aaron's position was that of a subordinate to Moses. Moses called the Israelites "my people" and directed Aaron to act for him, i.e. officiate in his place during his absence.

1046. This verse sheds some light on one of the most important religious subjects—whether it is possible for one to see God with the physical eyes. The verse lends no support to the view that God is visible to the physical eyes (6:104). Not to say of seeing God with the physical eyes, man cannot even see angels; we can see only a manifestation of them. Similarly, only a manifestation of God can be seen and not God Himself. It is, therefore, inconceivable that a great Prophet of God like Moses, with all his knowledge of the attributes of God, should have desired an impossibility. Moses knew that he could see only a manifestation of God and not God Himself. But he had already seen a manifestation of God in "the Fire" when travelling from Midian to Egypt (28:30). What then did Moses mean by his request to see mountain; and if it remains in its place, then shalt thou see Me.' And when his Lord manifested Himself on the mountain, He broke it into pieces[1047] and Moses fell down unconscious. And when he recovered, he said, 'Holy art Thou, I turn to Thee and I am the first to believe.'

تَجَلّٰى رَبُّهٗ لِلْجَبَلِ جَعَلَهٗ دَكًّا وَّخَرَّ مُوْسٰى صَعِقًا ۚ فَلَمَّآ اَفَاقَ قَالَ سُبْحٰنَكَ تُبْتُ اِلَيْكَ وَاَنَا اَوَّلُ الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ ﴿١٤٤﴾

God, contained in the words, My Lord, show Thyself to me that I may look at Thee. The request seems to refer to the perfect manifestation of God which was to take place in the person of the Holy Prophet of Islām in some later time. Moses had already been given the promise that there would appear, from among the brethren of the Israelites a Prophet in whose mouth God would put His Word (Deut. 18:18-22). This prophecy implied a greater manifestation of God than had been vouchsafed to Moses. So he was naturally anxious to see what sort of God's Glory and Majesty the Promised Manifestation would be. He wished that something of that Glory and Majesty might be shown to him. He was told that the manifestation of that Glory was beyond his capacity to bear; it could not take place upon his heart and that God had chosen the mountain for its physical manifestation. The mountain shook violently and it appeared as if it had crumbled down and Moses, being overwhelmed with the impact of the shaking fell down unconscious. In this way he was made to realize that he had not attained to that high stage of spiritual eminence which should have made him the object of that Divine Manifestation which he had requested to witness. That unique privilege was reserved for one much greater than him—the Crown of God's creation—the Holy Prophet Muhammad. Moses's request may also be taken as having been prompted by the demand of the Elders of the Israelites, to see God with the naked eye (2:56). This very unusual experience of his made Moses realize that his request was inopportune. So he cried spontaneously, "I turn towards Thee, and I am the first to believe," which meant that he had realized that he was not endowed with the capacity to see that perfect manifestation of Divine Glory which was to take place on the heart of the Promised Prophet and that he was the first believer in the great spiritual eminence which that great Prophet was destined to attain. This belief of Moses in the Holy Prophet has also been referred to in 46:11.

1047. The mountain was not actually broken into pieces. The words have been used figuratively to express the great severity of the earthquake. See Exod. 24:18.

1048. The verse seems to be addressed to Moses by way of consolation after God had made him realize that he could not attain to that high spiritual rank to which the Great Prophet of the House of Ishmael was destined to attain. He was asked not to covet the high dignity which was reserved for "that Prophet" but to remain content with, and be grateful for, the rank that God had already bestowed upon him.

1053. God can be proved to be a Living God only if He speaks to His servants. It does not stand to reason that God should have ceased to speak now when He spoke to His chosen servants in the past. No attribute of God can be supposed to have ceased to function. The gift of Divine revelation is attainable even now as it was attained in the past. Revelation necessarily does not contain a new Law. It is also meant to give freshness of spiritual life and bring man near unto his Lord and Master.

1054. The Arabic phrase in the text means, they repented; they wrung their hands by reason of repentance. The Arabs say of a man who repents, Suqiṭa fī

Did you hasten to devise a way for yourselves without waiting for the command of your Lord?' And he put down the Tablets and [b]seized his brother by the head, dragging him towards himself.[1055] Aaron said, 'Son of my mother,[1056] the people indeed deemed me weak, and were about to kill me. Therefore make not the enemies rejoice over my misfortune and lace me not with the unjust people.'

[a]20:87. [b]20:95.

Yadihī (Lane).

1055. Moses seized Aaron by the head, not because the latter had countenanced or supported calf-worship, as he is represented to have done in the Bible (Exod. 32:2-4), but because he did not successfully prevent the people from worshipping the calf. Display of anger on the part of Moses was due, not to any religious or legal offence committed by Aaron, but to his failure to manage affairs properly in his absence. The anger was justified because a great sacrilege had been committed and the whole work of Moses's life was put in jeopardy.

1056. Aaron appealed to Moses's feelings of tenderness and brotherly affection.

قَالَ رَبِّ اغْفِرْ لِيْ وَلِاَخِيْ وَاَدْخِلْنَا فِيْ رَحْمَتِكَ ۖ وَاَنْتَ اَرْحَمُ الرّٰحِمِيْنَ ﴿١٥١﴾ ع ١٨

152. Moses said, 'My Lord, forgive me and my brother, and admit us to Thy mercy and Thou art the Most Merciful of those who show mercy.'

R. 19.

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ اتَّخَذُوا الْعِجْلَ سَيَنَالُهُمْ غَضَبٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّهِمْ وَذِلَّةٌ فِي الْحَيٰوةِ الدُّنْيَا ۭ وَكَذٰلِكَ نَجْزِي الْمُفْتَرِيْنَ ﴿١٥٢﴾

1057. The account of the Bible accusing Aaron of complicity in calf-worship is certainly misleading (Enc. Bib. vol. 1, col. 2).

1057A. The earthquake was a natural phenomenon. Moses feared that it was a Divine punishment for the sins of his people.

إِنْ هِيَ إِلَّا فِتْنَتُكَ ۖ تُضِلُّ بِهَا مَنْ تَشَاءُ وَتَهْدِي مَنْ تَشَاءُ ۖ أَنْتَ وَلِيُّنَا فَاغْفِرْ لَنَا وَارْحَمْنَا وَأَنْتَ خَيْرُ الْغَافِرِينَ ﴿١٥٦﴾

157. 'And [a]ordain for us good in this world, as well as in the next; we have turned to Thee with repentance,' Allāh replied, [b]I will inflict My punishment on whom I will; but [c]My mercy encompasses all things; so I will ordain it for those who act righteously and pay the Zakāt and those who believe in Our Signs—

158. 'Those who follow the Messenger, [d]the Prophet, the Ummī[1058] [e]whom they find

1058. Ummī means, belonging to or pertaining to the mother, i.e. as innocent as a child at the breast of its mother; one not having a revealed Scripture, particularly an Arab; one who does not know how to read or write; one belonging to Mecca which was known as Ummul-Qurā, i.e. the mother of towns. If the word Ummī be taken in the sense of "unlettered," the verse would signify that although the Holy Prophet had received no education whatever and was quite unread, yet God vouchsafed to him such knowledge as would impart light and guidance even to those who are considered to be most advanced in learning and enlightenment. Some Christian writers have pretended to doubt the fact that the Holy Prophet could not read or write. Says

Reverend Wherry in his 'Commentary of the Qur’ān'—. "Is it likely that he should have been trained in the same household with ‘Alī, who knew both how to read and write and not have received similar instruction? Could he have conducted an important mercantile business for years without some knowledge of letters? That he could read and write in later years is certain. Tradition tells us, that he said to Mu‘āwiyah, one of his secretaries: 'Draw the bā straight, divide the sīn properly', etc. and that in his last moments he called for writing material. His use of amanuenses does not militate against his knowledge of the art of writing, for such use of amanuenses was common in that age, even among the most learned." It is a poor argument that because the Prophet "had been trained in the same house with ‘Alī who knew both how to read and write," therefore he should also have learnt reading and writing. It only betrays ignorance of elementary facts of the Holy Prophet’s life on the part of the reverend gentleman. ‘Alī and the Holy Prophet could not have been trained and brought up together, there being difference of many years between their ages. The Prophet was as much as twenty nine years older than ‘Alī. Let alone the Prophet and ‘Alī being educated and trained together which the great disparity in their ages evidently obviated, it was ‘Alī who got his training in the house and under the fostering care and training of the Holy Prophet himself (Hishām). Abū Ṭālib, in whose house the Holy Prophet was brought up, was a man of very meagre means. He did not appreciate the value of learning and knowledge, nor was their possession regarded as an asset and acquisition in his time. The Holy Prophet, therefore, remained illiterate in his house. But ‘Alī was brought up in the house of the Holy Prophet himself, whose marriage with Khadījah, a wealthy lady of great repute, had placed ample means at his disposal. He also fully realized how priceless a thing good education was. So under his benign care and ennobling influence ‘Alī, judged by the standards of that time, naturally grew up to be a young man of good education.

Wherry’s second objection that if the Holy Prophet had been illiterate and did not know how to read and write, he could not have proved such a successful businessman as he actually was, is born of the mistaken concept of a good and successful Arab businessman of the Holy Prophet’s time. Wherry would not have made this objection if he had known that in Asia, even in the present twentieth century, there are highly successful businessmen who have not received even elementary education. In Mecca, in the Holy Prophet’s time, education was not much in favour. There were very few persons who could read and write, but many carried on most successful and flourishing business. Education was not at that time regarded in Arabia as the sine qua non of a good businessman. Moreover, the fact that Khadījah had given the Prophet a slave named Maisarah who knew reading and writing and who always accompanied him on his trade journeys, knocks the bottom out of Wherry’s objection.

The tradition which says that the Holy Prophet had once asked Mu‘āwiyah to write correctly the letters bā and sīn does not seem to be quite reliable. In the Abbasid period many traditions derogatory to the Umayyads were forged. This tradition seeks to show off Mu‘āwiyah, a prominent member of the distinguished House of Umayyah, as a man of very poor education who could not even write properly such simple letters as bā and sīn. Even, however, if this tradition is proved to be reliable, it does not show that the Holy Prophet was literate because he had become so used to dictating the Qur’ān that it was not impossible for him to have become familiar with the general form of letters and to have given instruction regarding an improperly written word.

The fact that the Holy Prophet sent for pen and paper in the last moments of his life also lends no support to Wherry’s assumption. It is an established fact of history that whenever any verse was revealed, the Holy Prophet used to send for pen and paper and dictate to one of his scribes what had been revealed to him. The mere fact of sending for pen and paper does not, therefore, prove that the Holy Prophet himself knew how to read and write. Nor do the words referred to by Wherry in support of his contention, viz. "read in the name of thy Lord," prove anything. The Arabic word Iqra’ (read) used in 96:2 not only means the reading of a written thing but also repeating and rehearsing what one hears from another person. Moreover, the Ḥadīth establishes the fact that when at the time of the first revelation the angel, Gabriel uttered the word Iqra’ no writing was actually placed before the Prophet to read. He was simply asked to repeat orally what the angel was reciting to him. Further, the claim of some Christian writers that the idea that the Holy Prophet could not read or write originated with a misunderstanding of his repeated claim that he was the "unlettered Prophet," is as strange as it is ill-based. It is surprising that those with whom he had lived day and night for years and who daily saw him reading and writing could not find out whether or not he was illiterate and were misled into this belief simply by his own repeated claim that he was illiterate. The contention that his (the Holy Prophet’s) use of amanuenses does not militate against his knowledge of the art of writing, for such use of amanuenses was common in that age, even among the most learned, betrays Wherry’s ignorance of Arab and Islamic history. The fact is that there were no ‘Ulamā’ or learned men among the Arabs in the time of the Holy Prophet in the sense in which this word is understood now, nor were they used to keeping amanuenses and scribes. There is no instance on record of an amanuensis having been kept by an Arab. There obtains complete unanimity of opinion among scholars that the Holy Prophet could neither read nor write before revelation began to come to him. The Qur’ān is quite explicit on the point that the Prophet was not literate at least till he claimed to be a Divine Messenger (29:49). However, he had learnt to decipher a few words towards the later part of his life.

1060. Whereas all the Divine Messengers who appeared before the Prophet of Islām were national Prophets whose teachings were meant for the peoples to whom they were sent and for the particular periods in which they were raised, the Holy Prophet was raised for the whole of mankind till the end of time. His advent was a unique event in human history. It sought to weld all the different nations and communities into one brotherhood—the Brotherhood of Man in which all the distinctions of colour, clime and creed were completely obliterated.

1061. All the followers of Moses were not corrupt. Some among them were not only good themselves but also guided others to truth and acted justly. The Qur'ān never condemns a people wholesale and indiscriminately.

Thus [c]did We try them because they were rebellious.

1063. The Qaryah referred to in this verse is said to be Aila (Elath) on the Red Sea. It was situated on the N.E. arm of the Red Sea, in the Aelanitic Gulf (which has derived its name from the place itself) and is mentioned as one of the last stages of the Israelites during their wanderings (1 Kings, 9:26 & 2 Chron. 8:17). In Solomon's time the town came into the possession of the Israelites but afterwards it was probably taken from them. Later Uzziah reconquered it, but under Ahaz it was again lost (Enc. Bib. & Jew. Enc.).

1064. Shurra'an also means, they came in shoals.

1064A. As no fish were caught on the Sabbath day, they had instinctively come to know the time when they were safe and therefore this instinctive feeling of security made them appear on the surface or approach near the coast in large numbers on the Sabbath day. This fact proved too strong a temptation for the Jews and they made arrangements to catch them on the Sabbath day and thus profaned it.

[a]7:164. [b]19:60. [c]6:33; 12:110.

1066A. It is clear from several verses of the Qur'ān that God is very slow in punishing the sinners. He grants them respite again and again. The words mean that when punishment is finally decreed to overtake a people, it is swift in coming and nothing can retard its coming.

1067. 'Araḍ means, a thing that is not permanent; the paltry goods of the present world; worldly goods or commodities; an object of desire; (Lane).

1068. Darasa means, (1) he read or studied a book; (2) he effaced, erased or obliterated something (Lane).

وَالَّذِيْنَ يُمَسِّكُوْنَ بِالْكِتٰبِ وَاَقَامُوا الصَّلٰوةَ ؕ اِنَّا لَا نُضِيْعُ اَجْرَ الْمُصْلِحِيْنَ ﴿۱۷۱﴾

172. And when We [b]shook the mountain over them as though it were a covering and they thought it was going to fall on them,[1069] We said, 'Hold fast that which We have given you and remember what is therein that you may guard against evil.

1069. The leading men of Israel were brought to the foot of the mountain (Exod.19:17). It seemed to them to tower above them like a canopy which might at any time fall upon them.

1070. The verse may refer to the evidence embedded in the very nature of man about the existence of the Supreme Being Who has created the universe and controls it (30:31). Or it may refer to the appearance of Divine Prophets who show the way to God, the expression 'offspring from the children of Adam,' signifying the people of every age to whom a Messenger of God is sent. It is, in fact, the advent of every new Messenger which prompts the Divine query, Am I not your Lord? The query signifies that when God has made provision for the physical sustenance of man as well as for his moral and spiritual development, how can he deny His Lordship. It is indeed by rejecting their Prophet that men bear witness against themselves; for in that case they cannot take shelter behind the excuse that they did not know God or His Law or the Day of Judgment.

174. Or lest you should say, [a]'It was only our fathers who associated co-partners with Allāh in the past and we were merely a generation after them. Wilt Thou then destroy us for what those, who lied, did?

وَكَذٰلِكَ نُفَصِّلُ الْاٰيٰتِ وَلَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُوْنَ ﴿١٧٥﴾

وَاتْلُ عَلَيْهِمْ نَبَاَ الَّذِيْٓ اٰتَيْنٰهُ اٰيٰتِنَا فَانْسَلَخَ مِنْهَا فَاَتْبَعَهُ الشَّيْطٰنُ فَكَانَ مِنَ الْغٰوِيْنَ ﴿١٧٦﴾

176. And relate to them the story of him to whom We gave Our Signs, but he stepped away from them; so Satan followed him up and he became one of those who go astray.[1072]

[a]7:39.

1071. The appearance of a Prophet also debars the people of his time from urging the plea mentioned in v. 173 above, for then the truth is made Manifest from falsehood and idolatry stands publicly condemned.

1072. The reference here is not to any particular individual but to all persons to whom God shows Signs through a Prophet and who reject them. Similar expressions occur elsewhere in the Qur'ān (e.g., 2:18). The verse has been particularly applied to one Bal'am bin Ba'ūra who, it is related, lived in the time of Moses and who is reported to have been a virtuous man. Pride turned his head and he ended his life in disgrace. The verse may apply also to Abū Jahl or 'Abdullāh bin Ubayy bin Salūl or for that matter to every prominent leader of disbelief.

وَلَوْ شِئْنَا لَرَفَعْنٰهُ بِهَا وَلٰكِنَّهٗٓ اَخْلَدَ

177. And if we had pleased, we would have exalted him thereby; but he inclined to the earth[1073] and followed his evil desires. His case, therefore, is like the case of a thirsty dog; if thou drive him away, he hangs out his tongue and if thou leave him, he hangs out his tongue.[1074] Such is the case of the people who disbelieve in Our Signs. So relate to them this narrative that they may reflect.

سَآءَ مَثَلًا ۨ الْقَوْمُ الَّذِيْنَ كَذَّبُوْا بِاٰيٰتِنَا
وَاَنْفُسَهُمْ كَانُوْا يَظْلِمُوْنَ ﴿۱۷۸﴾

178. Evil is the case of [a]the people who treat Our Signs as lies. And it was their own selves that they wronged.

مَنْ يَّهْدِ اللّٰهُ فَهُوَ الْمُهْتَدِيْ ۚ وَمَنْ

179. [b]He whom Allāh guides is on the right path. And they whom He leaves in error, these it is who shall be the losers.

وَلَقَدْ ذَرَاْنَا لِجَهَنَّمَ كَثِيْرًا مِّنَ الْجِنِّ
وَالْاِنْسِ ۖ لَهُمْ قُلُوْبٌ لَّا يَفْقَهُوْنَ بِهَا ۫

180. Verily, We have created many of the jinn and the men whose end shall be Hell.[1075]

[a]3:12; 7:183; 8:55. [b]17:98; 18:18.

1073. Material things, specially love of money.

1074. Yalhath, (from Lahatha which means, his breath rose on account of fatigue or weariness), signifies that whether or not such a one is asked to make sacrifices in the cause of religion, he seems to be always panting like a thirsty dog, as if the ever-increasing burden of sacrifices is leaving him completely exhausted.

1075. Lām is Lām-e-'Āqibat denoting end or result. The verse has thus nothing to do with the object of man's creation but only makes mention of the regrettable end of the life of many a man and jinn, (the latter word also meaning a special class of men, i.e. rulers or chiefs or great men). From the way in which they pass their days in sin and iniquity it seems as if they have been created for Hell.

وَلَهُمْ اَعْيُنٌ لَّا يُبْصِرُوْنَ بِهَا ۫ وَلَهُمْ اٰذَانٌ لَّا يَسْمَعُوْنَ بِهَا ؕ اُولٰٓئِكَ كَالْاَنْعَامِ بَلْ هُمْ اَضَلُّ ؕ اُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْغٰفِلُوْنَ ﴿۱۸۰﴾

[a]They have hearts wherewith they understand not and they have eyes wherewith they see not and they have ears wherewith they hear not. [b]They are like cattle; nay, they are even more astray. They are indeed altogether heedless.

181. And [c]to Allāh alone belong all perfect attributes. So call on Him by these attributes.[1076] And leave alone those who deviate from the right way with respect to His attributes.[1077] They shall be requited for what they do.

182. And [d]of those We have created, there are a people that guide men with truth and do justice therewith.

R. 23.

وَالَّذِيْنَ كَذَّبُوْا بِاٰيٰتِنَا سَنَسْتَدْرِجُهُمْ مِّنْ حَيْثُ لَا يَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿۱۸۳﴾ ۚ

183. And [e]those who reject Our Signs, We will draw them towards destruction step by step in a manner which they do not know.

وَاُمْلِيْ لَهُمْ ؕ اِنَّ كَيْدِيْ مَتِيْنٌ ﴿۱۸۴﴾

[a]2:8; 22:47; 45:24. [b]25:45. [c]17:111. [d]7:160. [e]3:12; 8:55; 68:45. [f]3:179; 68:46.

1076. The proper name of God is Allāh; all the rest strictly speaking are His attributes. While praying one should invoke such Divine attributes as are directly related to the object of one's prayer.

1077. Deviating from the right way with respect to God's attributes may signify that God being the Possessor of all the best attributes mentioned in the Qur'ān or the Ḥadīth, there is no need to devise other attributes for Him, which are inconsistent with His Majesty, Dignity and all-comprehensive Mercy.

اَوَلَمْ يَتَفَكَّرُوْا ۗ مَا بِصَاحِبِهِمْ مِّنْ جِنَّةٍ ۭ اِنْ هُوَ اِلَّا نَذِيْرٌ مُّبِيْنٌ ﴿١٨٥﴾

186. [b]And do they not look into the Kingdom of the heavens and the earth and all things[1079] that Allāh has created? And do they not see that, it may be, their own term has already drawn near? [c]Then in what thing after this will they believe?[1080]

187. [d]Whomsoever Allāh adjudges astray, there can be no guide for him. And [e]He leaves such in their transgression, wandering in distraction.

[e]2:16; 6:111. [f]33:64; 78:2; 79:43 .[g]31:35; 43:86.

1078. Ṣāḥib (companion) implies a refutation of the charge of insanity brought against the Holy Prophet, as well as a veiled rebuke to the Meccans. They are told that the Holy Prophet is their companion. He has lived and moved among them and they have known him for years; so they could easily see, and indeed in their heart of hearts they are convinced, that there is nothing of insanity about him.

1079. Do not the Meccans see the great and numerous changes that are taking place around them, which point to the approach of a new era? All signs point to the fact that idolatry is going to disappear from the country, giving place to Islām. The word "Kingdom" refers to the control which God exercises over heaven and earth.

1080. When disbelievers are rejecting the Qur'ān which is such a perfect and complete Law, what else is there for them to believe in?

1081. Mursā is noun-infinitive or noun of time or noun of place (Lane).

1082. The awarding of punishment is as painful to God as the receiving of it is to men and this is the meaning of the words, It lies heavy on the heavens and the earth; "heavens" representing God and angels, and "earth" representing human beings.

1083. Ḥafiyy means, showing much solicitude and manifesting joy or pleasure at meeting another; going to the utmost limit in asking or inquiring; or knowing in the utmost degree (Lane).

1084. One of the primary objects of marriage is that man and woman should be a source of comfort and solace to each other. Man is social by nature and it is his natural craving for a close companion which is supplied by marriage.

1085. The verse constitutes an open challenge to idol-worshippers to the effect that all animate and inanimate things that they call on besides Allāh can never answer their prayers, because the idols do not possess the power to do so. But the Living God answers the prayers of His devotees.

اَلَهُمْ اَرْجُلٌ يَّمْشُوْنَ بِهَآ اَمْ لَهُمْ اَيْدٍ

1086. This and the next verse constitute an amplification of the challenge held out to disbelievers in the previous verse. They are challenged to call upon their gods to help them in their campaign against Islām, to make use of their entire resources and to muster all their forces to attack it, leaving no stone unturned to bring it to naught and to lose no time in attacking the Holy Prophet and then see what harm their combined and determined efforts do to him. God has promised to help His Prophet and to make his cause prosper and triumph (5:68 & 58:22).

1087. A person steeped in error refuses to accept the truth, however clear and unmistakable may be the Signs shown to him to establish the untenability of his position. The disbelievers see the cause of Islām advancing by rapid strides before their very eyes, yet they pretend not to see it and refuse to acknowledge it.

1087A. 'Urf means, such actions as are in harmony with unsullied human nature.

1088. These words signify that when righteous people are incited to anger by Satan; or when some mischief is stirred up against them by wicked men, they remember Allāh.

1089. Baṣā'ir is the plural of Baṣīrah which means, perceptive faculty of the mind; understanding; firm belief of the heart; constancy or firmness in religion; a testimony; argument; a witness; an example by which one is admonished; a shield (Lane).

1090. In answer to their demand for fresh Signs disbelievers are here told to listen to the Qur'ān carefully, because it contains Signs and proofs enough and to spare.

1091. Āṣāl (which is the plural of Aṣīl means, the evening time) may refer to the four daily Prayers, viz. Ẓuhr (Afternoon Prayer), 'Aṣr (Late Afternoon Prayer), Maghrib (Sunset Prayer), and 'Ishā' (Night Prayer), while Ghuduww may refer to the Fajr (Morning Prayer).

1091A. This verse embodies the first Sajdah of the Qur'ān.

CHAPTER 8 & 9
AL-ANFĀL & AT-TAUBAH

(Revealed after Hijrah)

Title, Date of Revelation and Connection Between the Two Sūrahs

Though, as commonly known, it is only the first of these two Chapters which is known by the name Anfāl, yet truly speaking this Chapter comprises both the parts—the one which is known as Anfāl and the other which is known as Taubah. This means that Taubah or Barā'at is really not a separate Sūrah but only a part of Anfāl. This is a solitary instance in the Qur'ān where a Sūrah has been split into parts, all the other Sūrahs being compact wholes. The proof of the fact that Taubah is not a separate Sūrah but is a part of Anfāl is that unlike all other Chapters Taubah is not prefixed by Bismillāh, which under Divine direction was placed at the head of every Sūrah and formed its integral part, and because also there obtains such a striking similarity between the subject-matter of these two Chapters that they both form but one Sūrah. Both Anfāl and Taubah were revealed at Medina; Anfāl was revealed about the time of the Battle of Badr, in the first or second year after Hijrah, and Taubah or Barā'at, according to Bukhārī, was among the last portions of the Qur'ān to be revealed in the ninth year after the Hijrah.

A Collective Note on Both Sūrahs

In Anfāl the prophecy was made that God would give to Muslims a great victory, and that the property and possessions of their enemies would fall into their hands. This prophecy continued to prove for disbelievers a constant source of mockery at the cost of the Faithful, because God, out of His infallible wisdom, and in conformity with His eternal law had delayed its fulfilment along with the revelation of that portion of Chapter Anfāl which contained a mention of it. When Mecca fell and the aforesaid prophecy was fulfilled, the remaining portion of the Sūrah was revealed. It began with A declaration of complete vindication on the part of Allāh and His Messenger to the idolaters to whom you had announced a commitment that Islām would triumph in Arabia. So go about in the land for four months, and know that you cannot frustrate the plan of Allāh and that Allāh will humiliate the disbelievers. Incidentally, it may be noted here that some Commentators have taken the above Declaration to mean that a period of four months was granted to those idolaters with whom Muslims had treaty engagements and that this period was intended as a notice, after which all treaties and agreements with them were to be considered as having terminated. This interpretation of the Declaration is evidently wrong; because if it was meant as only a notice of the denunciation of the treaties there was no sense in combining the Declaration with the injunction that they should go about the land and see for themselves that God's purpose had prevailed. He who is granted a limited respite naturally makes hasty preparations to depart for a place of safety and does not go about in the land sightseeing. Again, if the verse be understood to give notice of termination of existing treaties and to grant a limited respite to those idolatrous tribes who had treaties of alliance with Muslims, how would the very next verse be explained which says that such people as have entered into treaties with Muslims are not to be expelled till the termination of their treaties. It is thus clear that the Quranic words Alladhīna 'Āhattum used in the first verse of Chapter Taubah allude to no political treaty or agreement but only to such declarations as Muslims and disbelievers had made against each other about the ultimate triumph of their respective causes. On the side of Islām it was declared in Chapter Anfāl that the property and possessions of disbelievers would fall into the hands of Muslims, and the disbelievers, on their side, had declared that Islām would be exterminated and they would capture the belongings of the Muslims. It is these contradictory declarations that have been metaphorically termed as 'Ahd or agreement in the verse referred to above, and the idolaters are told to go about in the country and see for themselves whether or not the declaration which was made in Chapter Anfāl about their eventual destruction had proved true. So, truly speaking, Sūrah Barā'at constitutes only a declaration of the fulfilment of the great prophecy made in Sūrah Anfāl and is thus not a separate Sūrah. In short, there exists a very real connection between these two Chapters which really constitute one Chapter, for, as stated above, Sūrah Anfāl was revealed at the time of the Battle of Badr and in it a clear prophecy was made about the ultimate destruction of disbelievers. Then after the last encounter with the idolaters of Mecca, Sūrah Barā'at was revealed to announce the fulfilment of that prophecy and the ushering in of a new era.

Subject-Matter of the Sūrahs

Chapter Anfāl opens with a description of the Battle of Badr and at the outset Muslims are told that they will win a great victory over the disbelievers whose property and possessions will fall into their hands. These wars are the Signs of God and should not be made the means of seeking worldly gains. Next, they are told that they should fight courageously in the cause of God and should not be proud of their strength or organization, neither should they be afraid of the numbers and military prowess of their enemies. Further, obedience to authority is emphasized and it is stated that obedience to God's commands will open for the Muslims the avenues to success and prosperity and will protect them from the machinations and intrigues of their enemies, even as God had protected the Holy Prophet against the secret plots of the Meccans. The Sūrah proceeds to say that the enemy is proud of his numbers and military prowess and believes himself to be in the right, and even invokes the wrath of God upon the liar. Such a determined enemy would not easily admit defeat. The Sūrah exposes their false pretensions. It further says that the discrepancy between the words and deeds of disbelievers shows that their faith is a mere slave of their intellect and has no firm roots in their hearts. The Muslims are buoyed up with the Divine promise that the war in which they are engaged will end in a victory for them and success also will continue to attend their endeavours in future engagements. To achieve this, obedience to authority and endurance of hardships and unity of action are enjoined upon them.

The Sūrah further deals with the sanctity of treaty obligations and Muslims are told that disbelievers will repeatedly violate their agreements but this should not incite them to a breach of their own obligations. They should disabuse their minds of the misconception that their cause would suffer in any way if they did not avenge a breach of agreements on the disbelievers' part by a corresponding violation of an obligation by themselves. On the contrary, they should continue scrupulously to observe treaties; but agreements they have made should cause no mitigation of suitable preparations for war on their part. They are, however, enjoined that if during hostilities disbelievers sue for peace, such an offer should not be rejected, because if disbelievers violate terms of peace and restart hostilities, Muslims will not suffer on account of this fresh breach of trust by them. This injunction implied a reference to the treaty of Ḥudaibiyah when a breach of treaty obligations by the disbelievers led to the Fall of Mecca. Muslims are further told that captives will fall into their hands and they should treat them with kindness.

The promise of victory given to Muslims in Anfāl is declared to have been fulfilled in the opening verses of Barā'at where it is stated that Muslims have become masters of the whole of Arabia, so the idolaters should go about in the land and see for themselves whether or not the whole country has come under Muslim domination. In verses that follow disbelievers are reprimanded for their repeated breach of solemn treaties and covenants and Muslims are warned not to enter into any fresh agreement with them and should not fear that the severance of ties with them would, in any way, adversely affect the prosperity of Mecca, because God Himself would provide for them. Next, they are told that they should not think that after they have conquered Arabia war would come to an end and they would have peace. On account of the intrigues and secret plots of Christians a new series of wars would start, and because they are idolatrous people they would not bear to see perfect Unity of God established in the earth. Moreover, they have become morally depraved while Islām seeks to establish true equality and freedom. How could then a Christian government view with equanimity the establishment by its side of another government based on equality and freedom, whose proximity would incline its subjects to rebellion? So having proper regard for the things which God has declared sacred, Muslims are told to make suitable preparations for the impending war with them.

As there was an interval between the revelation of the first 37 verses of the Sūrah Barā'at and those that follow, mention has been made in the latter verses about the fulfilment of the prophecy made in the former. In this connection a brief description is given of the expedition to Tabūk and of the circumstances in which the prophecy referred to above was fulfilled. The Hypocrites and those weak of faith who were seized with the fear of the powerful Kingdom of the Kaiser are reprimanded. Their moral weakness is exposed and believers are bidden not to accept their help, for even without their help God will grant victory to them over the Kaiser (this subject has been dealt with in fuller detail in Chapters Rūm and Fatḥ). In this connection, mention is made of the intrigues of the Hypocrites to injure the cause of Islām. Towards the close of Sūrah Taubah it is emphasized that in spite of the intrigues and plots of the Hypocrites and the great power and material resources of disbelievers the Holy Prophet will succeed in his mission through the help of God, "the Lord of the Mighty Throne."

1092. Anfāl are such spoils and gains as come as a Divine gift without the Muslims having laboured for them (Mufradāt). The verse does not relate to the division of spoils for which see 8:42. It relates only to the attainment of gains and spoils which fell into the hands of Muslims after the victory at Badr.

كَمَآ اَخۡرَجَكَ رَبُّكَ مِنۡۢ بَيۡتِكَ بِالۡحَقِّ ۖ وَاِنَّ فَرِيۡقًا مِّنَ الۡمُؤۡمِنِيۡنَ لَكٰرِهُوۡنَ ۙ﴿۶﴾

7. They[1096] (the disbelievers) dispute with thee concerning

1093. The particle kamā ordinarily meaning "just as" or "like unto" is also sometimes used in the sense of "as" or "since" or "because" (Muḥīṭ). If, the particle is taken in its ordinary sense of "just as," then the verse could be rendered as: "God grants victories and spoils to His servants and bestows on them honourable provision just as He did when He brought thee forth from thy house, etc."

1094. Bil Ḥaqqi means, for a righteous purpose. The verse relates to the Battle of Badr.

1095. When Muslims marched out from Medina, as they did not know that they would have to fight a well-equipped Meccan army, they did not come fully prepared for fighting. So when on the way they learnt that they would have to fight the Meccan army they anxiously asked the Holy Prophet why he had not informed them of the real state of affairs so that they should have come fully prepared to meet the enemy. Thus their anxiety was not for their own sake but for the safety of the Holy Prophet. In their unpreparedness they were averse to exposing him to danger. This is clear from the verse "brought thee forth" and not "brought you forth," which signifies that God, in pursuance of Whose command the Holy Prophet had not informed the believers of the encounter with the Meccan army, would not leave him unprotected. The Muslims were not afraid of fighting. They were averse to it because they did not like to shed human blood and because also the person of the Holy Prophet had become exposed to danger.

1096. The verse does not refer to Muslims as wrongly understood by some Commentators, but to disbelievers. There is absolutely no evidence in history to show that the Holy Prophet's Companions ever disputed with him with regard to fighting the enemy. On the contrary, it is related that when before the Battle of Badr he consulted them, they all expressed their complete readiness and even eagerness to accompany him and fight the enemy wherever he might take them (Hishām). Even the disbelievers who came out to fight the Muslims admitted that the latter looked like so many "seekers after death" on the field of battle (Ṭabarī). The verse only signifies that as the enemies of Islām abhorred the truth as one abhors death, so, as a result of this, they were going to be punished with death.

يُسَاقُوْنَ اِلَى الْمَوْتِ وَهُمْ يَنْظُرُوْنَ ۝٦

8. And remember when Allāh [a]promised you one of the two parties[1097] that it should be yours, and you wished that the one unarmed[1098] should be yours, but Allāh desired to establish the Truth by His words and to cut off the root of the disbelievers,

[a]8:43. [b]10:83. [c]3:124. [d]3:127.

1097. The "two parties" refer to (1) the well-equipped Meccan army that had come fully prepared to fight the Muslims, and (2) the Meccan caravan which was returning from the north and proceeding to Mecca and was lightly armed.

1098. The Muslims naturally wanted to meet the caravan which was lightly armed but God's design was to bring about an encounter with the fully equipped Meccan army. His object in doing so was to establish the Truth by His words and to cut off the root of the disbelievers. See also 3:14 and 8:42-45.

The enemy had taken possession of water and the Muslims naturally feared that lack of it might prove a source of great hardship for them. The word may also signify the friends and associates of Satan.

1105. The Muslims must fight to the bitter end. They must win or die; there is no third course open to them.

1106. The verse defines and describes the circumstances in which an apparent retreat or withdrawal of a Muslim force against the enemy is permitted: (a) As war strategy or battle manoeuvre when a fighting force shifts its position to beguile the enemy or to occupy a better position; (b) when a part of the army decides to fall back to join the main body or another Muslim force before giving battle to the enemy.

1107. The victory at Badr really was not due to any skill or prowess on the part of the Muslims. They were too few, too weak and too ill-equipped to win a victory against a numerically vastly superior and much better equipped and trained army. The throwing of a handful of pebbles and sand by the Holy Prophet bears a remarkable resemblance to the striking of the waters of the sea by Moses with the rod. Just as in the latter case the act of Moses was, as it were, a signal for the wind to blow and the tide to return which led to the drowning of Pharaoh and his hosts in the sea, so was the throwing of a handful of pebbles by the Holy Prophet a signal for a strong wind to blow, which led to the destruction of Abū Jahl (to whom the Holy Prophet had referred as the Pharaoh of his people) and his host in the desert. In both cases the operation of the forces of nature coincided with the acts of the two Prophets under special Divine decree.

in the form of victory. They are told that Divine judgment has indeed come in the form they had demanded.

1109. The expression "makes them hear" means that if in their present condition God should force them to accept the truth, they would in their heart of hearts remain unconverted and would never become true Muslims.

1109A. The pronoun "he" refers to the Messenger, for it is the Messenger who actually calls. Calling by God is also through His Messenger. Or, "he" may be taken to refer to both Allāh and the Messenger separately, i.e. when Allāh calls you or when the Messenger calls you.

1110. The giving of life to the dead when ascribed to a Prophet of God should be taken in its metaphorical or spiritual sense.

1110A. The words "Allāh comes in between a man and his heart" signify that man (or his ego) has no control over his heart, so he cannot make it obey his dictates. The words may also mean that one should hasten to listen and respond to Divine Call because if one delays doing so, unforeseen circumstances may intervene to make one's heart hard or rusty and then one may refuse to listen to it.

1111. It is not enough to make ourselves good. We are not safe unless we also reform our environment. A house surrounded by a raging fire is likely to fall a victim to it any moment.

1112. Muslims are here told that as God had saved them when they were weak in the land and were surrounded by strong and mischievous people, so they should strive to protect the weak when they are in power. The verse implies a prophecy that Muslims will soon attain political power.

1113. The verse speaks of man's two loyalties—his loyalty to God (and his Messenger) which is absolute and eternal because God is our Creator and Nourisher; and his loyalty to his fellow-beings which springs from the obligations he owes to them.

1114. Furqān means, (1) that which distinguishes between right and wrong; (2) proof or evidence or argument; (3) aid or victory, and (4) dawn (Lane).

1115. Reference in the verse is to the secret conference which was held in Dārun-Nadwah (House of Consultation) in Mecca. Seeing that all their efforts to arrest the progress of the new Faith had failed and that most of those Muslims who could afford to leave Mecca had emigrated to Medina and were out of harm's way, the Elders of the town assembled in Dārun-Nadwah to devise plans to make a last attempt to finish Islām. After deep deliberation they hit upon a plan that a number of young men from various Quraish tribes should, in a joint attack, swoop down upon the Holy Prophet and kill him. The Holy Prophet left the house unnoticed at dead of night, when the watchers were overpowered by sleep, and took refuge in Cave Thaur along with Abū Bakr, his ever faithful Companion, and finally reached Medina in safety.

1116. The disbelievers boasted that they could produce a composition like that of the Qur'ān. It was, however, an empty boast, which they dared not translate into fact. The challenge that they would never be able to produce 1117. It was almost in these words that Abū Jahl prayed in the battlefield of Badr (Bukhārī, ch. on Tafsīr). The prayer was literally fulfilled. Abū Jahl along with many other leaders of the Quraish was killed and their bodies were thrown into a pit.

1118. The Meccans were punished after the Holy Prophet left Mecca. The Divine Messengers serve as a kind of shield against heavenly visitations.

1121. The words mean, "If they refuse to accept the offer of peace made to them and start hostilities again."

1122. The verse relates to the division of the spoils (see also 8:2), one-fifth of which is to be placed at the disposal of the Imām or the Khalīfah, as the case may be, to be divided as he deems fit among the five parties mentioned. The Holy Prophet's share was spent for the benefit of the poor Muslims, he himself having lived a life of austere simplicity. According to Imām Mālik, the division need not necessarily be made into equal portions, but is to be left to the discretion of the Imām, who is to divide it as circumstances and need of the hour demand. Such was also the practice of the Holy Prophet and his four Rightly-Guided Successors. The remaining four-fifths were divided among the soldiers who were paid no salaries and generally had even to incur the expenses of wars themselves. This was an exigency measure adopted to meet the conditions then obtaining, as there was then no regular army and no State treasury. "The kindred" included all the descendants of Hāshim and ʻAbdul-Muṭṭalib who could not benefit from the Zakāt.

1123. The Day of Badr.

1124. The verse gives a graphic picture of the position of the three parties at Badr. The Muslims were on the side nearer to Medina, the Meccan army was in a place farther away from the town and the Meccan caravan which was coming from Syria was towards the sea-coast. The verse says that if it had been left to the Muslims to appoint the time of the encounter, they would certainly have differed with regard to it and would have preferred to postpone the date of the first clash, for at that time they did not feel strong enough to meet their much more powerful and far better equipped enemy in the field of battle. But God's object being to show a powerful Sign, He brought about the encounter.

1125. God had decreed that the Meccans should suffer defeat.

1126. On his way to Badr the Holy Prophet in a vision saw the Meccan army to be less in number than they actually were (Jarīr, x.9). This meant that in spite of their superior numbers and equipment they would be defeated.

1127. Whereas the preceding verse referred to the appearance of the enemy in a vision to the Holy Prophet, the present verse refers to its actual disposition on the battlefield. The enemy had kept one-third of their number hidden behind the mounds so that, when both parties came face to face, the Muslims saw only two-thirds of their actual number. This naturally gave heart to them. The enemy on their part did so, as they thought, lest the Muslims being overawed might flee from battlefield and refuse to give battle. Both these impressions helped to encourage either party to come to grips with their opponents with the result that "the thing decreed" was brought about, i.e. the Meccans suffered an ignominious and crushing defeat.

وَاَطِيْعُوا اللّٰهَ وَرَسُوْلَهٗ وَلَا تَنَازَعُوْا فَتَفْشَلُوْا وَتَذْهَبَ رِيْحُكُمْ وَاصْبِرُوْا ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ مَعَ الصّٰبِرِيْنَ ﴿۴۷﴾

1128. Rīḥ among other things means, predominance, strength, victory (Lane).

1129. The person referred to in the verse is reported to be Surāqah bin Mālik bin Ju'sham who incited the Meccans against the Muslims, but who afterwards embraced Islām. The Meccan army was still at Mecca when some of the Quraishite leaders gave expression to the fear that Banū Bakr, a branch of Banū Kanānah, who were hostile to the Quraish, might surprise Mecca during their absence or attack the Meccan army from the rear. Their fears were allayed by Surāqah, a chief of Banū Kanānah, who assured them that his tribesmen would do them no harm (Jarīr, x.13).

1130. When Surāqah saw the grim determination of the Muslims, fear took hold of him; for on seeing them he was convinced that they would win or die.

1135. The believers are enjoined never to take up arms without a valid cause. But once they do, they should fight so valiantly and deal such deadly blows as should strike terror in the hearts of their enemies. A feebly pursued and lingering war is never a wise policy. If there is to be fighting it should be swift and deadly.

1136. If a people with whom Muslims have entered into a covenant dishonour it, they should be plainly told that the covenant has come to an end and Muslims, if attacked, would fight back with all the force at their command. But under no circumstances are Muslims permitted to make a surprise attack, without giving a prior notice. 'Alā Sawā'in means, on terms of equality, i.e. in such a manner that each party should know that it is free of its obligations.

1137. Quwwah signifies all the forces at the command of Muslims, including all sorts of implements of war, etc.

1139. The verse tells Muslims that efficient preparation is the best means of preventing war and enjoins them that they should not only keep sufficient force inside the country but should also station adequate troops on the frontiers and should conduct themselves with such wisdom, faith and energy that the enemy in areas far away from the site of fighting should be so impressed as to give up all idea of fighting them. The verse also points to the necessity of spending freely in war. It seems to contain also a warning and a prophecy for believers. The prophecy is that the pagan Arabs are not their only enemies. There are other people who would attack them in the near future. The prophecy referred to the Byzantine and the Persian Empires with whom Muslims had to fight soon after the death of the Holy Prophet.

1140. The verse, besides embodying an important principle about making of peace-treaties, throws interesting light on the character of the wars undertaken by Islām. Muslims did not resort to war to force men to embrace Islām but to establish and maintain peace. If any people after having made war upon Muslims sued for peace the latter were enjoined not to reject the offer, even if the enemy might be suing for peace only to deceive them and gain time. This shows to what lengths Islām goes to establish peace among nations.

1141. The verse seems to give 20 as the minimum number that makes a fighting party.

1143. The verse should not be understood to abrogate the preceding one. The two verses refer to two different states of the Muslim Community. In the beginning they were weak, ill-equipped and ill-trained in the art of war. In that state of weakness they could successfully fight against only their double number. But as with the passage of time their all-round condition, fighting experience and military resources had very much improved they could defeat an enemy ten times their number. In the battles of Badr, Uḥud and of the Trench, the disparity between the number of forces of both sides progressively increased, yet the Muslims quite successfully held their own, till at the Battle of Yarmūk, mere 60,000 Muslims defeated an army of more than a million strong.

1144. The verse lays down the general rule that captives should not be taken unless there is regular fighting and the enemy is completely overpowered. It cuts at the root of slavery. Only those, who take part in war in order to destroy Islām and are defeated, can be made prisoner. See also 2739.

1145. The words refer to the Divine promise of help (8:8-10).

1145A. Ransoming of captives was already in vogue. What is emphasised here is that prisoners could only be taken in regular fighting in the course of war.

1146. 'Abbās, the Prophet's uncle was taken prisoner at Badr. When subsequently he embraced Islām and came over to the Holy Prophet, he requested, on the authority of the verse under comment, that as God had promised to give the prisoners more than was taken from them as ransom, the promise may be fulfilled in his case. The Holy Prophet granted his request (Jarīr, x. 31).

75. And [a]those Who believed and left their homes and strove for the cause of Allāh, and those who gave them shelter and help—these indeed are true believers. For them is forgiveness and an honourable provision.

1147. The verse lays down the principle that those Muslims who live in the same country and under the same administration, whether as immigrants or as original citizens, are bound to help one another in the hour of each other's need. But those Muslims who do not emigrate to a Muslim country have no claim on the help of the former in worldly matters. But if they are persecuted for the sake of their religion, then they must be helped. If, however, they are living under a non-Muslim government, with whom Muslims have entered into a treaty of peace, then no help should be rendered them even in matters of religion; and in this case the only way open to Muslims is to emigrate from the non-Muslim country.

1148. If this principle is not observed by Muslims, there will be oppression, tyranny and disturbance in the land.

وَالَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا مِنْۢ بَعْدُ وَهَاجَرُوْا
وَجٰهَدُوْا مَعَكُمْ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ مِنْكُمْ ؕ

76. And those who believe after this and leave their homes and strive for the cause of Allāh along with you—these are of you; and [a]as to blood relations,[1149] they are nearer one to another in the Book of Allāh. Surely, Allāh knows all things well.

[a]33:7.

1149. As all Muslims are declared to be brothers, one to another, in verse 73 and the Holy Prophet had established at Medina a sort of brotherhood between the Refugees and the Helpers, the misunderstanding might have arisen that they could inherit one another's property; so it is enjoined here that blood relations alone are entitled to inheritance and other Muslims are only brothers in Faith and not heirs.

2. So go about in the land for four months, and [a]know that you cannot frustrate the plan of Allāh[1152] and that Allāh

[a]6:135; 11:21.

1150. Barā'ah signifies a declaration of vindication; exemption, absolution from a fault or responsibility; exemption or absolution from a demand, etc. (Tāj).

1151. 'Āhada is here used not in the sense of entering into a treaty or a compact but making a commitment or a solemn promise by which one binds oneself (Lisān). The verse makes a solemn declaration that Islām and the Holy Prophet have been completely vindicated by the Fall of Mecca. While the Prophet was being driven from Mecca as a friendless fugitive with a price on his head, it was then declared in unmistakable terms that he would come back to it in triumph and glory (28:86). That prophecy was fulfilled with the Fall of Mecca and the establishment of the rule of Islām throughout Arabia. Thus the Holy Prophet stood fully vindicated and absolved from the demand of the Meccans that in fulfilment of his repeated declaration Mecca should have fallen into his hands. See also Introduction to Sūrah Anfāl.

1152. With the Fall of Mecca and the defeat of Hawāzin in the Battle of Ḥunain, the rule and authority of Islām had been established throughout the Ḥijāz. Certain tribes had made treaties with the Muslims and had laid down arms. These treaties were to be fully observed. But there were other tribes who had not made formal submission, had not laid down their arms and also had not made any treaty with the Muslims, ensuring the maintenance of peace and the observance of law and order. They had commenced hostilities against the Muslims, and though they had in effect been vanquished, they had not yet acknowledged defeat nor had agreed to live in peace with the Muslims. These tribes were given a four-month period of respite during which operations against them would remain suspended. They could go about freely in the land and satisfy themselves that further resistance was useless. They could then make their submission and make treaties. It is to these tribes that this verse refers.

will humiliate the disbelievers.

وَاَذَانٌ مِّنَ اللّٰهِ وَرَسُوْلِهٖٓ اِلَى النَّاسِ يَوْمَ الْحَجِّ الْاَكْبَرِ اَنَّ اللّٰهَ بَرِيْٓءٌ مِّنَ الْمُشْرِكِيْنَ ۙ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ ؕ فَاِنْ تُبْتُمْ فَهُوَ خَيْرٌ لَّكُمْ ۚ وَاِنْ تَوَلَّيْتُمْ فَاعْلَمُوْٓا اَنَّكُمْ

3. And this is a proclamation[1153] from Allāh and His Messenger to the people on the day of the Greater Pilgrimage,[1153A] that Allāh is clear[1154] of the idolaters, and so is His Messenger. So if you repent, 1153. Adhān means, notification, proclamation or call (Lane).

1153A. Greater Pilgrimage was so called because it was the first pilgrimage performed under the control of the Muslims.

1154. Whereas in the preceding verse Barā'ah signifies a declaration of vindication that the promises about the complete triumph of Islām had been fulfilled, in the present verse the word signifies "being clear of a person or a thing," i.e. having nothing to do with him or it (Lane). The declaration, contained in this verse and the one that follows is different from that embodied in vv. 9:1, 2; for whereas vv. 9:1, 2 relate to vindication that the promises made to the idolaters by the Holy Prophet had been fulfilled, the present verse pertains to the severance of all connections with them. This severance of relations should not be taken to mean that the verse declares that Muslims were free from all treaty obligations; for, as the following verse makes it quite clear, treaties are to be respected in all cases and must not be violated.

On his return from Tabūk in the ninth year of the Hijrah, the Holy Prophet sent 'Alī to Mecca, who, on the occasion of the Greater Pilgrimage, made, as his representative, a proclamation containing the announcement: (1) "No idolater shall approach the House of God after this year. (2) Treaties and engagements made by the Holy Prophet with idolatrous tribes who had not made their submission shall stand and shall be faithfully respected till the end of their terms. But henceforth no idolater could stay in the Ḥijāz except those with whom he had entered into a treaty or who had sought protection from him. The order was amply justified, not only by the persistently treacherous conduct of the idolatrous tribes and by repudiation on their part of solemn agreements, resorted to on a large scale when the Holy Prophet was absent from Medina on the Tabūk expedition (8:57), but also by other political and cultural considerations which demanded its promulgation. The Ḥijāz had now become the religious as well as the political centre of Islām, and its interests demanded that it should be purged of all foreign and harmful elements likely to endanger its integrity and prove dangerous to the nascent Muslim Community.

5. And when the forbidden months[1155A] have passed, slay the idolaters[1156] wherever you

[a]See 9:2. [b]4:139. [c]9:7.

1155. These tribes were Banū Khuzā'ah, Banū Mudlij, Banū Bakr, Banū Ḍamrah and some of the Banū Sulaim tribes. The verse incidentally throws interesting light on the sanctity that Islām attaches to treaties and agreements.

1155A. "The forbidden months" are the four months of Dhul-Qa'dah, Dhul-Ḥijjah, Muḥarram and Rajab, the first three being the months of the Greater Pilgrimage, while in the last the Arabs generally performed the Lesser Pilgrimage or 'Umrah (2:195 & 2:218). The term Ashhurul-Ḥurum does not signify "sacred months" but "forbidden months" and refers to the four months mentioned in 9:2 above. In these months the above-mentioned idolaters were granted protection to travel through the land and see for themselves whether Islām had not triumphed and whether the word of God had not been fulfilled. At the end of this period, during which all hostilities were to remain suspended, war was to be resumed against such avowed enemies of Islām as had themselves started hostilities and had repeatedly broken their plighted word. The reason for this ultimatum is given in vv. 9:8-13. As for those idolaters who had not been guilty of faithlessness and treachery, they were to be protected (9:4, 7).

1156. Those idolaters who had fought with the Muslims and had not yet asked for a fresh treaty with them.

7. How can there be a treaty for these idolaters with Allāh

[a]7:157; 9:11.

1157. Even those enemies of Islām at whose hands Muslims had suffered very grievous losses were to be forgiven if they repented and accepted Islām of their own free will. In fact, there was a large number of men among the idolaters who, in their heart of hearts, had been convinced of the truth of Islām, but who, either through pride or for fear of persecution or other considerations, had refrained from making open confession of faith. This verse assured such people that if anyone of them declared his faith in Islām even during the war, his confession would not be taken as hypocritical or as having been made to save his skin.

1158. The verse clearly establishes the fact that war with idolaters was not undertaken in order to force them to embrace Islām, because, according to it, even when a state of war existed, idolaters were to be permitted to come to the Muslims' camp or Headquarters if they desired to investigate the truth. Then, after the truth had been preached to them and they had been acquainted with the teachings of Islām, they were to be safely conducted to their place of security, if they did not feel inclined to embrace the new Faith. In the face of such clear teachings, it is the height of injustice to accuse Islām of intolerance or of using or conniving at force; for its propagation.

1159. The verse shows that war was permissible only against such non-Muslims as had repeatedly violated most solemn covenants and had attacked Muslims treacherously. As for the rest, Muslims had been bidden to observe their engagements with them strictly and faithfully. Like 9:4, this verse describes the observance of covenants and treaties as an act of piety and righteousness which is pleasing to God. The Qur'ān repeatedly and most emphatically exhorts Muslims to be faithful to their treaties.

1160. Ill means, relationship or nearness with respect to kindred; good origin; a compact or covenant; a promise or an assurance of safety or security (Lane & Mufradāt).

1161. Dhimmah means, a compact; covenant; treaty; engagement, obligation or responsibility; a right or due for the neglect of which one is to be blamed (Lane). The expression Ahludh-Dhimmah is used for those non-Muslim people with whom the Muslim State has made a compact and who pay poll tax to the State, in return for which the State is responsible for their security and freedom (Lane). The verse makes it further clear that the command to wage war applies only to such disbelievers as had not only been the first to open hostilities against Islām but were also perfidious and treacherous, paying no respect either to ties of relationship or to compacts and covenants.

لَا يَرْقُبُوْنَ فِيْ مُؤْمِنٍ اِلًّا وَّ لَا ذِمَّةً ؕ وَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْمُعْتَدُوْنَ ۝١٠

1162. This and the preceding two verses give the reasons why Muslims were commanded to wage war against such idolaters (9:5). The reasons are: (1) They were treacherous and perfidious; they professed to be friendly to Muslims, but as soon as they found an opportunity to injure them, they broke their plighted word and this in spite of the fact that Muslims had trusted them. (2) They even disregarded the ties of relationship and slew their own kinsmen merely because the latter had embraced Islām (9:8). (3) Their object in making war was to prevent men from embracing Islām (9:9). (4) They were the first to attack Muslims (9:13).

1163. The words "attack your religion" do not refer to mere verbal taunts and reproaches but to actual attacks meant to injure the vital interests of Islām; the word Ṭa'ana literally meaning "to pierce with a spear."

1164. The words, these leaders of disbelief are here applied not to a few leading individuals but to the whole people to whom this commandment to fight referred. They are called "leaders" because they were among the first to clash with Muslims and their example encouraged others; and because also their hostility towards Islām was so inveterate and implacable that they served, as it were, as evil models in this respect.

1167. The verse hints that the trials of Muslims were not yet over. They had still to face more grievous dangers.

1168. The verse relates to idolatrous pilgrims and serves as an introduction to the announcement contained in 9:28 below. No idolater was, henceforth, to be allowed to approach the Ka'bah, as announced by 'Alī to the pilgrims assembled at Mecca on the occasion of the Greater Pilgrimage in the year 9 A.H. The verse gives the reason for that prohibition. The Ka'bah being the Temple dedicated to the worship of the One God, idolaters had nothing to do with it. They were declared enemies of God's Unity and stood condemned by their own confession.

1169. The words "Mosques of Allāh" refer to the Sacred Mosque in v. 19 because the Sacred Mosque or the Ka'bah being the Central Mosque of Islām stands for all the mosques in the world.

1170. The outward and physical service of the Ka‘bah, though in itself a meritorious act, is as nothing compared with the spiritual service thereof, which only a true Muslim can perform. The verse implies that Islām attaches greater importance to the spirit underlying its ordinances than to their outward form. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that the life of a believer possesses much greater sanctity than the Ka‘bah (Mājah).

1171. The verse refers to that class of disbelievers who were actively hostile to Islām and strove hard to exterminate it.

1173. After the Fall of Mecca, Hawāzin and Thaqīf tribes joined forces and advanced to attack the Muslims. The Holy Prophet met them at Ḥunain, about 15 miles to the south-west of Mecca. He was accompanied by 12,000 men, among whom were 2,000 new converts who had joined the Muslim army at Mecca. Contrary to the practice of the Holy Prophet these men hastened to attack the enemy, but were quickly repulsed and fled from the battlefield in great confusion, throwing into disorder the advancing Muslim force which was passing through a narrow gorge. In the stampede that followed the Holy Prophet was left on the battlefield with only 100 men around him. Arrows from the archers of the enemy fell thick and fast all round him. It was a moment of extreme danger but the Holy Prophet, urging on his mule towards the enemy, advanced undaunted, shouting at the top of his voice: "I am indeed the Prophet of God. This is no lie. I am the son of ‘Abdul-Muṭṭalib." ‘Abbās, uncle of the Holy Prophet, who possessed a stentorian voice, called out to the fleeing Muslims to stop and return to their Master who wanted them. This clarion call thrilled the Muslims like the trumpet call of the Day of Judgment, and rallying with great effort they rushed back to their beloved Master and attacked the enemy with a vehemence that put terror into the heart of the enemy and made him flee in utter confusion. The scales were turned and the day ended in a signal victory for the Muslims, and no less than 6,000 disbelievers were taken prisoner (Ṭabarī & Hishām).

1174. Mecca was a great commercial centre and the pilgrimage season was an occasion of great commercial activity and a source of great income for the Meccans. The prohibition might have given rise to apprehension that it might adversely affect their income.

1175. The expression 'An Yadin means: (1) Willingly and in acknowledgment of the superior power of Muslims. (2) In ready money and not in the form of deferred payment. (3) Considering it as a favour from Muslims; the particle 'an meaning, on account of, and Yad denoting power and favour (Lane). The verse refers to those People of the Book who lived in Arabia. Like the idolaters they too had been actively hostile to Islām and had planned and plotted to exterminate it. Muslims were, therefore, ordered to fight them unless they agreed to live as loyal and peaceful subjects. The Jizyah was a tax which these non-Muslims had to pay as free subjects of the Muslim State in return for the protection they enjoyed under it. It may be noted that as against Jizyah which was imposed on non-Muslims, a much heavier tax—Zakāt was levied on the Muslims, and in addition to Zakāt they had to perform military service from which non-Muslims were exempt. Thus the latter in a way fared better, for they had to pay a lighter tax and were also free from military duty. The word Ṣāghirūn expresses their subordinate political status; otherwise they enjoyed all social rights equally with Muslims. The idolaters of Arabia and Jews and Christians who lived in their neighbourhood were the principal adversaries of Islām. After having dealt with the believers' relations with the idolaters, the Sūrah with this verse proceeds to deal with their relations with the People of the Book, especially with their religious beliefs and doctrines.

Judaism. He was especially honoured among the Prophets of Israel. The Jews of Medina and a Jewish sect in Ḥaḍramaut believed him to be the son of God. The Rabbis associate his name with several important institutions. Renan has remarked in the preface to his History of the People of Israel that the definite constitution of Judaism may be dated only from the time of Ezra. In Rabbinical literature he was considered worthy of being the vehicle of the Law, had it not been already given through Moses. He worked in collaboration with Nehemiah and died at the age of 120 in Babylonia (Jew. Enc. & Enc. Bib.).

1177. Aḥbār are Jewish savants and Ruhbān Christian monks.

1178. Christians living in Arabia had incited their powerful co-religionists in Syria, and, by their help, had sought to extinguish the light of Islām that God had kindled in Arabia. The Jews also had made a similar attempt by inciting the Persians against the Holy Prophet.

1179. Commentators of the Qur'ān agree that, as stated in a saying of the Holy Prophet, the ultimate triumph of Islām will take place in the time of the Promised Messiah (Jarīr) when all the various religions will have appeared and will make their utmost endeavours to propagate their own teachings. The excellence of the ideals and principles of Islām have already begun to be increasingly recognised, and the day is not far off when Islām will triumph over all other Faiths and their followers will enter its fold in large numbers.

1180. The expression seems to be figurative. When a rich man, out of miserliness or pride, refuses to help a needy person, his forehead becomes contracted into a frown. Then he turns aside and finally disdainfully shows his back to the man seeking his help. Quite appropriately, it is mentioned that the foreheads, the sides and the backs will be branded.

36. The number of months with Allāh is twelve months[1181] by Allāh's ordinance since the day when He created the heavens and the earth. Of these four are sacred.[1182] That is the right religion. So wrong not yourselves therein. And fight the idolaters all together as they fight you all together; and know that Allāh is with those who fear Him.

اِنَّمَا النَّسِيْٓءُ زِيَادَةٌ فِي الْكُفْرِ يُضَلُّ بِهِ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا يُحِلُّوْنَهٗ عَامًا وَّ يُحَرِّمُوْنَهٗ عَامًا لِّيُوَاطِـُٔوْا عِدَّةَ مَا حَرَّمَ اللّٰهُ فَيُحِلُّوْا مَا حَرَّمَ اللّٰهُ ؕ زُيِّنَ لَهُمْ سُوْٓءُ اَعْمَالِهِمْ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ لَا يَهْدِي الْقَوْمَ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿٣٧﴾ ع

37. Surely, the postponement[1183] of a Sacred Month is an addition to disbelief. Those who disbelieve are led astray thereby. They allow it one year and forbid it another year, that they may agree in the number of the months which Allāh has made sacred, and thus may make lawful what Allāh has forbidden.

1181. Both the lunar and the solar years comprise 12 months.

1182. The four Sacred Months are Dhul-Qa'dah, Dhul-Ḥijjah, Muḥarram and Rajab.

1183. The reference in this verse is to a long-standing Arab custom. The three successive Sacred Months—Dhul-Qa'dah, Dhul-Ḥijjah, Muḥarram sometimes seemed to them too long a time to refrain from their predatory expeditions. In order, therefore, to free themselves from the restrictions of the Sacred Months, they sometimes would treat a Sacred Month like an ordinary month and an ordinary month like a Sacred One.

[a]The evil of their deeds is made to seem fair to them. And Allāh guides not the disbelieving people.

1184. The reference is to the expedition to Tabūk, a town situated about halfway between Medina and Damascus. News was brought to the Holy Prophet that the Greeks of the Eastern Roman Empire, popularly known as the Romans, had amassed on the Syrian frontier. At the head of an army about 30,000 strong the Holy Prophet left Medina in the 9th year of the Hijrah. On account of great hardships the Muslim army had to suffer in the long and difficult journey, it came to be known as Jaishul-'Usrah, i.e. the distressed army.

Then [a]Allāh sent down His peace on him.[1185] and succoured him with hosts which you did not see, and humbled the word of those who disbelieved, and it is the word of Allāh alone which is supreme. And Allāh is Mighty, Wise.[1186]

1185. The pronoun "him" in the clause "His peace on him" may refer to Abū Bakr since the Holy Prophet had all along been perfectly calm and quiet and the pronoun "him" in the clause "succoured him," however, refers to the Holy Prophet. This divergence in the use of pronouns known as Intishāruḍ-Ḍamā'ir is of common use in Arabic. See 48:10.

1186. The reference in this verse is to the emigration of the Holy Prophet from Mecca to Medina when, accompanied by Abū Bakr, he took shelter in a cave called Thaur. The verse sheds some light on the very high spiritual status of Abū Bakr who is referred to as "one of the two" with whom was God and whose fear God Himself allayed. It is on record that, while in the Cave, Abū Bakr began to weep, and when asked by the Holy Prophet why he was weeping he replied, "I do not weep for my life, O Prophet of God, because if I die, it is only the question of a single life. But if you die, it will be the death of Islām and of the entire Muslim community" (Zurqānī).

1187. The words "light or heavy" may mean, young or old; alone or in parties; on foot or on horseback; with sufficient arms and provisions or with insufficient equipment and scanty provisions, etc.

45. Only those will ask leave of thee to be exempted who do not believe in Allāh and the Last Day, and whose hearts are full of doubt and in their doubt they waver.

1188. The journey was very hard and arduous. The Muslim army had to travel in an extremely hot weather about 200 miles to the border of Syria to meet a very powerful army. It was also the harvesting season and the trees were laden with ripe fruit.

1189. The Arabic expression 'Afallāhu 'Anka signifies no forgiveness of any sin having been committed by the Holy Prophet, rather it expresses Divine love and solicitude for him.

وَلَوْ اَرَادُوا الْخُرُوْجَ لَاَعَدُّوْا لَهٗ عُدَّةً

And there are among you those who would listen to you so as to convey information to them. And Allāh well knows the wrongdoers.

[a]3:119.

إِنْ تُصِبْكَ حَسَنَةٌ تَسُؤْهُمْ ۚ وَإِنْ تُصِبْكَ مُصِيبَةٌ يَقُولُوا قَدْ أَخَذْنَا أَمْرَنَا مِنْ قَبْلُ وَيَتَوَلَّوا وَهُمْ فَرِحُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

50. If good befalls thee, it grieves them, but if a misfortune befalls thee, they say, 'We had indeed taken our precaution beforehand.' And they turn away rejoicing.

قُلْ لَنْ يُصِيبَنَا إِلَّا مَا كَتَبَ اللَّهُ لَنَا ۚ هُوَ مَوْلَانَا ۚ وَعَلَى اللَّهِ فَلْيَتَوَكَّلِ الْمُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٥١﴾

51. Say, 'Nothing shall befall us save that which Allāh has ordained for us. He is our Protector. And in Allāh then should the believers put their trust.'

قُلْ هَلْ تَرَبَّصُونَ بِنَا إِلَّا إِحْدَى الْحُسْنَيَيْنِ ۖ وَنَحْنُ نَتَرَبَّصُ بِكُمْ أَنْ يُصِيبَكُمُ اللَّهُ بِعَذَابٍ مِنْ عِنْدِهِ أَوْ بِأَيْدِينَا ۖ فَتَرَبَّصُوا إِنَّا مَعَكُمْ مُتَرَبِّصُونَ ﴿٥٢﴾

52. Say, 'You do not await for us aught save one of the two good things,[1190] while we await that Allāh will afflict you with a punishment either from Himself or at our hands. Wait then; we also are waiting with you.'

قُلْ أَنْفِقُوا طَوْعًا أَوْ كَرْهًا لَنْ يُتَقَبَّلَ مِنْكُمْ ۖ إِنَّكُمْ كُنْتُمْ قَوْمًا فَاسِقِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

53. Say, 'Spend willingly or unwillingly, it shall not be accepted[1191] from you. You are indeed a disobedient people.'

1190. A true Muslim either dies fighting or wins victory. There is no other alternative left to him.

1191. Nature of the punishment meted out to the Hypocrites is worthy of special note. No fine was imposed on them, nor were they imprisoned nor subjected to punishment generally inflicted for offences of this nature. They were simply told that Zakāt, which was a means of purifying their souls would not be accepted from them. This shows that the dealings of the Holy Prophet with the Hypocrites were not dictated by any monetary or mundane considerations.

وَمَا مَنَعَهُمْ اَنْ تُقْبَلَ مِنْهُمْ نَفَقٰتُهُمْ
اِلَّآ اَنَّهُمْ كَفَرُوْا بِاللّٰهِ وَبِرَسُوْلِهٖ وَلَا

يُنْفِقُوْنَ اِلَّا وَهُمْ كٰرِهُوْنَ ﴿٥٤﴾

54. And nothing prevents that their contributions should be accepted from them save that they disbelieve in Allāh and His Messenger. And [a]they come not to Prayer except lazily and they spend not in the way of Allāh but reluctantly.

فَلَا تُعْجِبْكَ اَمْوَالُهُمْ وَلَآ اَوْلَادُهُمْ ؕ

الدُّنْيَا وَتَزْهَقَ اَنْفُسُهُمْ وَهُمْ
كٰفِرُوْنَ ﴿٥٥﴾

55. So [b]let not their wealth nor their children excite thy wonder. Allāh only intends to punish them therewith[1192] in the present life and that their souls may depart while they are disbelievers.

وَيَحْلِفُوْنَ بِاللّٰهِ اِنَّهُمْ لَمِنْكُمْ ؕ وَمَا
هُمْ مِّنْكُمْ وَلٰكِنَّهُمْ قَوْمٌ يَّفْرَقُوْنَ ﴿٥٦﴾

56. And they swear by Allāh that they are indeed of you, while they are not of you, but they are a cowardly people.

لَوْ يَجِدُوْنَ مَلْجَاً اَوْ مَغٰرٰتٍ اَوْ
مُدَّخَلًا لَّوَلَّوْا اِلَيْهِ وَهُمْ يَجْمَحُوْنَ ﴿٥٧﴾

57. If they could find a place of refuge, or caves, or even a hole to enter, they would surely turn thereto, rushing in uncontrollable haste.

وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ يَّلْمِزُكَ فِى الصَّدَقٰتِ ۚ فَاِنْ

مِنْهَآ اِذَا هُمْ يَسْخَطُوْنَ ﴿٥٨﴾

58. And among them are those [c]who find fault with thee with respect to the division of alms. If they are given thereof, they are pleased; but if they are not given thereof, behold! they are indignant.

[a]4:143. [b]9:85. [c]9:79.

1192. Hypocrites are warned that their wealth and their children, for whose sake they had refrained from going to battle, would become a source of extreme

وَلَوْ اَنَّهُمْ رَضُوْا مَآ اٰتٰىهُمُ اللّٰهُ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ ۙ وَقَالُوْا حَسْبُنَا اللّٰهُ سَيُؤْتِيْنَا اللّٰهُ مِنْ فَضْلِهٖ وَرَسُوْلُهٗٓ ۙ اِنَّآ اِلَى اللّٰهِ رٰغِبُوْنَ ﴿٥٩﴾ ع

59. And if they had been content with what Allāh and His Messenger had given them and had said, 'Sufficient for us is Allāh; Allāh will give us of His bounty, and so will His Messenger; to Allāh do we turn in supplication,' it would have been better for them.

R. 8.

The alms[1193] are only for the poor and the needy, and for those employed in connection therewith, and for those whose hearts are to be reconciled, and for the freeing of slaves, and for those in debt, and for the cause of Allāh, and for the wayfarer—an ordinance from Allāh. And Allāh is All-Knowing, Wise.

1193. Ṣadaqāt here means, obligatory alms, i.e. Zakāt. The verse defines the objects and persons on whom Zakāt is to be spent: (a) Fuqarā' (from the root Faqara which means, it broke the vertebrae of his back—Lane) i.e. those broken with poverty or disease. (b) Masākīn, i.e. those possessing the ability to work but lacking the means thereof. (c) Those employed in collecting the Zakāt or in keeping an account thereof or in the performance of any other duty connected with it. (d) New converts to Islām in need of monetary help. (e) Slaves, captives and such other persons as are called upon to pay blood-money to secure their freedom. (f) Those unable to pay their debts or have suffered extraordinary loss in business, etc. (g) Any noble cause. (h) Those stranded on a journey for lack of money or those who travel in search of knowledge or for promoting social relations.

1194. Udhun (lit. meaning an ear) signifies, one who listens to and believes in everything that is said to him. Of the many contemptuous and disparaging remarks that the Holy Prophet's traducers made about him one was that he listened to and readily believed as true all reports that were conveyed to him so that he had become, as it were, the very organ of hearing.

1195. The Hypocrites did not actually entertain any such fear because they did not believe the Holy Prophet to be the recipient of Divine revelation. The verse alludes only to the ironical nature of their jokes and jeers.

1196. Munāfiq is from an-Nafaq which means, a hole or passage in the earth leading up to some place through an opening at the other end, and an-Nifāq means, entering faith through one door and leaving it through another (Aqrab).

1197. Nisyān generally meaning "forgetfulness" really means, one's ceasing to think of a person or a thing either owing to loss of memory or negligence or doing it deliberately. When used about God the word means severing of His connection with a person by way of punishment or ceasing to think of him with feelings of love and affection (Mufradāt).

1199. Jihād (infinitive noun from Jahada meaning, he strove hard or with the utmost of his power with an object) has been generally used in this sense in the Qur'ān. How the Prophet should strive against the Hypocrites is not mentioned. But there is nothing to indicate the sense of fighting with the sword. In fact, the Holy Prophet never waged war against the Hypocrites.

وَهَمُّوْا بِمَا لَمْ يَنَالُوْا ۚ وَمَا نَقَمُوْٓا اِلَّآ اَنْ اَغْنٰىهُمُ اللّٰهُ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ مِنْ فَضْلِهٖ ۚ فَاِنْ يَّتُوْبُوْا يَكُ خَيْرًا لَّهُمْ ۚ وَاِنْ يَّتَوَلَّوْا يُعَذِّبْهُمُ اللّٰهُ عَذَابًا اَلِيْمًا ۙ فِى الدُّنْيَا وَالْاٰخِرَةِ ۚ وَمَا لَهُمْ فِى الْاَرْضِ مِنْ وَّلِيٍّ وَّلَا نَصِيْرٍ ﴿٧٤﴾

And they cherished enmity against believers only because Allāh and His Messenger had enriched[1200] them out of His bounty. So if they repent, it will be better for them; but if they turn away, Allāh will punish them with a grievous punishment in this world and the Hereafter, and they shall have neither friend nor helper in the earth.

80. [b]Ask thou forgiveness for them, or ask thou not forgiveness for them; even if thou ask forgiveness for them seventy times, Allāh will never forgive them.[1202] That is because they disbelieved in Allāh and His Messenger. And Allāh guides not the perfidious people.

1203. The verse obviously does not contain a commandment. It only embodies a prophecy that the time was soon coming when the Hypocrites will laugh little and weep much.

وَإِذَآ أُنزِلَتْ سُورَةٌ أَنْ ءَامِنُوا۟ بِٱللَّهِ

1204. The words need not be taken to have been actually uttered by the Hypocrites. They simply express a state of affairs implying that they came to the Holy Prophet with various excuses for staying behind.

1205. Khawālif means, those who remain behind during war; or the women (or children) remaining behind in houses or tents. The word also signifies, bad or corrupt persons (Lane).

1207. Mu'adhdhir is derived from 'Adhdhara which means, he excused or affected to excuse himself but did not adduce a valid excuse for doing so; he was remiss or wanting or deficient in an affair, setting up an excuse for being so. Thus the word means, one who falls short of his duty and then excuses himself without having any real excuse (Lane).

1208. The verse is general in its application but the persons particularly 1210. As these 'stayers-behind' belonged to different categories, therefore they were treated differently.

1211. The Qur'ān never indiscriminately condemns a whole people. The verse seeks to remove a possible misunderstanding that all Arabs of the desert were bad.

100. And as for the foremost among the believers, the first of the Emigrants and the Helpers, and those who followed them in the best possible manner, [a]Allāh is well-pleased with them[1212] and they are well-pleased with Him, and He has prepared for them Gardens underneath which streams flow. They will abide therein for ever. That is the supreme triumph.

101. And of the desert Arabs around you some are hypocrites; and of the people of Medina also. They persist in hypocrisy.[1213] Thou knowest them not; We know them. We will punish them

[a]58:23; 98:9.

1212. Incidentally, the verse constitutes a forcible refutation of the Shī'ah accusations against the first three Successors of the Holy Prophet and his other prominent Companions.

1213. The reference particularly is to the five tribes of the desert living near Medina—Juhainah, Muzainah, Ashja', Aslam and Ghifār (Ma'ānī. iii. 361). After the death of the Holy Prophet the Hypocrites from among these tribes gathered together and made a raid on Medina (Khaldūn, ii. 66).

وَاٰخَرُوْنَ اعْتَرَفُوْا بِذُنُوْبِهِمْ خَلَطُوْا عَمَلًا صَالِحًا وَّاٰخَرَ سَيِّئًا ؕ عَسَى اللّٰهُ اَنْ يَّتُوْبَ عَلَيْهِمْ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ غَفُوْرٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ﴿١٠٢﴾

102. And there are others who have confessed their faults. They mixed good works with others that are evil.[1215] It may be that Allāh will turn to them with compassion. Surely, Allāh is Most Forgiving, Merciful.

خُذْ مِنْ اَمْوَالِهِمْ صَدَقَةً تُطَهِّرُهُمْ وَتُزَكِّيْهِمْ بِهَا وَصَلِّ عَلَيْهِمْ ؕ اِنَّ صَلٰوتَكَ سَكَنٌ لَّهُمْ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ سَمِيْعٌ عَلِيْمٌ ﴿١٠٣﴾

103. Take alms out of their wealth, so that thou mayest cleanse them and purify them thereby. And pray for them; thy prayer indeed is a source of tranquillity for them. And Allāh is All-Hearing, All-Knowing.

اَلَمْ يَعْلَمُوْٓا اَنَّ اللّٰهَ هُوَ يَقْبَلُ التَّوْبَةَ عَنْ عِبَادِهٖ وَيَاْخُذُ الصَّدَقٰتِ وَاَنَّ اللّٰهَ هُوَ التَّوَّابُ الرَّحِيْمُ ﴿١٠٤﴾

104. Know they not that [a]Allāh is He Who accepts repentance from His servants and takes alms, and that Allāh is He Who is Oft-Returning with compassion, and is Merciful?

1214. "Twice" may not refer to the form of punishment but to the period thereof which is explained in 9:126. The word may signify that the Hypocrites would be punished in a period ranging from one to two years, i.e. if the punishment comes twice a year, they will have it in one year; if it comes once, they will have it in two years.

1215. The verse may refer to those Muslims who did possess an excuse, but it was not strong enough to justify their staying behind. Their number, according to different reports, varied from seven to ten. As a self-inflicted punishment for their offence, these men bound themselves to the pillars of the Mosque at Medina, and when the Holy Prophet entered it to offer Prayers, they begged him to pardon them to which he replied that he could not do so

وَقُلِ اعْمَلُوْا فَسَيَرَى اللّٰهُ عَمَلَكُمْ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ وَالْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ ؕ وَسَتُرَدُّوْنَ اِلٰى عٰلِمِ الْغَيْبِ وَالشَّهَادَةِ فَيُنَبِّئُكُمْ بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿۱۰۵﴾

105. And say, 'Go on working and [a]Allāh will surely watch your conduct and also His Messenger and the believers. And you shall be brought back to Him Who knows the unseen and the seen; then He will inform you of what you did.'

وَاٰخَرُوْنَ مُرْجَوْنَ لِاَمْرِ اللّٰهِ اِمَّا يُعَذِّبُهُمْ وَاِمَّا يَتُوْبُ عَلَيْهِمْ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ عَلِيْمٌ حَكِيْمٌ ﴿۱۰۶﴾

106. And [b]there are others whose case has been postponed[1216] pending the decree of Allāh. He may punish them or He may turn to them with compassion. And Allāh is All-Knowing, Wise.

unless so commanded by God. When this verse was revealed, they were ordered to be released.

1216. They were Hilāl Ibn-e-Umayyah, Murārah Ibn-e-Rabī'ah and Ka'b Ibn-e-Mālik. The Holy Prophet deferred pronouncing his decision regarding them in obedience to Divine command (Bukhārī).

1217. The verse may refer to a plot hatched by one Abū 'Āmir, a Christian monk, an arch-enemy of Islām. After having utterly failed in his evil designs against Islām and seeing that it had become firmly established in Arabia after the Battle of Ḥunain, he fled to Syria, designing and hoping to enlist the help of the Byzantines against the Holy Prophet. From there he sent word to the Hypocrites of Medina that they should build a mosque in the suburb of Medina which should serve as a place of hiding for him and in which they should concoct schemes and hatch plots. But Abū 'Āmir did not live long enough to see his scheme materialise and died at Kunnisrīn, a broken-hearted wretch. His accomplices built a mosque as designed by him and invited the Holy Prophet to bless it by saying his Prayers in it. The Holy Prophet was forbidden by Divine revelation to do so. He ordered the mosque which came to be known as Masjide-Ḍirār to be set on fire and razed to the ground.

لِّمَنْ حَارَبَ اللّٰهَ وَ رَسُوْلَهٗ مِنْ قَبْلُ ؕ وَلَيَحْلِفُنَّ اِنْ اَرَدْنَاۤ اِلَّا الْحُسْنٰى ؕ وَاللّٰهُ يَشْهَدُ اِنَّهُمْ لَكٰذِبُوْنَ ﴿۱۰۷﴾ disbelief and to cause a division among the believers, and to prepare an ambush for him who waned against Allāh and His Messenger before this. And they will surely swear; 'We meant nothing but good;' but [a]Allāh bears witness that they are certainly liars.

108. Never stand to pray therein. A Mosque founded upon piety from the very first[1218] day is surely more worthy that thou shouldst stand to pray therein. In it are men who love to become purified, and Allāh loves those who purify themselves.

اَفَمَنْ اَسَّسَ بُنْيَانَهٗ عَلٰى تَقْوٰى مِنَ اللّٰهِ وَ رِضْوَانٍ خَيْرٌ اَمْ مَّنْ اَسَّسَ بُنْيَانَهٗ عَلٰى شَفَا جُرُفٍ هَارٍ فَانْهَارَ بِهٖ فِيْ نَارِ جَهَنَّمَ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ لَا يَهْدِي الْقَوْمَ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿۱۰۹﴾

109. Is he, then, who founded his building on fear of Allāh and His pleasure better or he who has founded his building on the brink of a tottering water-worn bank which tumbled down with him into the fire of Hell? And Allāh guides not the wrongdoing people.

1218. The reference is said to be to the Mosque at Qubā which was built on the site where the Holy Prophet had alighted before entering Medina on the day of his arrival from Mecca. According to some authorities, however, the reference is to the mosque which the Holy Prophet himself built at Medina and which later came to be known as "the Mosque of the Prophet."

And who is more faithful to his promise than Allāh? Rejoice, then, in your bargain which you have made with Him; and that is the mighty triumph.

followers it was no occasion for granting forgiveness but for bestowing reward.

1222. As it was an "hour of distress" for the Muslims, the expedition to Tabūk is rightly known as Ghazwatul-'Usrah, i.e. the expedition of distress.

1223. Ka'b bin Mālik, Hilāl bin Umayyah and Murārah bin Rabī'ah (9:106). They were sincere Muslims but failed to join the expedition to Tabūk, and therefore on his return to Medina, the Holy Prophet ordered their complete social ostracism so that they were even separated from their wives. They continued under this interdiction for no less than fifty days, when on their sincere repentance, they were granted pardon. They unreservedly confessed their guilt and offered no excuse. Being sincere and honest believers they severely took to heart the Divine punishment. They grieved and pined, till the earth for all its vastness became too strait for them (Bukhārī, ch. on Maghāzī).

1224. As weakness in faith and in doing good works results from lack of true knowledge and training, the verse speaks of the way in which such weakness could be removed. The Arabs of the desert were quite ignorant of the teachings of Islām (9:97). The verse suggests a practical method of instructing them in the tenets and principles of the Faith.

1225. Refers to those Hypocrites who lived among Muslims and mixed with them. Muslims were enjoined to fight them as a class and not each and every one of them individually, and to fight them by exposing their malpractices and hypocritical deeds by bringing these to the notice of the Holy Prophet.

127. And whenever a Sūrah is sent down, [a]they look at one another, saying, 'Does anyone see you?' Then they turn away. [b]Allāh has turned away their hearts because they are a people who would not understand.

1226. The verse helps to explain 9:101.

1227. This verse may apply to both believers and disbelievers—preferably to the former—the opening part of it applying to disbelievers and the closing part to believers. To disbelievers it seems to say: "It grieves the Prophet to see you fall into trouble, i.e. although you subject him to all manner of persecution and privation, yet his heart is so full of the milk of human kindness that no amount of persecution on your part can make him bitter against you and make him wish you ill. He is so kind and sympathetic to you that he cannot bear to see you turn away from the path of righteousness and thus put yourselves in trouble." To believers it says: "The Prophet is full of love, compassion and mercy for you, i.e. he cheerfully shares with you your sorrows and afflictions. Moreover, like an affectionate father he treats you with extreme kindness and mercy."

CHAPTER 10
YŪNUS
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date and Place of Revelation

This Sūrah was revealed at Mecca in the late Meccan period, i.e. in the last four or five years of the Prophet's stay there. Some Commentators have ascribed some of its verses to the Medinite period, but their opinion is not based on historical data. They seem to have drawn the inference merely from the subject-matter of those verses. The Sūrah derives its name from v. 99.

Subject-Matter

On pondering over the contents of the Qur'ān we notice that not only its verses are interrelated but also that every Sūrah possesses a subtle connection with the one preceding it and the one following it. Moreover, certain groups of Quranic Chapters are linked with other groups. Thus a perfect order runs throughout the whole of the Qur'ān. Its different Chapters are related to one another in more ways than one; and when their order and arrangement are considered, no doubt is left that the Qur'ān is indeed a great miracle of diction. The present Sūrah possesses a threefold connection with the preceding Chapter. First, it constitutes a continuation of the preceding Chapter. Two subjects were mentioned in its concluding portions: (a) The revelation of the Book and its denial (9:127); (b) the coming of a Messenger of God and the benefits derived from following his teaching (9:128). The same subject is continued in the present Sūrah. It mentions the importance of the Book (10:2) and it refers to the Divine Messenger (10:3). Secondly, the Sūrah completes the subject-matter of the preceding one. In that Chapter (which is not really a separate Chapter but is a part of Chapter 8) reference was made to the fact that the time of the prosperity and predominance of Islām had come and that God's promises were going to be fulfilled in all their glory and grandeur. So the believers were exhorted to attend to the purification of their hearts in order that their repentance might be accepted. As doubts might have arisen in the hearts of some people that on account of the enormity of their sins their repentance will not be accepted, the present Chapter removes that doubt and stresses the fact that God's mercy encompasses and transcends all things, though it requires the highest form of repentance to attract it. Thirdly, all the Chapters of the Qur'ān from Chapter 2 to Chapter 9 (which are really seven in number; for, as stated above, Chapter 9 is not a separate Chapter but forms part of Chapter 8 and was written separately only on account of the special importance of its subject-matter) deal with one group of subjects, while with this Chapter begins a new group of Sūrahs, ending with Chapter 18. This second group deals with a distinct and separate theme, yet its subject-matter is closely connected with that of the first group. In the first group the truth of Islām is established by reference to the Holy Prophet and his work, and an appeal is made for the acceptance of Islām in view of the superiority of its principles, the excellence of its teachings, the vastness of the spiritual knowledge which it holds out to seekers after truth, the wisdom underlying its teachings and its extraordinary influence. In the second group, comprising Chapters 10-18, emphasis is laid on the need of Prophethood, the importance of religion and on the object of the Holy Prophet's advent, by referring particularly to the criteria and characteristics of Prophethood, the claims and history of previous Prophets and to the arguments based on, and supported by, human reason and commonsense.

Thus the subject-matter of the two groups is very closely linked and related to each other, the only difference being that whereas in the first group reference is made to the prophecies which were made at the advent of the Holy Prophet or which had been made by previous Prophets and were fulfilled in due time, thus bearing witness to the truth of the Holy Prophet; in the second group the truth of Islām has been explained on its own merits and on the basis of the canons of Prophethood.

1228. See 16.

1229. Tilka is a demonstrative pronoun used to indicate something distant. The word is said to have been used in reference to those verses of the previous Scriptures which contained prophecies about the Qur'ān and which saw their fulfilment in the Quranic verses. While according to some Commentators God had with Him the complete Book written beforehand and it was out of that Heavenly Book that He revealed verses from time to time and the reference is to that original Book with God, according to others the pronoun denotes the remoteness of the Qur'ān in respect of its high rank and is meant to express the great eminence of the verses of the Qur'ān.

1230. The words 'full of wisdom' point to three distinctive qualities of the Qur'ān: (a) It is full of wisdom, inasmuch as it comprises the basis of all spiritual knowledge and inculcates all truths; (b) it embodies teachings suited to all occasions and circumstances; and (c) it gives right judgment in all religious differences.

1231. Qadam means, preference; rank; footing. They say la-hū 'indī Qadamun, i.e. there is strength or rank for him with me (Lane).

1231A. The verse brings to light the important fact that those, who become morally depraved, lose all sense of self-respect as well as all confidence in Verily, your Lord is Allāh Who created [a]the heavens and the earth in six periods,[1232] then [b]He settled[1232A] Himself firmly on the Throne;[1233] [c]He governs everything.[1234] There is no [d]intercessor with Him save after His permission. This is Allāh, your Lord, so worship Him. Will you not, then, mind?

5. [e]To Him shall you all return. The promise of Allāh is true. Surely, [f]He originates the creation; then He reproduces[1235] it, that He may reward those, who believe and do good works, with equity; and as for those who disbelieve, they shall have boiling water to drink and a painful punishment, because they disbelieved.

themselves, for here the disbelievers are represented as so degenerate that they could not imagine that anyone from among themselves could come and rescue them from the morass of degradation into which they had fallen, and that only someone from outside could improve their condition.

1232A. see 54.

1233. The word 'Arsh represents God's transcendent attributes which are His exclusive prerogatives. These attributes are manifested through God's attributes of similitude which have been described in 69:18 as 'the bearers of God's Throne.' See 986.

1234. The words, He governs everything, point to the working of the universe and to the means which God uses to fulfil his decree and manifest His Will.

1235. Not only after death will man be given a new life in which his actions in this worldly life will be judged and requited; but in the present life also one generation of men is succeeded by another so that the good works of the former may not be wasted and may benefit the latter. Ṣāliḥāt, besides meaning good and righteous works, means works done in conformity with the exigencies of specific occasions and circumstances.

6. [a]He it is Who made the sun radiate a brilliant light[1236] and the moon reflect a lustre, and ordained for it proper stages, that [b]you might know the count of years and the reckoning[1237] of time. Allāh has not created this system but in accordance with the requirements of truth. He details the Signs for a people who possess knowledge.

1236. Ḍiyā' means, light; bright or brilliant light. The word is synonymous with Nūr though, according to some, it has a more intensive signification than Nūr. Some lexicologists consider Ḍiyā' as signifying the rays that are diffused by what is termed Nūr. According to others Ḍiyā' signifies that light which subsists by itself as that of the sun or of fire, and Nūr that which subsists by some other thing as the light of the moon, i.e. reflected light (Lane & Aqrab). The fact appears to be that whereas Ḍiyā' signifies strong light, Nūr is a more general term denoting light as opposed to darkness. This is why Nūr is one of the names of God. It is also more extensive and more penetrating as well as more lasting in its significance (Muḥīṭ).

1237. The verse points to a very wise natural law. We can judge the size of space traversed by a body only by the change of its position relative to other bodies. God has appointed stages for the sun and the moon that we may be able to make a reckoning of time. In other words, He has caused these heavenly bodies to move and has appointed stages for their motion so that by observing the motion we may be able to know that a certain amount of time has passed and that we have moved on from our original position. All reckoning and all calendars depend on the movements of the sun and the moon. The moon moves round the earth and thereby we are able to know the measures of months. The earth moves round the sun and also rotates on its own axis, thus enabling us to measure our years as well as our days.

that Allāh has created in the heavens and the earth there are Signs for a God-fearing people.[1238]

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ لَا يَرْجُوْنَ لِقَآءَنَا وَرَضُوْا

10. As for those [b]who believe, and do good works—their Lord shall guide them along the path of success because of

[a]10:12, 46; 25:22. [b]2:278; 4:176; 13:30; 14:24; 22:15, 24.

1238. In the present verse the words, for a God-fearing people, have been substituted for the expression, for a people who possess knowledge, in the preceding verse. This is because though the natural phenomenon of the alternation of day and night is known even to an ignorant person, it is only the God-fearing that derive real spiritual benefit from a reverential study of it. Also, the ordaining of various stages for the moon and the sun, to which the preceding verse referred was not so easy a thing as to be perceived and understood by each and every person and therefore only those endowed with knowledge could benefit by it. Moreover, the phenomenon of the alternation of day and night resembles the rise and fall of nations. The days of their glory and prosperity are followed by the nights of their decline and degradation. No nation has ever enjoyed perpetual glory, nor has any people for ever floundered and groped in the darkness of degradation and decline. A people may make their day of prosperity long and shorten their night of decline. It is also within their power to delay the coming of their night.

1239. The study of human nature reveals the important fact that all human progress is bound up with the instincts of hope and fear. Our best efforts are inspired by one or other of these two instincts. Some persons labour and sweat, actuated by hope of acquisition and aggrandizement; others work out of fear. The present verse makes an appeal to both these classes of men by using the word Rajā which means, he hoped; he feared (Lane).

تَحْتِهِمُ الْاَنْهٰرُ فِيْ جَنّٰتِ النَّعِيْمِ ۝١٠ their faith. Streams shall flow beneath[1240] them in the Gardens of Bliss.

11. Their prayer therein shall be, 'Glory be to Thee, O Allāh!'[1241] and [a]their greeting therein to each other shall be, 'Peace!' And the end of their prayer shall be, 'All praise be to Allāh, the Lord of the worlds.'

R. 2.

وَلَوْ يُعَجِّلُ اللّٰهُ لِلنَّاسِ الشَّرَّ اسْتِعْجَالَهُمْ بِالْخَيْرِ لَقُضِيَ اِلَيْهِمْ اَجَلُهُمْ ۭ فَنَذَرُ الَّذِيْنَ لَا يَرْجُوْنَ لِقَاۗءَنَا فِيْ طُغْيَانِهِمْ يَعْمَهُوْنَ ۝١٢

12. And [b]if Allāh were to hasten for men the ill consequences of their actions as they would seek to hasten on the good,[1242] the end of their term of life would have been already brought upon them. But [c]We leave those who look not for the meeting with Us to wander distractedly in their transgression.

[a]14:24; 36:59. [b]17:12. [c]See 10:8.

1240. The word, taḥt (beneath), is used here figuratively denoting subordination. In this sense of the word the expression, beneath them, would signify that the inmates of Heaven will be the masters and owners of its streams and not merely their users as tenants or occupiers.

1241. The glorification of God will be spontaneous and instinctive, because in Heaven the reality of things will become manifest to men and they will realize that every work of God was based on deep wisdom. This realization will make them exclaim instinctively and spontaneously, Glory be to Thee, O Allāh. The verse also indicates that the ultimate end of the believers is always happy. They give expression to their joy by proclaiming the glory of God.

1242. The word Khair also meaning wealth (Lane), the verse means that disbelievers direct all their energies to the earning of wealth, and neglect God altogether. Their conduct demands that evil should overtake them. But God is slow to punish. If He had been as quick in punishing them as their conduct deserves, they would have been destroyed long ago. If the word Khair be taken in the sense of 'good' as in the text, the verse would mean that if God were as quick to inflict punishment on disbelievers for their evil deeds as He is to bestow good, then they would already have been destroyed.

13. And [a]when trouble befalls a man, he calls on Us, lying on his side, or sitting or standing, but when We have removed his trouble from him, he goes his way as though he had never called on Us for the removal of the trouble that befell him. Thus it is that the doings of the extravagant are made to seem fair in their eyes.

1243. Punishments are of two kinds: (1) Those that are the result of the contravention of the laws of nature, and (2) those that come when the law of the Sharī'ah is flouted. The latter class of punishments overtake a people when they lead wicked lives, or when a Prophet appears among them and they reject him and put all sorts of obstacles in his way. Punishments of this kind are known by certain characteristics. Other class of punishments, such as the rise and fall of nations, come as the result of the contravention of the ordinary laws of nature.

17. Say, 'If Allāh had so willed, I should not have recited it to you, nor would He have made it known to you. I have indeed lived among you a whole lifetime before this. Will you not then understand?'[1245]

فَمَنْ اَظْلَمُ مِمَّنِ افْتَرٰى عَلَى اللّٰهِ كَذِبًا
اَوْ كَذَّبَ بِاٰيٰتِهٖ ؕ اِنَّهٗ لَا يُفْلِحُ الْمُجْرِمُوْنَ ﴿١٨﴾

18. [d]Who is then more unjust than he who forges a lie against Allāh or he who treats His Signs as lies? Surely, the guilty shall never prosper.[1246]

[a]See 10:8. [b]17:74. [c]6:51; 7:204; 46:10. [d]6:22; 11:19; 61:8.

1244. 'Punishment of an awful day' signifies a national disaster.

1245. The verse embodies an infallible criterion to test the truth of a claimant to Prophethood. If the life of a Prophet before he lays claim to Prophethood presents an extraordinarily high standard of truthfulness and integrity and between that period and his claim to Prophethood there is no interval during which it might be supposed that he has fallen from that high standard of moral excellence, then his claim to Prophethood must be accepted as that of a highly moral and truthful man. Naturally, a person confirmed in a certain course of conduct through habit or temperament takes a long time to develop in himself a major change for either good or evil. How then could the Prophet of Islām suddenly turn into an impostor when all his lifetime before his claim to Prophethood he had been a singularly upright man?

1246. The verse brings to light two eternal truths: (a) Those persons who

وَيَعْبُدُوْنَ مِنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ مَا لَا يَضُرُّهُمْ
وَلَا يَنْفَعُهُمْ وَيَقُوْلُوْنَ هٰٓؤُلَآءِ
شُفَعَآؤُنَا عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ ؕ قُلْ اَتُنَبِّـُٔوْنَ اللّٰهَ بِمَا
لَا يَعْلَمُ فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَلَا فِي الْاَرْضِ ؕ
سُبْحٰنَهٗ وَتَعٰلٰى عَمَّا يُشْرِكُوْنَ ﴿۱۹﴾

19. And [a]they worship, instead of Allāh, that which neither harms them nor profits them; and they say, 'These are our intercessors with Allāh.'[1247] Say, [b]'Do you presume to inform Allāh of what He knows not in the heavens or in the earth? Glory be to Him! High be He exalted above all that which they associate with Him.

وَمَا كَانَ النَّاسُ اِلَّآ اُمَّةً وَّاحِدَةً
فَاخْتَلَفُوْا ؕ وَلَوْلَا كَلِمَةٌ سَبَقَتْ مِنْ

20. And [c]mankind were but one community,[1247A] then they differed[1248] among invent lies about God and those who reject and oppose His Messengers can never escape God's punishment. (b) Impostors and false prophets cannot succeed in their mission.

1247. The real cause of Shirk (idolatry) lies in failure on the part of idolaters to understand the object and purpose of their creation. A Mushrik (idolater) has a false conception of the person and attributes of God and also of his own great inborn God-given capacities and capabilities. He entertains the foolish belief that he cannot have access to God without the aid of an intermediary, and also that God cannot condescend to come to him except through the medium of those who have already attained His nearness. Islām is emphatically opposed to both these views.

1247A. They were united in wickedness and opposition to Divine Prophets. See also 254.

1248. The words may have one and all of the following meanings: (a) God endowed men with the capacity to find the right path and also directed them to it through revealed guidance, but they forsook that path and fell into error. (b) They are always shown the right path through Divine Messengers, but they continue to differ among themselves. (c) In their opposition to the Divine Messengers the disbelievers always take the same course and thus form one community. All through the ages they have opposed the Divine Prophets and differed with them. See 255.

themselves; [a]and had it not been for a word[1248A] that had gone before from thy Lord, it would have already been decided between them concerning that in which they differed.

وَيَقُولُونَ لَوْلَآ أُنزِلَ عَلَيْهِ ءَايَةٌ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ ۚ فَقُلْ إِنَّمَا ٱلْغَيْبُ لِلَّهِ فَٱنتَظِرُوٓا۟ ۚ إِنِّى مَعَكُم مِّنَ ٱلْمُنتَظِرِينَ ﴿٢١﴾ ع

21. And they say, [b]'Why has not a Sign been sent down to him from his Lord? Say, 'The knowledge of the unseen belongs only to Allāh. So wait. I am with you among those who wait.'[1249]

R. 3.

وَإِذَآ أَذَقْنَا ٱلنَّاسَ رَحْمَةً مِّنۢ بَعْدِ ضَرَّآءَ مَسَّتْهُمْ إِذَا لَهُم مَّكْرٌ فِىٓ ءَايَاتِنَا ۚ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ أَسْرَعُ مَكْرًا ۚ إِنَّ رُسُلَنَا يَكْتُبُونَ مَا تَمْكُرُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

22. And [c]when We make people taste of mercy after adversity has touched them, behold! [d]they begin to devise plans against Our Signs.[1250] Say, 'Allāh is far swifter in planning.' Surely, Our messengers write down all that you plan.

1248A. The reference is to 'My Mercy encompasses all things' (7:157).

1249. The verse contains an effective reply to the disbelievers' demand for the coming of a speedy punishment. The Holy Prophet is told to say to them that it is he and not they who should have been impatient at the delay in the coming of the threatened punishment; for it is he who is being subjected to mocking for this delay; and when he is patiently waiting for God's decree, why should not they?

1250. Mercy comes from God, but adversity is the result of man's own evil deeds.

24. But [a]when He has delivered them, lo! they begin to commit excesses in the earth wrongfully. O ye people, [b]your excesses in seeking the enjoyment of the present life are only against your own selves. Then to Us shall be your return; and We will inform you of what you used to do.

1251. As a pleasant breeze sometimes develops into a violent gale and causes widespread destruction, similarly, the respite that is granted to disbelievers may prove the prelude to their destruction. To bring home to disbelievers this patent truth, their attention is drawn to the comforts and perils of a sea-voyage.

takes on its ornament and looks beautiful and its owners think that they have full power over it, [a]there comes to it Our command by night or by day and We render it like a mown down field, as if [b]nothing had existed there the day before.[1252] Thus do We expound the Signs for a people who reflect.

اَهۡلُهَاۤ اَنَّهُمۡ قٰدِرُوۡنَ عَلَيۡهَاۤ ۙ اَتٰىهَاۤ اَمۡرُنَا لَيۡلًا اَوۡ نَهَارًا فَجَعَلۡنٰهَا حَصِيۡدًا كَاَنۡ لَّمۡ تَغۡنَ بِالۡاَمۡسِ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ نُفَصِّلُ الۡاٰيٰتِ لِقَوۡمٍ يَّتَفَكَّرُوۡنَ ﴿۲۵﴾

26. And [c]Allāh calls to the abode of peace,[1253] and guides whom He pleases to the straight path.

وَاللّٰهُ يَدۡعُوۡۤا اِلٰى دَارِ السَّلٰمِ ؕ وَيَهۡدِىۡ مَنۡ يَّشَآءُ اِلٰى صِرَاطٍ مُّسۡتَقِيۡمٍ ﴿۲۶﴾

27. [d]For those who do good deeds, there shall be the best[1254] reward and yet more blessings.[1255] And [e]neither darkness nor ignominy shall cover their faces. It is these who are the inmates of Heaven; therein shall they abide.

لِلَّذِيۡنَ اَحۡسَنُوا الۡحُسۡنٰى وَزِيَادَةٌ ؕ وَلَا يَرۡهَقُ وُجُوۡهَهُمۡ قَتَرٌ وَّلَا ذِلَّةٌ ؕ اُولٰٓئِكَ اَصۡحٰبُ الۡجَنَّةِ ۚ هُمۡ فِيۡهَا خٰلِدُوۡنَ ﴿۲۷﴾

28. And as for those who do evil deeds, [a]the punishment

[a]3:118. [b]11:69. [c]6:128. [d]50:36. [e]75:23, 24.

1252. The moral of the parable is that when nations become proud and vain and take life lightly, their decline sets in and they come to grief.

1253. Salām means, safety, security; immunity or freedom from faults or defects, imperfections, blemishes or vice; or it means peace; obedience; Heaven. Salām is also one of the names of God (Lane).

1254. Al-Ḥusnā meaning, a happy end; victory; keenness and activeness, the clause would signify, (1) that believers will come to a happy end; (2) that they will attain success, and (3) that God will make them keen and active.

1255. The word Ziyādah (yet more) signifies that believers will have God Himself as their reward, and the word al-Ḥusnā (also meaning the sight of God) confirms this inference.

of an evil shall be the like thereof, and [b]ignominy shall cover them. They shall have none to protect them from Allāh. And they shall look as if their faces had been covered with dark patches of night.[1256] It is these who are the inmates of Fire; therein shall they abide.

وَيَوْمَ نَحْشُرُهُمْ جَمِيْعًا ثُمَّ نَقُوْلُ لِلَّذِيْنَ

29. And remember the day [c]when We shall gather them all together, then shall We say to those who associated other gods with Us, 'Stand back in your places, you and your associate-gods'. Then We shall separate them widely one from another, and their associate-gods will say, [d]'Surely, it was not us that you worshipped;

فَكَفٰى بِاللّٰهِ شَهِيْدًا ۢ بَيْنَنَا وَبَيْنَكُمْ اِنْ

And [c]who brings forth the living from the dead and brings forth the dead from the living? And [d]who regulates[1258] all affairs?' They will say, 'Allāh'. Then say, 'Will you not then seek His protection?'

فَذٰلِكُمُ اللّٰهُ رَبُّكُمُ الْحَقُّ ۚ فَمَاذَا بَعْدَ

33. Such is Allāh, your true Lord. So what is there other than the truth but error? How

[a]86:10. [b]27:65; 34:25; 35:4. [c]3:28; 6:96. [d]10:4.

1257. It is not given to man fully to comprehend and realize the reality of things in this world. It is only in the next world that the veil shall be completely lifted from all things and their real nature will come to light.

1258. There exists a beautiful and intelligent order in this verse. It begins with a reference to sustenance, which is the means of the preservation of physical life. Then it speaks of the organs of sight and hearing, which are the means of acquiring wisdom and knowledge. After that it speaks of the system of life and death, pointing to man's incentive to action which naturally comes into operation after the acquirement of wisdom and understanding. Last of all, it speaks of the government or management of affairs which is needed when one begins to exercise his power of action, Tadbīr, meaning conducting an affair in an ordered and regulated manner and maintaining proper balance between different acts. In short, all the four means which are needed for the achievement of the purpose of man's life have been mentioned here in their natural order.

الْحَقِّ اِلَّا الضَّلٰلُ ۚ فَاَنّٰى تُصْرَفُوْنَ ﴿٣٢﴾

then are you being turned away from the truth?

كَذٰلِكَ حَقَّتْ كَلِمَتُ رَبِّكَ عَلَى الَّذِيْنَ فَسَقُوْٓا اَنَّهُمْ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ ﴿٣٤﴾

34. [a]Thus is the word of thy Lord proved true against those who rebel, that they believe not.

قُلْ هَلْ مِنْ شُرَكَآئِكُمْ مَّنْ يَّبْدَؤُا الْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ يُعِيْدُهٗ ؕ قُلِ اللّٰهُ يَبْدَؤُا الْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ يُعِيْدُهٗ فَاَنّٰى تُؤْفَكُوْنَ ﴿٣٥﴾

35. Say, 'Is there any of your associate-gods [b]who originnates creation and then reproduces it?' Say, 'It is Allāh alone Who originates creation and then reproduces it.[1259] Whither then are you turned away?'

قُلْ هَلْ مِنْ شُرَكَآئِكُمْ مَّنْ يَّهْدِيْٓ اِلَى الْحَقِّ ؕ قُلِ اللّٰهُ يَهْدِيْ لِلْحَقِّ ؕ اَفَمَنْ يَّهْدِيْٓ اِلَى الْحَقِّ اَحَقُّ اَنْ يُّتَّبَعَ اَمَّنْ لَّا يَهِدِّيْٓ اِلَّآ اَنْ يُّهْدٰى ۚ فَمَا لَكُمْ ۫ كَيْفَ تَحْكُمُوْنَ ﴿٣٦﴾

36. Say, 'Is there any of your associate-gods who guides to the truth?' Say, 'It is Allāh alone Who guides to the truth. Is then He Who guides to the truth more worthy to be followed, or he who finds not the way himself unless he be guided? What, then, is the matter with you? How judge ye?'

وَمَا يَتَّبِعُ اَكْثَرُهُمْ اِلَّا ظَنًّا ؕ اِنَّ الظَّنَّ لَا يُغْنِيْ مِنَ الْحَقِّ شَيْـًٔا ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَلِيْمٌۢ بِمَا

37. [c]And most of them follow only conjecture. Surely, conjecture avails naught against truth.[1260] Verily,

[a]10:97; 40:7. [b]10:5. [c]6:117; 10:67; 53:29.

1259. The real test of a creator is his ability to reproduce what he has already created; otherwise the claim is open to serious objection and can be made by any impostor. After having laid down this test of Divinity, the verse asks idol-worshippers, who among their so-called deities is the author of this system of creation and reproduction which has been working from the beginning of the world?

1260. The beliefs and views held by those who set up associates with God

Allāh is Well-Aware of what they do.

يَفْعَلُوْنَ ﴿٣٧﴾

38. And this Qur'ān is not such as could have been produced by anyone other than Allāh. On the contrary, [a]it fulfils that revelation which is before it and is an exposition of the perfect Law. There is no doubt about it that it is from the Lord of all the worlds.[1261]

وَمَا كَانَ هٰذَا الْقُرْاٰنُ اَنْ يُّفْتَرٰى مِنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ وَلٰكِنْ تَصْدِيْقَ الَّذِيْ بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَتَفْصِيْلَ الْكِتٰبِ لَا رَيْبَ فِيْهِ مِنْ رَّبِّ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ﴿٣٨﴾

39. Do they say, 'He has forged it?' Say, [b]'Bring then a Sūrah like unto it,[1262] and call for help on all you can, apart from Allāh, if you are truthful.'

اَمْ يَقُوْلُوْنَ افْتَرٰىهُ ؕ قُلْ فَاْتُوْا بِسُوْرَةٍ مِّثْلِهٖ وَادْعُوْا مَنِ اسْتَطَعْتُمْ مِّنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ صٰدِقِيْنَ ﴿٣٩﴾ are born of mere fancies and surmises, because their so-called deities have never revealed guidance to them.

1261. The verse gives five very cogent reasons to show that the Qur'ān is the revealed Word of God: (a) It deals with such themes as are beyond the power of man to know and as can be revealed by God alone. (b) The prophecies of the previous Prophets establish its Divine origin. (c) It explains and expounds the teachings of previous Scriptures in such a clear and comprehensive manner as no other Scripture has done. (d) It contains all the reasons and arguments needed to prove its Divine origin and does not require the help or support of any outside person or book for this purpose. (e) Unlike former Scriptures it satisfies the moral needs and requirements of all mankind under all circumstances.

1262. The verse challenges disbelievers that if a book with such excellences as the Qur'ān possesses could be a human forgery, then why do they not produce a similar one themselves? This challenge stands for all time. See also 44.

قَبْلِهِمْ فَانْظُرْ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَاقِبَةُ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿٤٠﴾ significance thereof yet come to them. In like manner did those before them reject the truth. But see what was the end of the wrongdoers.

وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ يُّؤْمِنُ بِهٖ وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ لَّا يُؤْمِنُ بِهٖ ؕ وَرَبُّكَ اَعْلَمُ بِالْمُفْسِدِيْنَ ﴿٤١﴾ ع

41. And of them [a]there are some who believe therein, and of them there are others who do not believe therein, and thy Lord knows the mischief-makers very well.

R. 5.

وَاِنْ كَذَّبُوْكَ فَقُلْ لِّيْ عَمَلِيْ وَلَكُمْ عَمَلُكُمْ ۚ اَنْتُمْ بَرِيْٓـُٔوْنَ مِمَّآ اَعْمَلُ وَاَنَا بَرِيْٓءٌ مِّمَّا تَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿٤٢﴾

42. And if they charge thee with lying, say, [b]'For me is my work and for you is your work. You are not accountable for what I do and I am not accountable for what you do.'

وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ يَّسْتَمِعُوْنَ اِلَيْكَ ؕ اَفَاَنْتَ تُسْمِعُ الصُّمَّ وَلَوْ كَانُوْا لَا يَعْقِلُوْنَ ﴿٤٣﴾

43. And among them are [c]some who give ear to thee. [d]But canst thou make the deaf hear, even though they understand not?

وَمِنْهُمْ مَّنْ يَّنْظُرُ اِلَيْكَ ؕ اَفَاَنْتَ تَهْدِى الْعُمْىَ وَلَوْ كَانُوْا لَا يُبْصِرُوْنَ ﴿٤٤﴾

44. And [e]among them are some who look towards thee. But canst thou guide the blind, even though they will not see?[1263]

[a]2:254; 4:56. [b]2:140; 109:7. [c]6:26; 17:48. [d]27:81. [e]7:199.

1263. The disbelievers do not possess the perceptive understanding and intelligence. In the preceding verse, they were spoken of as devoid of 'understanding' in addition to their being devoid of 'the faculty of hearing,' and in the present verse they are spoken of as destitute of the 'perceptive faculty of the mind,' in addition to their being blind.

إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَا يَظْلِمُ النَّاسَ شَيْئًا وَلَٰكِنَّ النَّاسَ أَنفُسَهُمْ يَظْلِمُونَ ﴿٤٥﴾

45. Certainly, [a]Allāh wrongs not men at all; but men wrong their own souls.

وَيَوْمَ يَحْشُرُهُمْ كَأَن لَّمْ يَلْبَثُوا إِلَّا سَاعَةً مِّنَ النَّهَارِ يَتَعَارَفُونَ بَيْنَهُمْ ۚ قَدْ خَسِرَ الَّذِينَ كَذَّبُوا بِلِقَاءِ اللَّهِ وَمَا كَانُوا مُهْتَدِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

46. And on the day when He will gather them together, [b]it will appear to them as though they had not tarried in the world save for an hour[1264] of a day. They will recognize one another. [c]Losers indeed are those who deny the meeting with Allāh and would not follow guidance.

وَإِمَّا نُرِيَنَّكَ بَعْضَ الَّذِي نَعِدُهُمْ أَوْ نَتَوَفَّيَنَّكَ فَإِلَيْنَا مَرْجِعُهُمْ ثُمَّ اللَّهُ شَهِيدٌ عَلَىٰ مَا يَفْعَلُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

47. And [d]if We show thee in thy lifetime the fulfilment of some of the things with which We have threatened them, thou wilt know it; or if We cause thee to die before that, then to Us is their return, and thou wilt have knowledge of it in the next world;[1265] and Allāh is Witness to all that they do.

[a]4:41; 9:70; 18:50; 30:10. [b]30:56; 46:36. [c]6:32; 30:9; 32:11. [d]13:41; 40:78.

1264. Several times disbelievers have been spoken of in the Qur'ān as having stayed in the world only for an hour of a day. In all such verses it is not the actual time of their staying in the world that is meant, but their being engrossed in worldly affairs and idle pursuits that is condemned by implication. As they wasted their lives in idle pursuits they may rightly be said to have lived in the world only for a day, even though they may have actually lived for many years.

1265. The verse lays down an important principle that the prophecies comprising threats and warnings about an impending punishment are liable to be cancelled, while those containing promises of a general character, not applying to a particular Prophet but embodying a general rule that applies to all the Prophets, are not cancelled or revoked. The verse further implies that it

وَلِكُلِّ أُمَّةٍ رَّسُوْلٌ ۚ فَإِذَا جَآءَ رَسُوْلُهُمْ قُضِيَ بَيْنَهُمْ بِالْقِسْطِ وَهُمْ لَا يُظْلَمُوْنَ ﴿٤٨﴾

48. And [a]for every people there is a Messenger.[1266] So when their Messenger comes, it is judged between them with equity, and they are not wronged.

وَيَقُوْلُوْنَ مَتٰى هٰذَا الْوَعْدُ إِنْ كُنْتُمْ صٰدِقِيْنَ ﴿٤٩﴾

49. And [b]they say, 'When will this promise be fulfilled, if you are truthful?'

قُلْ لَّآ أَمْلِكُ لِنَفْسِيْ ضَرًّا وَّلَا نَفْعًا إِلَّا مَا شَآءَ اللّٰهُ ؕ لِكُلِّ أُمَّةٍ أَجَلٌ ؕ إِذَا جَآءَ أَجَلُهُمْ فَلَا يَسْتَأْخِرُوْنَ سَاعَةً وَّلَا يَسْتَقْدِمُوْنَ ﴿٥٠﴾

50. Say, [c]'I have no power over any harm or benefit[1267] for myself save that which Allāh wills. [d]For every people there is an appointed term. When their term is come, they cannot remain behind a single moment, nor can they get ahead of it.'

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُمْ إِنْ أَتٰىكُمْ عَذَابُهٗ بَيَاتًا أَوْ نَهَارًا مَّاذَا يَسْتَعْجِلُ مِنْهُ الْمُجْرِمُوْنَ ﴿٥١﴾

51. Say, 'Tell me, [e]if His punishment comes upon you by night or by day, how will the guilty run away[1268] from it?

is not necessary that all prophecies should have a time limit for their fulfilment.

1266. The verse seems to refer to a Law-giving Prophet, for all religious Dispensations are founded by Law-giving Prophets.

1267. This verse embodies a reply to the disbelievers' demand for punishment (mentioned in the preceding verse). The Holy Prophet is bidden to ask them, how he could fulfil their demand for punishment when he possessed no power either to do good to, or avert evil from, himself.

1268. The verse may constitute a rebuke to disbelievers that they should not indulge in futile discussion as to the time and form of the promised punishment but should try to escape from it by effecting a wholesome change in their lives.

52. 'Is it then when it has overtaken you that you will believe in it? [a]What! y*ou believe* now! And before this you used to demand its speedy coming?'

اَثُمَّ اِذَا مَا وَقَعَ اٰمَنْتُمْ بِهٖ ؕ آٰلْـٰٔنَ وَقَدْ كُنْتُمْ بِهٖ تَسْتَعْجِلُوْنَ ﴿۵۲﴾

ثُمَّ قِيْلَ لِلَّذِيْنَ ظَلَمُوْا ذُوْقُوْا عَذَابَ الْخُلْدِ ۚ هَلْ تُجْزَوْنَ اِلَّا بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَكْسِبُوْنَ ﴿۵۳﴾

54. And they ask thee to tell them whether it is true? [c]Say, 'Yea, by my Lord! it is most surely true; and you cannot frustrate it.'[1269A]

وَيَسْتَنْۢبِـُٔوْنَكَ اَحَقٌّ هُوَ ؕ قُلْ اِيْ وَرَبِّيْٓ اِنَّهٗ لَحَقٌّ ۚ وَمَآ اَنْتُمْ بِمُعْجِزِيْنَ ﴿۵۴﴾

55. And [d]if every soul that does wrong possessed all that is in the earth, it would surely offer to ransom itself therewith. [e]And they will conceal[1270] their remorse, when they see the punishment. And judgment shall be passed between them with equity and they shall not be wronged.

وَلَوْ اَنَّ لِكُلِّ نَفْسٍ ظَلَمَتْ مَا فِي الْاَرْضِ لَافْتَدَتْ بِهٖ ؕ وَاَسَرُّوا النَّدَامَةَ لَمَّا رَاَوُا الْعَذَابَ ۚ وَقُضِيَ بَيْنَهُمْ بِالْقِسْطِ وَهُمْ لَا يُظْلَمُوْنَ ﴿۵۵﴾

[a]10:92. [b]34:43. [c]11:18. [d]39:48. [e]34:34.

1269. 'Adhābul-Khuld means, a punishment that stays with disbelievers and not the punishment which knows no end and can in no circumstances be removed.

1269A. You cannot escape from it.

1270. Asarrū may also mean, 'they will manifest or express their remorse.' The word has contrary meanings.

1271. The Qur'ān is Mau'iẓah, for, (a) it contains teachings which proceed from a genuine desire to impart good counsel; (b) its teaching is calculated deeply to affect and touch the human heart; and (c) it has set forth in a beautiful manner all those principles and rules of conduct which lead to moral reformation and success in life.

1272. Eating and drinking are the primary needs of man and it is the first duty of a religion to guide him in this respect. It stands to reason, however, that there should be some medical, moral or religious grounds for declaring some things as lawful and others as unlawful. Islām has provided necessary teachings in this regard.

1273. While some things remain hidden on account of their smallness, there are others parts of which remain hidden owing to their largeness. God's vision is so sharp and penetrating that nothing, however small, can remain hidden from Him and it is so comprehensive that no part of a thing, however big, can escape His sight.

1274. 'Fear' pertains to the future actions of man and 'grief' to his past actions.

1275. In v. 63 it was said that the friends of God never grieve, but here the Holy Prophet is bidden not to grieve. In fact, the Prophet's grief was not for himself but for others. He cried and wept and grieved for mankind. See 1664.

1276. refreshing their spirits and infusing a new vigour into them.

1277. (a) God is immune to the laws of decay and death and therefore requires no son to continue His work. (b) Being Self-Sufficient He needs no son to help Him in conducting the affairs of the universe. (c) The doctrine is based on no sound ground and does not go beyond mere idle philosophical surmises and conjectures. This is the significance of this verse.

1278. A careful perusal of the accounts of the three Prophets—Noah, Moses and Jonah, mentioned in the following verses shows that their life story is epitomized in the life of the Holy Prophet. He played the part of Noah at Mecca, that of Moses at Medina and that of Jonah on his re-entry into Mecca. This is enough to show that the accounts of the Prophets given in the Qur'ān are not mere stories but constitute great prophecies about important events that were to occur in the life of the Holy Prophet.

1279. It is a common objection against the Prophets of God that they seek to gain ascendancy over their compatriots by raising the standard of revolt against the existing order of things with a view to establishing a new order under their own leadership. It is this baseless charge which is refuted in this verse. God's Prophets never seek self-aggrandizement. On the contrary, they choose the path of suffering and service.

ثُمَّ بَعَثْنَا مِنْۢ بَعْدِهٖ رُسُلًا اِلٰى قَوْمِهِمْ فَجَآءُوْهُمْ بِالْبَيِّنٰتِ فَمَا كَانُوْا لِيُؤْمِنُوْا بِمَا كَذَّبُوْا بِهٖ مِنْ قَبْلُ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ نَطْبَعُ عَلٰى قُلُوْبِ الْمُعْتَدِيْنَ ﴿۷۵﴾

1281. In the two simple words Siḥr and Mubīn lie hidden almost all the stratagems and machinations that the enemies of the Prophets of God employ to defeat and discomfit them. People with a religious bent of mind are told by the enemies of Truth that the new teaching is nothing but Siḥr or fraud which would corrupt the religion of the land, whereas those nationalists, who profess to have the material good of their country at heart, are frightened away from it by being told that acceptance of the new teaching would create dissension and discord among the different communities in the land and would thus give a death-blow to the national unity; Mubīn meaning that which disunites or separates (Lane).

1282. Īmān signifies mental submission and Islām means outward obedience. Inner faith must be followed by real outward change in the conduct of a believer.

1283. The injunction to live in a town does not mean that the Israelites lived in the wilderness before this. The verse only emphasizes the necessity and usefulness of a civilized and corporate life. There is a general tendency on the part of the members of weak minority communities to live together in big towns.

1284. The words, so that they face each other, signify that (1) the Israelites were instructed to live very close together so as to be able to help one another in time of need, because this object is only attainable when people build their 1285. These words express the depth of abasement to which the proud Pharaoh had sunk.

1286. It is remarkable that the Qur'ān alone of all religious Scriptures and books of history mentions this fact. The Bible makes no mention of it, nor does any book of history. But in what wonderful manner the Word of God has proved true! After the lapse of more than 3000 years the body of Pharaoh has been discovered and it now lies in a preserved state in the museum at Cairo. The body shows Pharaoh to have been a lean, short-bodied man, with a countenance expressive of anger and stupidity. Moses was born in the time of Rameses II and was brought up by him (Exod. 2:2-10), but it was in the reign of his son, Merneptah (Meneptah) that he was entrusted with the mission of a Prophet (Jew. Enc., vol. 9, p. 500 & Enc. Bib., under "Pharaoh" & under "Egypt").

1287. The address is not to the Holy Prophet but to every reader of the Qur'ān; nor, for that matter, do the words 'sent down to thee' show that the address is made to him, for at several places in the Qur'ān, it has been spoken of as being revealed to all the people (2:137; 21:11). The very next verse supports this view because the Holy Prophet could not possibly be one of those 'who reject the Signs of Allāh.'

1287A. People of the town.

1288. Jonah has been mentioned at six different places in the Qur'ān (4:164;

101. And no soul can believe except by the permission[1290] of Allāh. And [c]He causes His wrath to descend on those who would not use their judgment.

6:87; 21:88; 37:140 & 68:49). In the Bible he is spoken of as an Israelite Prophet (2 Kings, 14:25) who was bidden to go to Nineveh, the capital of Ashur and 'cry' against it. According to the Qur'ān, however, he was sent to his own people. He was either not an Israelite or he was sent not to Nineveh but to a section of his own people. Biblical scholars themselves are not agreed as to Jonah's being an Israelite.

1289. From this verse it is clear beyond any shadow of doubt that Islām does not allow or countenance the use of force for its propagation. See also 319.

1290. It is not possible to attain true belief by the mere profession of certain doctrines with the tongue. It is possible only by the permission of God, i.e. by the observance of certain definite and fixed laws of God.

1291. The words, 'Ponder over what is happening in the heavens and the earth,' mean that the factors which are destined to lead to the success and prosperity of the cause of the Holy Prophet are already apparent both in the heavens and the earth, and so no compulsion is needed to help a cause which prospers by the force of its own beautiful teachings.

CHAPTER 11
HŪD
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation

According to Ibn-e-'Abbās, Al-Ḥasan, 'Ikrimah, Mujāhid, Qatādah and Jābir bin Zaid this Sūrah was revealed at Mecca and, according to Muqātil, the whole of it belongs to the Meccan period, with the exception of vv. 13,18 and 115, which are considered to have been revealed at Medina.

Subject-Matter

The preceding Sūrah had classified the enemies of God's Messengers under three categories: (a) Those who were completely destroyed; (b) others who were wholly spared; and (c) those who were partly destroyed and partly spared. In the present Chapter the Qur'ān discusses the first category and states that God destroyed the people of Hūd so completely that no trace of them was left behind, and that He raised in their place another people with whom started a new era in human activities. The Sūrah also points out that God watches men and deals with them according to their actions and makes provision for their guidance as circumstances demand. As this provision is made for their good, those who do not benefit by it suffer moral death. In this way the process goes on. And just as when one generation of men passes away it is succeeded by another generation, similarly, when one religious movement perishes, its place is taken by another. The Sūrah further tells us that while worldly progress may be possible for a time without observing Divine commandments, permanent success is granted to those people only—their memory being perpetuated and their name indelibly imprinted on world's history—who are honest and true to God and man. After this reasons are given, why believers triumph over disbelievers and the latter fail in their struggle against Truth. The Sūrah illustrates this Divine practice by citing examples of peoples who were once mighty in power and strong in numbers, but who met with destruction when they rose against the apparently humble followers of God's Messengers—the peoples of Noah, Hūd, Ṣāliḥ, Lot and Shu'aib. The great Patriarch Abraham is also mentioned but only incidentally in the course of the story of Lot. Reference to Abraham is followed by a brief account of Moses, in relation not to the Israelites but to Pharaoh, who along with his arrogant people was destroyed, because he rejected the Divine Message.

Next, believers are warned against associating with people for whom Divine punishment is decreed; for association with such people is calculated naturally to involve them in punishment meant for the latter. Thereafter the Holy Prophet has been told not to worry about the threatened destruction of those of his people who will not believe, for the people of many a Prophet before him had met with a similar fate when they opposed and rejected the Truth. So many instances of Divine punishment have been cited in this Sūrah and such emphasis laid on the Holy Prophet's great responsibilities that he is reported to have said, 'Sūrah Hūd has prematurely aged me' (Manthūr), meaning that the contents of the Sūrah weighed so heavily on his mind that he felt the impact of premature old age. Lastly, however, the Holy Prophet is cheered and comforted with the prophecy that great progress and prosperity await his followers.

1294. The word Fuṣṣilat here has been substituted for Mutashābihāt in 3:8 which word signifies the details of the Quranic teaching. The fundamental teachings of Islam are so unassailable that it is difficult to take exception to them. But, in order to know the whole truth about Islam, a study of both its fundamental teachings and their details is necessary but the details are subordinated to the fundamentals.

1297. God has provided sustenance for all His creatures. He has even provided the means of subsistence for worms and reptiles that dwell in the bowels of the earth. Human reason is at a loss to know how and whence the worms and insects found in such unlimited numbers on and inside the earth get their food. Man who presumes to have solved the mysteries of the universe is not yet fully acquainted with all forms of life, to say nothing of the different kinds of food on which they subsist. But God has made ample provision for them all. The verse points out that God, having supplied the physical needs of the meanest of His creatures, certainly could not have neglected to make similar provision for the moral and spiritual needs of man who is the acme of His creation. The verse refers not only to the temporary and permanent abode of every living thing but also to the utmost limit to which its powers can develop.

8. And [a]He it is Who created the heavens and the earth in six periods,[1299]—and His throne rests on water[1300]—[b]that He might try you which of you is best in conduct. And if thou sayest, 'You shall surely be raised after death,' those who disbelieve will certainly say, 'This is naught but clear deception.'

1298. Mustaqarr and Mustauda' signify not only a place of temporary settlement and of permanent abode but also final or determined limit of a thing both as regards time or place; appointed term; end of one's course (Lane).

1300. As water has been repeatedly described in the Qur'ān as the source of all life (21:31; 25:55; 77:21 & 86:7), the words, His throne rests on water, signify that the great Divine attributes find their manifestation through living creatures, above all through man, who is the culminating point of all creation. These words may also mean that the attributes of God depend for their manifestation on His Word which has been compared to water at several places in the Qur'ān. In the words, you shall surely be raised after death, it is pointed out that this system of creation itself shows that man should have a life after death, for the creation of such a vast universe in which a being with volition and independent will should live, makes it clear that the creation of that being is intended to serve a great purpose. But the life of this world is short-lived, a temporary existence of tests and trials so that, after this temporary abode of tests and trials man must pass on to his permanent or eternal abode of recompense.

1302. It is a peculiarity of the Quranic diction that sometimes it omits the question and only gives the answer, the question being implied in the answer itself. The present verse is an example of this peculiarity. In the preceding verse believers were promised forgiveness and a great reward. Thereupon disbelievers mockingly asked the Holy Prophet, 'Where is the promised reward of which we do not see the slightest sign? You do not have even the money which you need so badly, nor do the angels descend from heaven to help you.' The Qur'ān turns the tables upon them and answers their irony with an irony, saying, 'Ah! How "weighty" is the objection of these people and perhaps, O Prophet, from fear of being unable to answer it, you would hide a part of Our revelation which contains prophecies regarding the prosperity and triumph of Islam! This is only their wishful thinking, their vain and futile hope. Such a thing can never happen.'

1303. The use of plural pronoun 'your' instead of 'thy' shows that the challenge was not necessarily from the Holy Prophet alone, but Muslims in every age could deliver a challenge in these terms. The verse guarantees that the Qur'ān will ever stand unrivalled in its manifold excellent qualities.

Three arguments have been given in this verse in support of the Holy Prophet in the words: (a) 'Who stands upon a clear proof from his Lord,' (b) to testify to whose truth a witness from Him shall follow him,' and (c) 'who was preceded by the Book of Moses.' 'The clear proof from his Lord' was the great moral revolution which the Holy Prophet had brought about in the life of his corrupt and decadent people, and the witnesses who bore testimony to his truth were the Divine Teachers from among his followers who, by their precept and practice, established the truth of Islam and the Qur'ān in every age, the witness par excellence being the Promised Messiah, Founder of the Ahmadiyya Movement; and the words 'was preceded by the Book of Moses' point to the prophecies that are found in the Bible about the Holy Prophet. See 2135.

1308. A beautiful contrast is instituted here between belief and disbelief. A believer is represented as one who is in perfect possession of the faculties of sight and hearing, while the disbeliever is likened to a blind and deaf person.

day.' The latter expression implies greater intensity. Certain punishments are very grievous, but there are 'certain days' the remembrance of which continues to haunt and cause pain even after the lapse of hundreds of years. Whereas the actual 'punishment' causes pain only to those on whom it falls, remembrance of the 'days of a grievous punishment' terrifies even those who come after.

1310. The expression Bādiyur-Ra'yi meaning, at first thought; apparently; without proper consideration (Lane), the words Arādhilunā Bādiyar-Ra'yi signify that the followers of Noah (a) are mean to all outward appearance; (b) their faith is insincere; (c) it is the result of only superficial thinking. It is a pity that men test the claims of a Heavenly Messenger by their self-devised standards and, when he does not satisfy those standards, they deceive themselves with the idea that they had weighed his claims dispassionately and with an open mind and had found them to be false.

(c) Whatever changes may take place in regard to prophecies of punishment, God's immutable purpose never changes, because disbelievers 'cannot frustrate His purpose.'

1312. The verse removes the wrong notion commonly held that being very angry with his people because they did not believe, Noah prayed for their destruction (71:27, 28), for it shows that Noah had prayed for their destruction not of his own accord but God Himself had desired him to do so.

1313. The prayer referred to in 71:27, 28 seems to have been uttered after the verse under comment was revealed. According to the verse under comment Noah was informed of God's decision that no one from among his people would now believe in him. Hence his prayer (71:27, 28) was nothing more than a submission to God's will and decree. All that the prayer meant was that God might carry out His decree about the destruction of his people.

1315. The Deluge was not merely due to the gushing forth of the water from springs. But, as is clear from 54:12, 13, its real cause was the bursting of the clouds. Rain fell in torrents and there was water everywhere and, as generally happens during heavy rain, water also began to gush forth from the depths of the earth, and springs and fountains began to sprout, and thus water, both from the heavens and the earth, flooded the whole land. Noah lived in a mountainous country where springs were found in large numbers.

1316. The words 'of every kind' do not here mean all the animals, but all such animals as were needed by Noah. Surely, the Ark was not big enough to carry a pair of all kinds of animals found in the world. The addition of the word 'two' also shows that as many animals were to be taken as were absolutely necessary.

44. He replied, 'I shall soon betake myself for refuge to a mountain[1317] which will shelter me from the water.' Noah said, 'There is no shelter for anyone this day from the decree of Allāh, except for him to whom He shows mercy.' And the wave came in between the two; so he was among the drowned.

1317. The verse shows that the place where Noah lived was surrounded by mountains. The word Jabal used as a common noun points to the fact that there was a chain of mountains on one of which Noah's son might have sought shelter. In fact, the place appears to have been a valley with mountains rising on all sides. That such a place should become quickly flooded with heavy rain is not extraordinary.

45. And it was said, 'O earth, swallow thy water, and O sky, cease raining.' And the water was made to subside and the matter was decided. And the Ark came to rest on Al-Jūdī.[1317A] And it was said, 'Cursed be the wrongdoing people.'

46. And Noah cried unto his Lord and said, 'My Lord, verily, my son is of my family, and surely Thy promise is true, and Thou art the Most Just of judges.'

1317A. The mountain Al-Jūdī is, according to Yāqūtul-Ḥamwī, a long chain of mountains on the eastern side of the Tigris in the province of Moṣul (Mu'jam). According to Sale, "Al-Jūdī is one of those mountains which divide Armenia on the south from Mesopotamia and that part of Assyria which is inhabited by the Curds, from whom the mountain took the name of Cardu or Gardu, but the Greeks turned it into Gordyoei … The tradition which affirms the Ark to have rested on these mountains must have been very ancient, since it is the tradition of the Chaldeans themselves (Berosus apud Joseph. Antiq...). The relics of the Ark were also to be seen here in the time of Epiphanius... and we are told, the Emperor Heraclius went from the town of Thamanin up to the mountain Al-Jūdī and saw the place of the Ark. There was also formerly a famous monastery, called the 'Monastery of the Ark.' Upon some of these mountains the Nestorians used to celebrate a feast-day on the spot where they supposed the Ark had rested; but in 776 A.D. that monastery was destroyed by lightning" (Sale, pp. 179, 180)... 'Jūdī (Djudi) is a lofty mountain mass in the district of Bohtan, about 25 miles N.E. of Jazīratu ibn-e-'Omar in 37°,30′ N.Lat.. It owes its fame to the Mesopotamian tradition, which identifies it, and not Mount Ararat, the mountain on which Noah's Ark rested... Older exegesis identified the mountain now called Jūdī, or according to Christian authorities the mountains of Gordyene, as the apobaterion of Noah' (Enc. of Islām. vol. I. P. 1059). Babylonian traditions also place the mount Al-Jūdī in Armenia (Jew. Enc. under "Ararat"), and the Bible admits that Babylon was the place where the descendants of Noah lived (Gen. 11:9).

1318. According to this verse only those persons were considered members of Noah's family who had established true relationship with God through him. The pronoun hū in inna-hū may also refer to Noah's prayer for his unrighteous son which act of his was Ghairu Ṣāliḥ i.e. out of place.

1319. 'Amalun (lit. a deed) here means Dhū 'Amalin, i.e. the doer of a deed. The use of the infinitive as active participle when an intensified sense is intended is in harmony with Arabic idiom. See also 2:178, where Birr (lit. righteousness) means a righteous person. An Arab poet says of his she-camel: Innamā hiya Iqbālun wa Idbārū, i.e. she is so restless that she has become the very act of moving forward and backward, meaning the embodiment thereof.

1320. Noah had committed no sin by saying that his son was included in his family. It was only an error of judgment which is human, yet he offered Istighfār which shows that the offering of Istighfār is not necessarily a proof of one's sinfulness. It may also be offered for protection against the evil consequences of human weaknesses or those of errors of judgment.

1321. The verse shows that apart from the progeny of Noah the progeny of there will be other peoples whom We shall grant provision for a time, then shall a grievous punishment overtake them from Us.'

those believers who were with him in the Ark also were saved from the Deluge and that they prospered and multiplied. Scholars now subscribe to the view that most of the inhabitants of the earth are descended from Noah.

The story of the Deluge with some variations is to be found in the traditions and literature of different countries (Enc. Rel. & Eth.; Enc. Bib. & Enc. Brit. under "Deluge"). The catastrophe seems to have taken place somewhere near the dawn of human civilization. It is a well-known historical fact that whenever a people, comparatively more advanced in culture and civilization, have come to settle in a country, they have either blotted out of existence the less civilized inhabitants of the land or have greatly weakened them. Thus it appears that when the descendants of Noah and those of his companions who were the founders of human civilization spread to other lands, because they were more powerful than the people already living there, they either exterminated them or absorbed them. Thus they must have introduced into all the countries they subjugated their own traditions and customs; and consequently the tradition about the Deluge must also have come to be introduced into other lands. With the lapse of time however, the immigrants ceased to have any connection with their original home and the catastrophe consequently came to be regarded as a local occurrence, with the result that local names of persons and places came to be substituted for the original names. So the Deluge was not a universal visitation, nor should the traditions of different lands be taken to point to separate floods.

1322. The Quranic accounts of the various Prophets are not meant as mere stories. They are given in the Qur'ān because they contain a prophetic allusion to the analogous events that were to occur in the life of the Holy Prophet himself.

1323. Some European critics have denied the very existence of the Adites. They say that none of the inscriptions that have so far been discovered in Arabia mention ʻĀd as the name of any people in that country, and therefore they allege that the Qur'ān has only quoted one of the popular legends that were current among the Arabs in the Holy Prophet's time. This objection is based on a misunderstanding. In fact, sections of the human race are generally known by two sets of names, one representing the whole race and the other some particular group thereof. ʻĀd was not the name of a single tribe but of a group of tribes, whose different sections rose to power at different times. They left behind them inscriptions bearing the name of particular groups. But they all belonged to the main ʻĀd family. The fact that this name is found in ancient books of geography also shows that a people of the name of ʻĀd did indeed live. The geographical works compiled in Greece state that in the pre-Christian era, Yemen was ruled by a tribe called Adramitai who were none other than the ʻĀd who have been called ʻĀd-e-Iram in the Qur'ān. The termination of the Greek name is a noun-suffix, the real name being ʻAdram which is a corruption of ʻĀd-e-Iram (Al-ʻArabu Qablil-Islām). The ʻĀd tribe mentioned in the Qur'ān was called Iram. This Iram section of the Adites possessed a powerful kingdom which lasted up to 500 B.C. Their language was Aramaic, which is akin to Hebrew. The Aramaic Kingdom was established after the fall of the Semitic Kingdom and it included in its boundaries the whole of Mesopotamia, Palestine, Syria and Chaldea. Archaeological researchers have discovered traces of this Kingdom. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary."

The ʻĀd tribe lived immediately after the people of Noah (7:70). They built monuments on elevated places (26:129). There still exist ruins of big buildings in Arabia. The history of these people has now become wrapped in obscurity and only some remains of their buildings are to be seen (46:26). The territory in which these people lived is called Aḥqāf (46:22), which, literally meaning meandering and zigzag sand-hills, is the name given to two parts of Arabia, one in the south, known as the Southern Aḥqāf, the other in the north, called the Northern Aḥqāf. These tracts are fertile, but as they lie near the desert, sand-hills are caused there by the sand of the desert being heaped up by the wind. These sand-hills may have been formed when ʻĀd were punished by a 1325A. Bu‘d (which is derived from Ba‘uda signifying, he was or became distant; he perished; he was cursed) means, remoteness; curse, malediction. They say Bu‘dalla-hū, i.e. may he be cursed, may he perish (Lane).

1326. Thamūd, being an Arabic word, shows that the tribe belonged to the Arab stock. It is futile to say that Ṣāliḥ may be the translation of a foreign name, for the Qur’ān has adopted all foreign names without translating them such as Mūsā (Moses), Hārūn (Aaron), Yūnus (Jonah) and Zakariyyā (Zachariah). The Thamūd were successors to the ‘Ād (7:75) which means that the ‘Ād were also an Arab race. Again, the ‘Ād, in their turn, were successors to the people of Noah. This shows that Noah was also an Arab. In fact, Noah was raised in Mesopotamia, which territory was in early times under Arab rule. Greek historians placed the Thamūd tribe in a period not long before the Christian era. Ḥijr or Agra, as they call it, is given as their home. They call them Thamudeni and mention a place near Ḥijr which, according to them, the Arabs called Fajjun-Nāqah. Ptolemy (140 B.C.) says that near Ḥijr is a place known as Badanata. Abū Ismā‘īl, author of the 'Futūḥush-Shām,' says, 'The tribe of Thamūd filled the land between Boṣra (in Syria) and Aden and ruled there. Perhaps they were migrating to the north.' Al-Ḥijr, (also known as Madā’inu Ṣāliḥ) seems to have been the capital of these people. It lies between Medina and Tabūk, and the valley in which it is situated is called Wādī Qurā. It is worthy of note that accounts of the Prophets Hūd and Ṣāliḥ have been given at various places in the Qur’ān and everywhere the order observed is the same, viz. the account of Hūd precedes that of Ṣāliḥ, which is the true chronological order. This shows that the Qur’ān gives accurately and in their true historical order the facts of history long consigned to oblivion and wrapped in obscurity. According to some, Thamūd is only another name of ‘Ād-e-Thāniyah or the second ‘Ād, while according to others they came after the second ‘Ād. The Thamūd ruled over plains and hills (7:75) and their country abounded in springs and gardens wherein grew date palms of excellent quality. They also cultivated land and grew corn (26:148, 149).

This Quranic account is corroborated by the inscription said to have been read by some Muslims during the reign of Mu'āwiyah. Their decline seems to have begun soon after the time of Ṣāliḥ, for only a few centuries after his time their name fails to find mention among victorious nations. Arabia was invaded by an Assyrian king (722-705 B.C.) and the name Thamūd is found mentioned among the conquered tribes in an inscription which he caused to be engraved in memory of his victory. Of the Greek historians, Didorus (80 B.C.), Pliny (79 B.C.) and Ptolemy make mention of the Thamūd. When Justinian, the Roman Emperor, invaded Arabia, his army included 300 Thamūdi soldiers, but before the advent of Islām this tribe had become altogether extinct. See 1327. The respite of three days was probably meant as a last chance for repentance of which the unlucky people did not avail themselves.

1328. Seven different words and expressions have been used in the Qur'ān to describe the punishment which overtook the tribe of Thamūd. In the present verse and in 54:32, the word used is Ṣaiḥah (punishment); in 7:79, Rajfah (an earthquake); in 26:159 simply 'Adhāb (chastisement); in 27:52, Dammarnā-hum (We utterly destroyed them); in 51:45, Ṣā'iqah (thunderbolt; or any destructive punishment); in 69:6, Ṭāghiyah (an extraordinary punishment); and in 91:15, Damdama 'Alaihim (He destroyed them completely). Though the words and expressions employed to describe the visitation seem to be different in form, yet they possess no discrepancy in meaning. The words which, however, appear to be contradictory, are Rajfah, Ṣaiḥah, Ṣā'iqah and Ṭāghiyah. As the last three also mean punishment, therefore if the tribe of Thamūd were destroyed by means of an earthquake all the above words may

1329. In v. 61 the words 'the people of Hūd' have been added to the word, 'Ād, for an historical reason, for 'Ād is, in fact, the name of two tribes, the first 'Ād and the second 'Ād, and the words 'the people of Hūd' have been added to show that it is the first and not the second 'Ād that is meant there. But as Thamūd was the name of one tribe only, the words 'the people of Ṣāliḥ' have been omitted, for their addition would have served no useful purpose.

1330. There exists much difference of opinion as to who the 'messengers' were. Some hold them to be human beings, others think that they were angels. The former view appears to be more akin to truth and reality. Both Abraham and Lot being strangers in the land, it is quite possible that God had enjoined some pious men of that locality to take Lot to a safe place before the visitation actually overtook his people. It should also be remembered that these 'messengers' had not come to give the first warning of the punishment. Lot's people had already been threatened with punishment (15:65). The 'messengers' came only to inform him that the appointed hour of the threatened punishment had arrived.

1331. Abraham's real name was Abram. After the birth of Ishmael, according to God's own command, he came to be called Abraham which means the 'Father of multitudes' or the 'Father of many nations.' One branch of his progeny, the Israelites, lived in Canaan and the other, the Ishmaelites, in Arabia.

1332. Abraham at first took the 'messengers' to be ordinary wayfarers, but when they refrained from eating of the roasted calf he realized that they were on some special mission which he had failed to understand. The words, conceived fear of them, do not mean that Abraham was afraid of the strangers but that, when they did not partake of the food, he feared that he might have done something against the etiquette of hospitality. The guests, it appears, read Abraham's perturbed state of mind from the uneasy expression of his face, so they at once removed his anxiety by telling him that they were in no way displeased and that the reason why they did not partake of food was that their dreadful mission had made them disinclined to eat. This answer of the visitors also shows that they were not angels for had they been angels, they would have said that being not human they could not partake of food.

Lot was the ancestor of the Palestinian peoples, Moab and Ammon, and as the son of Haran and the grandson of Terah, he was Abraham's nephew. He joined Abraham in Canaan.

78. And [b]when Our messengers came to Lot, he was grieved on their account and felt helpless[1335] for them and he said, 'This is a distressful day.'

[a]9:114. [b]29:34.

1333. In this verse the words 'people of the house' are definitely applied to the wife of Abraham, because no child had yet been born to her. In fact, when the expression Ahlul-Bait is used in the Qur'ān in respect of a Prophet it generally applies to his wife or wives (28:13; 33:34).

1334. See Gen. 18:21-33

1335. The expression, Ḍāqa bil-Amri Dhar'an, means, he lacked ability, power or strength to do the thing, Dhar' meaning power or ability: or the expression means, the thing or affair was rendered difficult or distressing to him (Lane). The words in the text mean, he found himself helpless or unable to protect them.

He said, 'O my people, [b]these are my daughters; they are purer for you.[1337] So fear Allāh and do not disgrace me in the presence of my guests. Is there not among you one right-minded man?'

1336. The inhabitants of the two towns, Sodom and Gomorrah, had adopted the calling of the road and used to plunder wayfarers (Jew. Enc. under "Sodom"). Naturally they were constantly apprehensive of reprisals, particularly the inhabitants of Sodom who were practically in a state of war with their neighbours (Gen. 14). They would not welcome strangers into their town. Lot, like all Prophets of God, naturally would look after the comfort of the strangers and entertain them (15:71). His people, apprehensive as they were, had repeatedly warned him to give up that practice, so when he brought 'the messengers,' who were strangers, into his house they became infuriated and hastened to him with angry faces, because they thought they now had got a suitable opportunity to punish him for giving shelter to strangers in defiance of their repeated protests (15:68-71).

1337. The verse signifies that in view of their past mischievous behaviour Lot feared lest his people should do any mischief and thus disgrace him in the presence of his guests. There is no reference here to any particular mischief. They were wicked people, therefore, Lot was naturally apprehensive that they might do him some kind of harm. He therefore said to them that if they really entertained fear that he might do them harm in league with the strangers, they had his daughters in their custody and they could wreak vengeance on him by punishing them. That was a better and purer course for them to adopt, for in that way they would also avoid the disgraceful act of insulting his guests. Or the meaning may be that, being a venerable old man of the town, Lot referred to their own wives as his daughters who, he said, were purer for them.

1338. When Lot offered his daughters who were married in the town (Gen. 19:15) as hostages, his people refused to accept the offer, for that was against their custom to accept females as hostages (Enc. Brit.). The words, 'we have no claim against thy daughters,' show that they had not come with the motives which most Commentators ascribe to them, for a people who had become so depraved and corrupt in their morals as the people of Lot were, would raise no question of claim or no claim, right or no right with regard to the satisfaction of their carnal passions. The words, 'thou surely knowest what we desire' mean, 'you know that we want the strangers to be handed over to us.'

1338A. I shall pray to God to be saved from the humiliation you seek to inflict upon me by insisting that I should turn away my guests.

1340. Midian was a son of Abraham from his third wife, Keturah (Gen. 25:1, 2). His descendants were all called Midian. Their metropolis was also called Midian. This town was situated on the Gulf of 'Aqabah, on the Arabian coast, at a distance of some six or seven miles from the sea. The descendants of Midian lived in the north of the Ḥijāz and it is they who built this town. It was there that Moses fled for refuge from Pharaoh and it was in the neighbourhood of Midian that he stayed with the Israelites after crossing the Red Sea. See also 1010.

102. And [c]We did not wrong them, but they wronged themselves,[1345] and their gods on whom they called instead of Allāh were of no avail to them at all when the decree of punishment of thy Lord came to pass; and they added to them naught but perdition.

1343B. Wird is derived from Warada and means, time; place and turn of watering; people or cattle coming to a watering place (Aqrab).

1344. Rifd meaning a gift or support or aid (Lane), the verse may signify that Pharaoh, whom his people regarded as their support against God will prove an evil support for them on the Day of Resurrection, for he not only will land them into Hell, but himself will go into it with them.

1345. The Qur'ān repeatedly emphasizes the fact that God never punishes a people unjustly and that it is their own misdeeds that bring down punishment upon them. It denies the theory of predestination or of man's being the victim of a blind fate. It also contradicts the view that God makes nations rise and fall arbitrarily, without a just or real cause. This is why, wherever it speaks of punishment, it does not fail to add that punishment or reward is the result of man's own doings.

1346. 'sign' means, 'a lesson.'

1347. Man is not wholly independent. He is influenced by his environment, education and heredity; so in order to judge rightly a particular action of his it is necessary to take into consideration all the conditions and circumstances which lead to and influence it. Hence, for the full realization of the true nature of man's actions and to show that the seemingly unfair and inexplicable determination in dealing out different punishments and rewards to different persons by God is not capricious or arbitrary but perfectly just and fair, being based on the extent to which the individual is independent or free in his actions, it was necessary that there should have been fixed a certain day when all men should assemble, attended by all conditions and circumstances under which they worked and the various causes and reasons that led to their actions, so that these circumstances and causes may be jointly considered while determining the nature of their rewards and punishments.

1348. Ajal, meaning both a period and the end of a period, is of two kinds, (a) that which is revocable or cancellable, and (b) that which is not revoked or cancelled. The revocable "term" moves within a known circle within which it is liable to change according to circumstances. For instance, the age of a man has certain limits; it can decrease or increase within those limits. But the "term" which cannot be abrogated and is irrevocable concerns the destruction of a whole people.

107. As for the unfortunate, [b]they shall be in the Fire, wherein there will be for them sighing and sobbing,[1349]

109. [d]But as for the fortunate, they shall be in Heaven, abiding therein so long as the heavens and the earth endure save as thy Lord may wish—a gift that shall not be cut off.[1351]

1349. Zafīr means, the beginning of the cry of an ass and Shahīq is the ending thereof (Lane). The disbelievers have been likened in the verse to an ass which is a timid and stupid animal, signifying that they have not the courage of their convictions and do not benefit by knowledge.

1350. The Quranic expression is an idiom signifying a very prolonged period. The Qur'ān teaches that the punishment of Hell is not eternal.

1351. According to the Hindu religion, both Heaven and Hell (i.e. rewards and punishments) possess a limited duration; and man, after undergoing the punishment, or reaping the reward of his deeds is sent back to this world. Of the Semitic religions, Judaism denies Paradise to non-Jews while Jews are regarded as almost free from the torture of Hell. According to Christians, both Heaven and Hell are eternal, although some of their sects hold the belief that Heaven will at last come to an end (Tafsīr-e-Kabīr). Islām fundamentally differs from all these religions in this respect. According to it Heaven is eternal and everlasting, while Hell is temporary and of limited duration. Imām Aḥmad bin Ḥambal quotes a saying of the Holy Prophet, as reported by ‘Abdullāh bin ‘Amr bin al-‘Āṣ to the effect: 'There will come on Hell a day when its shutters will strike against each other and there will be none left in it. That will happen after the inmates of Hell will have lived in it for centuries' (Musnad). According to this tradition, the word Khālidīn (abiding) used with regard to Hell only means 'remaining for long centuries.' ‘Abdullāh bin ‘Umar and Jābir agree with Imām Ḥanbal. Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī also quotes an identical Ḥadīth (Bukhārī). Some eminent religious authorities, among them Ibn-e-Taimiyyah & Ibn-e-Qayyim, however, hold that though wicked disbelievers will deserve to be kept in Hell for ever, Hell itself will one day cease to exist through God’s mercy, and when there is no Hell, there will naturally be no inmates of Hell (Fatḥ). The Qur’ān has used the words, a reward that will never end (41:9; 84:26; 95:7) about Heaven but no such expression has been used with regard to Hell. Moreover, in vv. 101:10-12, Hell is compared to a mother, and the embryo remains in the mother’s womb until the child’s body is formed and its different organs become complete. Similarly, those unfortunate persons who are cast into Hell will remain there till their faculties are fully developed so as to enable them to see the beautiful face of the Lord.

فَلَا تَكُ فِي مِرْيَةٍ مِّمَّا يَعْبُدُ هَٰؤُلَاءِ ۚ مَا يَعْبُدُونَ إِلَّا كَمَا يَعْبُدُ آبَاؤُهُم مِّن قَبْلُ ۚ وَإِنَّا لَمُوَفُّوهُمْ نَصِيبَهُمْ غَيْرَ مَنقُوصٍ ﴿١١٠﴾ ع ١٤

1352. So serious was the guilt of men that if there had not been a decree people are in a disquieting doubt concerning it.

preordained that mankind had been created for spiritual progress and that eventually they would become the object of Divine mercy (7:157; 11:120; 51:57), they would have been destroyed long ago.

1353. The Holy Prophet alone was not required to mould his own life in accordance with Divine Will. He had to see that all those who believed in him also followed his example. It was the realization of this grave dual responsibility which weighed so heavily upon him as to have rendered him prematurely aged (Baihaqī).

1354. As man is influenced by his environments and, if his surroundings are corrupt, the corruption thereof is sure to affect him sooner or later, so, in the present verse the believers are enjoined to sever all connections with the wicked and the unjust even though they are their own kith and kin.

117. Why, then, were there not among the generations before you persons possessed of understanding, who would have forbidden corruption in the earth, except a few among them whom We saved? But [b]the wrongdoers pursued the enjoyment of the good things which they were given in plenty, and they became guilty.

119. And [d]if thy Lord had enforced His Will, He would have surely made mankind one people; but they would not cease to differ;

124. And [d]to Allāh belongs the unseen in the heavens and the earth, and to Him shall the whole affair be referred. So worship Him and put thy trust in Him alone. And thy Lord is not unmindful of what you do.

1355. Makānah is derived from Kāna or Makāna and means, station or power (Aqrab). The verse means that though the great prophecies made in this Sūrah about the ultimate triumph of Islām and the defeat and discomfiture of disbelievers appear to be incredible and impossible of fulfilment at the present time, yet nothing is impossible with God and these prophecies will surely come to pass.

CHAPTER 12

YŪSUF

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation, Context and Subject-Matter

According to most Companions of the Holy Prophet, the whole of this Sūrah was revealed at Mecca; but, according to Ibn-e-'Abbās and Qatādah, verses 2-4 were revealed after Hijrah. As already pointed out, Chapter 10 (Sūrah Yūnus) deals with both aspects of God's dealings with man—His punishment and mercy. But whereas Chapter 11 (Sūrah Hūd) deals with the subject of Divine punishment, the present Chapter (Chapter 12) deals with that of God's mercy. The Sūrah which deals with God's punishment (Hūd) has been placed before the present Sūrah which deals with His mercy, because the enemies of the Holy Prophet were to be shown mercy after they had been punished for their misdeeds. The Sūrah, however, possesses one peculiarity. The whole of it deals with the life-story of only one Prophet—Joseph. In this it differs from all other *Sūrah*s. The reason for this peculiarity is that the life of the Prophet Joseph bears a very close resemblance to that of the Holy Prophet, even in minor details. The entire Sūrah has been devoted to a somewhat detailed account of the Prophet Joseph's life in order that it might serve as a forewarning of the incidents that were to occur during the lifetime of the Holy Prophet. In Chapter 10 the story of the Prophet Jonah was chosen as an illustration of Divine mercy, while in the detailed account given in the present Chapter the example of Joseph has been cited as an illustration for that purpose. Two reasons may be given for this:

(1) The lives of Jonah and that of the Holy Prophet resemble each other only in their closing stages but Joseph's life resembles that of the Holy Prophet even in small details.

(2) Although the case of Jonah resembles that of the Holy Prophet in that as, the peoples of both Jonah and the Holy Prophet were ultimately pardoned through God's mercy, the resemblance between the two is only partial, but the resemblance between Joseph and the Holy Prophet, especially in the way in which God treated Joseph's brethren and the Holy Prophet's people is very close and is almost complete. The mercy shown to Jonah's people was the direct result of God's grace, Jonah having no hand in it, but the declaration of pardon for Joseph's brethren was made by Joseph himself, and so in the case of the Quraish of Mecca the announcement of their full and unqualified forgiveness came directly from the Holy Prophet's own mouth.

سُوْرَةُ يُوْسُفَ مَكِّيَّةٌ ١٢ — ايـاتها ١١٢ — ركوعاتها ١٢

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ①

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

اِنَّآ اَنْزَلْنٰهُ قُرْءٰنًا عَرَبِيًّا لَّعَلَّكُمْ تَعْقِلُوْنَ ③

3. [d]We have revealed it—the Qur'ān in Arabic[1357]—that you may understand.

1356. Mubīn (clear) being active participle from Abāna, which is used both as transitive and intransitive, means, (1) that which itself is clear and manifest; (2) that which makes other things clear and (3) that which cuts off one thing from another and renders it distinct and separate from it (Lane). The word as its meanings show, points to three salient features of the Qur'ān, viz. (1) that it not only clearly states facts and makes prophecies and lays down laws and ordinances but also supports and substantiates what it says and claims by solid arguments and sound reasons; (2) that it is not only clear in itself but makes clear the obscurities and ambiguities that are to be found in previous revealed Scriptures; and (3) that all that is essential for the attainment of nearness to God and relates to the laws of the Sharī'ah, ethics and to matters of belief has been made quite clear in it. This is a quality which the Qur'ān possesses to the entire exclusion of all other revealed Books. Other Scriptures are only Mustabīn (clear in themselves) but the Qur'ān is not only Mustabīn but is also Mubīn (makes clear the obscurities that are to be found in other Books). What adds to the beauty of the Qur'ān as a "clear and perspicuous Book" is that all its teachings are in perfect harmony with human nature and also with the laws of nature.

1357. 'Arabiyy is derived from 'Ariba or 'Aruba. 'Aribatul-Bi'ru means, the well contained much water. 'Arubar-Rajulu means, the man spoke clearly, plainly or distinctly after being barbarous in speech; he was or became brisk or lively. The expression, Qur'ānan 'Arabiyyan, therefore would mean, (1) a Book which is most extensively and regularly read and (2) which can express its meanings in a clear, eloquent and comprehensive language (Lane). The word 'Arabiyy conveys the sense of fullness, abundance and clearness, and the Arabic language is so called because its roots are innumerable and are full of meanings and because it is most expressive, eloquent and comprehensive. It possesses suitable words and phrases for the full expression of all sorts of ideas and shades of meaning. Any topic can be discussed in this language with a precision and thoroughness unmatched in any other. European scholars have

4. We narrate unto thee the best of narrative in that We have revealed to thee this Qur'ān though thou wast, before this, among those unaware of the truth.[1358]

اِذْ قَالَ يُوْسُفُ لِاَبِيْهِ يٰٓاَبَتِ اِنِّيْ رَاَيْتُ
اَحَدَ عَشَرَ كَوْكَبًا وَّالشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَرَ
رَاَيْتُهُمْ لِيْ سٰجِدِيْنَ ۝

5. Remember the time [a]when Joseph[1359] said to his father, 'O my father, I saw in a dream eleven stars and the sun and the moon—I saw them making obeisance to me.'[1360] had to admit that Arabic language is complete in respect of its roots. It consists of hundreds of thousands of roots which are pregnant with a vast variety of meanings. Ibn-e-Jinnī, an eminent linguist has claimed, on the authority of another very eminent linguist, Abū 'Alī, that even the letters of the Arabic language possess clear and definite meanings. For instance, he declared that the letters Mīm, Lām and Kāf, in whatever combination they occur, express the idea of 'power,' which is more or less common to all the words that are formed with these letters or are derived from this root. In the preceding verse the Qur'ān was called 'the Book,' which implied a prophecy that it would always continue to be preserved in the form of a book. In the present verse it has been called 'the Qur'ān,' which constitutes a prophecy that it will be very widely read and studied. It is a fact, which no opponent of Islām can justifiably deny that no other book is so widely and frequently read as the Qur'ān. Professor Noldeke says, 'since the use of the Koran in public worship, in schools and otherwise, is much more extensive than, for example, the reading of the Bible in most Christian countries, it has been truly described as the most widely read book in existence' (Enc. Brit. 9th Edition).

1358. The reason why the story of Joseph was revealed to the Holy Prophet in such detail is that it contains many prophetic allusions to his own life. The whole story was to be, as it were, re-enacted in the person of the Holy Prophet himself and his brethren, the Quraish.

1359. Joseph was the twelfth son of Prophet Jacob, otherwise known as Israel. He was the elder of the two sons of Rachel. The meaning given to the name is 'shall add,' i.e. 'The Lord shall add to me another son' (Gen. 30:24).

1360. The Bible mentions the sun and the moon first and the eleven stars afterwards, as making obeisance to Joseph (Gen. 37:9), but the Qur'ān reverses the order; and the actual facts of history support the order followed

قَالَ يٰبُنَيَّ لَا تَقْصُصْ رُءْيَاكَ عَلٰٓى

6. He said, 'O my dear son, relate not thy dream to thy brothers, lest they contrive a plot against thee, [a]for Satan is to man an open enemy;

7. 'And thus, as thou hast seen, thy Lord shalt choose thee and [b]teach thee the interpretation of things Divine and perfect His favour upon thee and upon the family of Jacob[1361] as He perfected it upon thy two forefathers—Abraham and Isaac. Verily, thy Lord is All-Knowing, Wise.'

8. Surely, in Joseph and his brethren there are Signs for the inquirers;

اِذْ قَالُوْا لَيُوْسُفُ وَاَخُوْهُ اَحَبُّ اِلٰٓى
اَبِيْنَا مِنَّا وَنَحْنُ عُصْبَةٌ ؕ اِنَّ اَبَانَا لَفِيْ

9. When they said to each other, 'Verily, Joseph and his brother are dearer to our father than we are, although by the Qur'ān, for it was the brethren of Joseph (the eleven stars) who met him first and made obeisance to him, and his parents came afterwards. The verse signifies that the parents and brethren of Joseph would submit to his authority.

1361. The name is explained in the Bible as 'the supplanter' (Gen. 27:36). It is the prevalent critical opinion that Ya'qūb (Jacob) is really a shortened form of Ya'ākobel admitting several meanings such as 'God follows' or 'God rewards.' Jacob was the son of Isaac and Rebekah and the grandson of Abraham and the traditional ancestor of the people of Israel and known as the Third Patriarch (Enc. Bib. & Jew. Enc.).

we are a strong party.[1362] [a]Surely, our father is in manifest error;

اقْتُلُوْا يُوْسُفَ اَوِ اطْرَحُوْهُ اَرْضًا يَّخْلُ

10. So contrive to kill Joseph[1363] or cast him out to some distant land, so that your father's favour may become exclusively yours, and you can thereafter repent and become a righteous people.'

قَالَ قَآئِلٌ مِّنْهُمْ لَا تَقْتُلُوْا يُوْسُفَ
وَاَلْقُوْهُ فِيْ غَيٰبَتِ الْجُبِّ يَلْتَقِطْهُ
بَعْضُ السَّيَّارَةِ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ فٰعِلِيْنَ ۱۱

11. One[1364] of them said, 'Kill not Joseph, but if you must do something, cast him into the bottom of a deep well; some of the travellers will pick him up.'

قَالُوْا يٰۤاَبَانَا مَا لَكَ لَا تَاْمَنَّا عَلٰى يُوْسُفَ
وَاِنَّا لَهٗ لَنٰصِحُوْنَ ۱۲

12. They said, 'O our father, why dost thou not trust us with respect to Joseph, when we are certainly his sincere well-wishers?

اَرْسِلْهُ مَعَنَا غَدًا يَّرْتَعْ وَيَلْعَبْ وَاِنَّا
لَهٗ لَحٰفِظُوْنَ ۱۳

13. 'Send him with us tomorrow that he may enjoy himself and play, and we shall surely keep guard over him.'

[a]12:96.

1362. Like Joseph's brothers who were angry that instead of themselves, who, as they imagined, were superior to him in every respect, he had won the affection of their father and had become the centre of his attention, the Quraish leaders said that the Qur'ān ought to have been revealed to one of the great men of Mecca or Ṭā'if (43:32). They looked upon the Holy Prophet as too small a person to be selected for the exalted office of a Prophet.

1363. Just as the brothers of Joseph plotted to kill him, the Quraish also conspired to put the Holy Prophet to death (8:31).

1364. Reuben (Gen. 37:22).

قَالَ اِنِّیْ لَیَحْزُنُنِیْۤ اَنْ تَذْهَبُوْا بِهٖ وَاَخَافُ اَنْ یَّاْكُلَهُ الذِّئْبُ وَاَنْتُمْ عَنْهُ غٰفِلُوْنَ ﴿۱۴﴾

14. He said, 'It grieves me that you should take him away, and I fear lest the wolf should devour[1365] him while you are heedless of him.'

قَالُوْا لَىِٕنْ اَكَلَهُ الذِّئْبُ وَنَحْنُ عُصْبَةٌ اِنَّاۤ اِذًا لَّخٰسِرُوْنَ ﴿۱۵﴾

15. They said, 'Surely, if the wolf should devour him while we are a strong party, then we shall indeed be great losers.'

فَلَمَّا ذَهَبُوْا بِهٖ وَاَجْمَعُوْۤا اَنْ یَّجْعَلُوْهُ فِیْ غَیٰبَتِ الْجُبِّ ۚ وَاَوْحَیْنَاۤ اِلَیْهِ لَتُنَبِّئَنَّهُمْ بِاَمْرِهِمْ هٰذَا وَهُمْ لَا یَشْعُرُوْنَ ﴿۱۶﴾

16. So, when they took him away, and agreed to put him into the bottom of a deep well, and carried out their malicious design, We sent revelation to him, saying, 'Thou shalt surely one day tell them of this affair of theirs, and they did not know.'

وَجَآءُوْۤ اَبَاهُمْ عِشَآءً یَّبْكُوْنَ ﴿۱۷﴾ؕ

17. And they came to their father in the evening, weeping.

قَالُوْا یٰۤاَبَانَاۤ اِنَّا ذَهَبْنَا نَسْتَبِقُ وَتَرَكْنَا یُوْسُفَ عِنْدَ مَتَاعِنَا فَاَكَلَهُ الذِّئْبُ ۚ وَمَاۤ اَنْتَ بِمُؤْمِنٍ لَّنَا وَلَوْ كُنَّا صٰدِقِیْنَ ﴿۱۸﴾ ع

18. They said, 'O our father, we went forth racing with one another and left Joseph with our things, and the wolf devoured him, but thou wilt not believe us though we are telling the truth.[1366]

1365. It appears from this verse that Jacob had already been informed by God in a general way of the plot of Joseph's brothers to kill him. So, as if pre-arraigning them, he used the same words which they were to use later in extenuation of their heinous crime.

1366. The words bespoke their nervousness and betrayed their guilty minds.

وَجَآءُوْ عَلٰى قَمِيْصِهٖ بِدَمٍ كَذِبٍ ؕ قَالَ
بَلْ سَوَّلَتْ لَكُمْ اَنْفُسُكُمْ اَمْرًا ؕ فَصَبْرٌ
جَمِيْلٌ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ الْمُسْتَعَانُ عَلٰى مَا
تَصِفُوْنَ ﴿۱۹﴾

19. And they came with false blood on his shirt. [a]He said, 'This what you say is not true but your souls have made a great thing appear light in your eyes.[1367] So comely patience is now called for. And it is Allāh alone Whose help is to be sought against what you assert.'

وَجَآءَتْ سَيَّارَةٌ فَاَرْسَلُوْا وَارِدَهُمْ
فَاَدْلٰى دَلْوَهٗ ؕ قَالَ يٰبُشْرٰى هٰذَا غُلٰمٌ ؕ
وَاَسَرُّوْهُ بِضَاعَةً ؕ وَاللّٰهُ عَلِيْمٌۢ بِمَا
يَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿۲۰﴾

20. And there came a caravan of travellers and they sent their water-drawer. And he let down his bucket into the well. 'Oh, good news!' said he, 'Here is a youth!' And they hid him as a piece of merchandise,[1368] and Allāh well knew what they did.

وَشَرَوْهُ بِثَمَنٍۭ بَخْسٍ دَرَاهِمَ

21. And they sold him for a paltry price, a few dirhems, and they were not at all keen on it.[1368A]

R. 3.

وَقَالَ الَّذِى اشْتَرٰىهُ مِنْ مِّصْرَ لِامْرَاَتِهٖٓ

[a]12:84.

1367. These words indicate that Jacob regarded the report of his sons as a concocted story.

1368. The members of the caravan looked upon Joseph as a precious asset.

1368A. The particle hi in the expression fīhi may mean either 'him' or 'it,' standing either for Joseph or price. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary."

1369. The Egyptian who bought Joseph is known as Potiphar in Jewish literature (Enc. Bib. & Gen. 39:1). He was captain of the royal guard, an officer of high rank in ancient times.

نَتَّخِذَهٗ وَلَدًا وَّكَذٰلِكَ مَكَّنَّا لِيُوْسُفَ

24. And she, in whose house he was, sought to seduce[1370] him against his will. And she bolted the doors, and said, 'Now come.'[1371] He said, 'I seek refuge with Allāh. He is my Lord.[1372] He has made my stay with you honourable. Verily, the wrongdoers never prosper.'

وَلَقَدْ هَمَّتْ بِهٖ ۚ وَهَمَّ بِهَا لَوْلَآ اَنْ رَّاٰ

25. And she made up her mind with regard to him, to

[a]12:57. [b]28:15.

1370. Rāwada-hū means, he endeavoured or sought to turn him to or from a thing by blandishments or deceitful arts (Lane).

1371. Haita meaning, 'come or come forward' or 'hasten,' and the expression haita laka means, 'come thou' or 'now come;' also, 'come I am ready for thee or I am ready to receive thee' (Lane & Mufradāt).

1372. The verse shows that the woman who sought to seduce Joseph failed in her efforts and that Joseph successfully resisted her evil suggestion. The words, 'He is my Lord,' refer to God, and not to Joseph's Egyptian master, as some Commentators have wrongly supposed.

بُرْهَانَ رَبِّهٖ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ لِنَصْرِفَ عَنْهُ
السُّوْٓءَ وَالْفَحْشَآءَ ؕ اِنَّهٗ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا

seduce him and he made up his mind with regard to her[1373] to resist her. If he had not seen manifest Sign of his Lord,[1374] he could not have shown such determination. Thus did it come about that We might turn away from him all evil and indecency. Surely, he was one of Our chosen servants.[1375]

وَاسْتَبَقَا الْبَابَ وَقَدَّتْ قَمِيْصَهٗ مِنْ دُبُرٍ
وَّاَلْفَيَا سَيِّدَهَا لَدَا الْبَابِ ؕ قَالَتْ مَا
جَزَآءُ مَنْ اَرَادَ بِاَهْلِكَ سُوْٓءًا اِلَّآ اَنْ
يُّسْجَنَ اَوْ عَذَابٌ اَلِيْمٌ ﴿۲۶﴾

26. And they both raced to the door, and in the struggle she tore his shirt from behind, and they found her lord at the door. She said to him, 'What shall be the punishment of one who intended evil to thy wife, save imprisonment or a grievous chastisement?'

1373. The wife of Joseph's master intended a thing about Joseph (i.e. copulation). Similarly, Joseph intended a thing about her, i.e. resisting her evil intention. That Joseph did not intend anything evil is clear from the previous verse. His only object was to dissuade her from her evil purpose.

1374. By 'manifest Sign' are meant the heavenly Signs which Joseph had already witnessed, e.g. the wonderful dream which foretold his future greatness (v. 5), the revelation he had received when cast into the well, which also pointed to his later eminence and glory (v. 16) and also his being taken out alive from the well.

1375. Just as an attempt was made to tempt Joseph away from the path of piety and rectitude, similarly, the idolaters of Mecca made an unsuccessful attempt to make the Holy Prophet give up preaching the Unity of God by offering to make him their king or to collect great wealth for him or to give him in marriage the most beautiful girl in Arabia. The offer was of course contemptuously rejected by the Holy Prophet with the historic words, 'If you place the sun on my right hand and the moon on my left hand, even then I will not give up preaching God's Unity (Hishām).

قَالَ هِيَ رَاوَدَتْنِي عَنْ نَّفْسِي وَشَهِدَ
شَاهِدٌ مِّنْ اَهْلِهَا ۚ اِنْ كَانَ قَمِيْصُهٗ قُدَّ
مِنْ قُبُلٍ فَصَدَقَتْ وَهُوَ مِنَ الْكٰذِبِيْنَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27. Joseph said, 'She it was who sought to seduce me against my will.' And a witness of her household bore witness saying, 'If his shirt is torn from the front, then she has spoken the truth and he is a liar;

وَاِنْ كَانَ قَمِيْصُهٗ قُدَّ مِنْ دُبُرٍ فَكَذَبَتْ
وَهُوَ مِنَ الصّٰدِقِيْنَ ﴿٢٨﴾

28. 'But if his shirt is torn from behind, then she has lied and he is of the truthful.'

فَلَمَّا رَاٰ قَمِيْصَهٗ قُدَّ مِنْ دُبُرٍ قَالَ اِنَّهٗ مِنْ
كَيْدِكُنَّ ؕ اِنَّ كَيْدَكُنَّ عَظِيْمٌ ﴿٢٩﴾

29. So when he[1376] saw his shirt torn from behind, he said, 'Surely, this is a device of you women. Your device is indeed mighty;[1377]

يُوْسُفُ اَعْرِضْ عَنْ هٰذَا ۫ وَاسْتَغْفِرِيْ
لِذَنْۢبِكِ ۖ اِنَّكِ كُنْتِ مِنَ الْخٰطِـِٕيْنَ ﴿٣٠﴾ ع

30. 'O Joseph, do thou overlook this mischief and thou, O woman, ask forgiveness for thy sin. Certainly thou art of the guilty.'

R. 4.

وَقَالَ نِسْوَةٌ فِي الْمَدِيْنَةِ امْرَاَتُ الْعَزِيْزِ

حُبًّا ؕ اِنَّا لَنَرٰىهَا فِيْ ضَلٰلٍ مُّبِيْنٍ ﴿٣١﴾

31. And the women in the city said, 'The wife of the 'Azīz[1378] seeks to seduce her slave-boy against his will. He has infatuated her with love.[1379] Indeed we see her in manifest error.'

1376. The pronoun 'he' stands for the master of the house and not for the man who bore witness.

1377. In his endeavour to screen his wife so far as possible Potiphar seems to accuse the whole fair sex of cunning and guile.

1378. Al-'Azīz stands for Potiphar. He was the captain of the King's guard. It seems that at the time of the Holy Prophet the chiefs and dignitaries of Egypt were known by this title.

1379. The Arabic expression means that the woman's love of Joseph had فَلَمَّا سَمِعَتْ بِمَكْرِهِنَّ اَرْسَلَتْ

اِلَيْهِنَّ وَاَعْتَدَتْ لَهُنَّ مُتَّكَاً وَّاٰتَتْ كُلَّ

32. And when she heard of their sly whisperings, she sent for them and prepared for them a repast, and gave everyone of them a knife and then said to Joseph, 'Come forth to them.' And when they saw him they found him to be a person of great dignity[1379A] and in their amazement [a]cut their hands,[1380] and [b]said, 'Allāh be glorified! This is not a human being; this is but a noble angel.'

قَالَتْ فَذٰلِكُنَّ الَّذِيْ لُمْتُنَّنِيْ فِيْهِ ؕ وَلَقَدْ

33. She said, 'And this is he about whom you blamed me. I did seek to seduce him against his will, but he preserved himself from sin. And now if he do not what I bid him, he shall certainly be imprisoned and become one of the humbled.'

[a]12:51. [b]12:52.

entered beneath the pericardium of her heart; or, love of him had struck or smitten her or had rent the Shighāf (pericardium) of her heart (Lane).

1379A. They thought very highly of him.

1380. The expression, cut their hands, may signify that when the women looked at Joseph, they were so struck with his saintly and handsome visage that in a state of forgetfulness some of them happened to cut their hands with the knives they were holding in their hands. Or the sentence may be taken as figuratively expressing their wonder and amazement. The Arabic expression, 'Aḍḍul Anāmili, i.e. biting the finger-ends is also used to express surprise, and because sometimes the whole of a thing is used for a part, the word 'hands' may be said to have been here used for 'finger-ends.' According to the Talmud, oranges were served to the guests and the women inadvertently cut their hands owing to their being engrossed in looking at Joseph (Jew. Enc. & Talmud).

قَالَ رَبِّ السِّجْنُ اَحَبُّ اِلَیَّ مِمَّا یَدْعُوْنَنِیْۤ اِلَیْهِ ۚ وَ اِلَّا تَصْرِفْ عَنِّیْ كَیْدَهُنَّ اَصْبُ اِلَیْهِنَّ وَ اَكُنْ مِّنَ الْجٰهِلِیْنَ ﴿۳۴﴾

34. Thereupon Joseph prayed: 'O my Lord, prison is dearer to me than what they invite me to; and unless Thou turn away their guile from me I shall be inclined towards them and be of the ignorant.'

فَاسْتَجَابَ لَهٗ رَبُّهٗ فَصَرَفَ عَنْهُ كَیْدَهُنَّ ؕ اِنَّهٗ هُوَ السَّمِیْعُ الْعَلِیْمُ ﴿۳۵﴾

35. So his Lord heard his prayer, and turned away their guile from him. Verily, He is the All-Hearing, the All-Knowing.

ثُمَّ بَدَا لَهُمْ مِّنْۢ بَعْدِ مَا رَاَوُا الْاٰیٰتِ لَیَسْجُنُنَّهٗ حَتّٰى حِیْنٍ ﴿۳۶﴾ ع

36. Then it occurred to them (the chiefs) after they had seen the signs of his innocence that to preserve their good name, they should imprison him for a time.[1381]

R. 5.

وَ دَخَلَ مَعَهُ السِّجْنَ فَتَیٰنِ ؕ قَالَ اَحَدُهُمَاۤ اِنِّیْۤ اَرٰىنِیْۤ اَعْصِرُ خَمْرًا ۚ وَ قَالَ الْاٰخَرُ اِنِّیْۤ اَرٰىنِیْۤ اَحْمِلُ فَوْقَ رَاْسِیْ خُبْزًا تَاْكُلُ الطَّیْرُ مِنْهُ ؕ نَبِّئْنَا بِتَاْوِیْلِهٖ ۚ اِنَّا نَرٰىكَ مِنَ الْمُحْسِنِیْنَ ﴿۳۷﴾

37. And with him there entered the prison two young men. One of them said, 'I see myself in a dream pressing wine.' And the other said, 'I see myself in a dream carrying upon my head bread of which the birds are eating.[1382] Inform us of the interpretation thereof; for we see thee to be of the righteous.'

1381. It appears that as the ill fame of Potiphar's wife spread, her people thought that the best way to put a stop to this scandal-mongering was to imprison Joseph in order that public opinion might come to regard him as the offender and the blame might be shifted from that guilty woman to him.

1382. For the dreams of the butler and the baker see Gen. ch. 40.

قَالَ لَا يَأْتِيكُمَا طَعَامٌ تُرْزَقَانِهٖٓ اِلَّا نَبَّاْتُكُمَا بِتَاْوِيْلِهٖ قَبْلَ اَنْ يَّاْتِيَكُمَا ؕ ذٰلِكُمَا مِمَّا عَلَّمَنِيْ رَبِّيْ ؕ اِنِّيْ تَرَكْتُ مِلَّةَ قَوْمٍ لَّا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِاللّٰهِ وَهُمْ بِالْاٰخِرَةِ هُمْ كٰفِرُوْنَ ﴿۳۸﴾

1385. In their ignorance of the meaning of the word Yughāthu which besides meaning, 'They will be rained upon' also means, 'They will be relieved of their distress' or 'They will be aided and helped,' some Christian writers have objected that as it very seldom rains in Egypt and that the fertility of its soil depends upon the flooding of the Nile, the Quranic statement is against the elementary facts of geography. Obviously, the latter two meanings quite agree with the text of the Qur'ān. But if the word be taken in the first-mentioned sense, even then there is no ground for any objection, for though the fertility of the soil of Egypt depends on the flooding of the Nile, the flooding of the Nile itself depends on rain on the mountains in which lies its source.

1386. Ya'ṣirūn is derived from 'Aṣira which means, (l) he pressed or squeezed the thing so as to force out its juice, etc.; (2) he aided or succoured or saved or preserved (him); (3) he gave something to someone or did some benefit to someone (Lane).

1387. Realizing that Joseph was no ordinary person the King wanted to release him from the prison forthwith. But Joseph refused to be released until a full inquiry was made into his case and he was proved to be innocent of the charge laid against him. His object in demanding an inquiry seems to be two-fold: First, that the King might know that he was innocent so that on no future occasion his mind might be poisoned against him by evilly-disposed persons on the basis of the alleged cause of his imprisonment. Secondly, that Potiphar, his benefactor, might not remain under the impression that Joseph had proved faithless to him.

وَمَآ اُبَرِّئُ نَفْسِيْ ۚ اِنَّ النَّفْسَ لَاَمَّارَةٌۢ بِالسُّوْٓءِ اِلَّا مَا رَحِمَ رَبِّيْ ؕ

54. 'And I do not hold my own self to be free from weakness—surely the soul is prone to enjoin evil—save that whereon my Lord has mercy.[1389] Surely, my Lord is Most Forgiving, Merciful.'

[a]12:32.

1388. The words seem to show that the incident of the cutting of their hands by the women did actually take place; otherwise Joseph could not have referred to it. Either in amazement or being absorbed in conversation, some of them did inadvertently cut their hands. Or the words might mean that by bringing a false accusation against Joseph the women had cut their own hands, i.e. they had landed themselves into a false position. But if nothing actual had happened, Joseph could not have referred to 'the cutting of the hands.' Ḥāsha Lillāhi also means, God forbid; or how far is Allāh from every imperfection (Lane).

1389. The clause Illā mā Raḥima Rabbī (save that whereon my Lord has mercy) may have three different interpretations: (a) Save the Nafs (soul)

وَكَذَٰلِكَ مَكَّنَّا لِيُوسُفَ فِي الْأَرْضِ ۚ يَتَبَوَّأُ مِنْهَا حَيْثُ يَشَاءُ ۖ نُصِيبُ بِرَحْمَتِنَا مَنْ نَشَاءُ وَلَا نُضِيعُ أَجْرَ الْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿٥٧﴾

57. [a]And thus did We establish Joseph in the land. He dwelt therein wherever he pleased. [b]We bestow Our mercy on whomsoever We please and We suffer not the reward of the righteous to be lost.

وَلَأَجْرُ الْآخِرَةِ خَيْرٌ لِّلَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَكَانُوا يَتَّقُونَ ﴿٥٨﴾ ع

58. And surely the reward of the Hereafter is better for those who believe and fear God.

whereupon my Lord has mercy, the particle mā standing for Nafs. (b) Save him upon whom my Lord has mercy; mā here meaning, man. (c) Yes, but it is God's mercy which saves whom it chooses. These three meanings refer to the three stages in the spiritual development of man. The first meaning refers to the stage when man has attained the stage of spiritual perfection—the stage of Nafs-e-Muṭma'innah (the soul at rest—89:28). The second meaning applies to man when he is yet in the stage of Nafs-e-Lawwāmah (self-accusing soul—75:3) when man is struggling against sin and his evil propensities, sometimes overcoming them and at others being vanquished by them. The third meaning applies to man when the animal in him predominates. This stage is called Nafs-e-Ammārah (the soul prone to evil).

1390. Joseph preferred charge of the finance department. His choice seems to have been dictated by the desire to give his single-minded attention to the successful running of the department which so deeply concerned the fulfilment of the King's dream.

1392. Jacob seemed to have realized or he had possibly been informed by Divine revelation that the man in Egypt was Joseph and therefore he asked his sons to enter the town separately so that Joseph might have an opportunity to meet and talk to his brother, Benjamin, in private.

بِمَا كَانُوْا يَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿٧٠﴾

فَلَمَّا جَهَّزَهُمْ بِجَهَازِهِمْ جَعَلَ السِّقَايَةَ فِيْ رَحْلِ اَخِيْهِ ثُمَّ اَذَّنَ مُؤَذِّنٌ اَيَّتُهَا الْعِيْرُ اِنَّكُمْ لَسٰرِقُوْنَ ﴿٧١﴾

71. And when he had given them their provision, he put[1393] the drinking-cup in his brother's saddle-bag. Then a crier cried, 'O ye men of the caravan, you are surely thieves.'[1394]

قَالُوْا وَاَقْبَلُوْا عَلَيْهِمْ مَّاذَا تَفْقِدُوْنَ ﴿٧٢﴾

72. They said, turning round towards them, 'What is it that you miss?'

قَالُوْا نَفْقِدُ صُوَاعَ الْمَلِكِ وَلِمَنْ جَآءَ بِهٖ حِمْلُ بَعِيْرٍ وَّ اَنَا بِهٖ زَعِيْمٌ ﴿٧٣﴾

73. They replied, 'We miss the King's measuring-vessel and whoso brings it shall have a camel-load of corn and I am surety for it.'

1393. The word Ja'ala (put) may either signify that Joseph himself ordered the cup to be put in his brother's sack so that he might use it on his way home; or that the cup happened to be placed among Benjamin's articles, Joseph not knowing that it was there.

1394. It is incorrect to say that Joseph himself first ordered the drinking-cup to be placed in his brother's sack, and then accused him of theft—an action much below his dignity. In fact, it was a Siqāyah (a drinking-cup) which Joseph had ordered to be placed in the sack of his brother while the vessel which was declared by the royal proclaimer to have been lost was a Ṣuwā' (a measuring-vessel). It seems that in the excitement of helping his brothers to prepare for their return journey and in view of the approaching separation from Benjamin, after only a brief meeting, Joseph felt thirst and called for water. It was brought to him in the royal measuring vessel. Such vessels were then used both as measuring-vessels and drinking-cups. After satisfying his thirst he inadvertently placed the vessel among Benjamin's things, and it thus became packed with the effects of his brother without having been noticed by anybody. Joseph at once understood how the mistake had occurred, but, thinking that all this was God's own plan for detaining Benjamin, he judiciously kept silent until the caravan was gone.

قَالُوْا تَاللّٰهِ لَقَدْ عَلِمْتُمْ مَّا جِئْنَا لِنُفْسِدَ فِي الْاَرْضِ وَمَا كُنَّا سٰرِقِيْنَ ﴿٧٤﴾

74. They answered, 'By Allāh, you know well that we came not to make mischief in the land, and we are not thieves.'

قَالُوْا فَمَا جَزَآؤُهٗٓ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ كٰذِبِيْنَ ﴿٧٥﴾

75. They said, 'What then shall be the punishment for it, if you are found to be liars?'

قَالُوْا جَزَآؤُهٗ مَنْ وُّجِدَ فِيْ رَحْلِهٖ فَهُوَ جَزَآؤُهٗ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ نَجْزِي الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ﴿٧٦﴾

76. They replied, 'The punishment for it—he in whose saddle-bag it is found shall himself be the penalty for[1395] it. Thus do we punish wrongdoers.'

فَبَدَاَ بِاَوْعِيَتِهِمْ قَبْلَ وِعَآءِ اَخِيْهِ ثُمَّ اسْتَخْرَجَهَا مِنْ وِّعَآءِ اَخِيْهِ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ كِدْنَا لِيُوْسُفَ ؕ مَا كَانَ لِيَاْخُذَ اَخَاهُ فِيْ دِيْنِ الْمَلِكِ اِلَّآ اَنْ يَّشَآءَ اللّٰهُ ؕ نَرْفَعُ دَرَجٰتٍ مَّنْ نَّشَآءُ ؕ وَفَوْقَ كُلِّ ذِيْ عِلْمٍ عَلِيْمٌ ﴿٧٧﴾

77. Then he[1396] began with the search of their sacks before the sack of Joseph's brother;[1396A] then he took it out of the sack of his brother. Thus did We plan for Joseph.[1397] He could not have taken his brother under the King's law unless Allāh had so willed. [a]We raise in degrees of rank whomsoever We please; and over every possessor of knowledge is One, Most-Knowing.

1395. Joseph's brothers, in a fit of excitement, themselves suggested that he in whose sack the measuring-vessel might be found should be detained to explain his conduct. Thus Joseph was able to keep back his brother without the latter having been accused of theft.

1396. The pronoun 'he' refers to the man who announced the loss of the measuring-vessel and who naturally himself came forward to make the search.

1396A. This was due to the special consideration which Joseph had shown to Benjamin.

1397. The whole thing was planned by God—Joseph having no hand in it.

قَالُوْٓا اِنْ يَّسْرِقْ فَقَدْ سَرَقَ اَخٌ لَّهٗ مِنْ قَبْلُ ۚ فَاَسَرَّهَا يُوْسُفُ فِيْ نَفْسِهٖ وَلَمْ يُبْدِهَا لَهُمْ ۚ قَالَ اَنْتُمْ شَرٌّ مَّكَانًا ۚ وَاللّٰهُ اَعْلَمُ بِمَا تَصِفُوْنَ ﴿٧٨﴾

78. They said, 'If he has stolen, a brother of his had also committed theft before.'[1398] But Joseph kept it secret in his heart and did not disclose it to them. He simply said, 'You are in a worst condition; and Allāh knows best what you allege.'

قَالُوْا يٰٓاَيُّهَا الْعَزِيْزُ اِنَّ لَهٗٓ اَبًا شَيْخًا كَبِيْرًا فَخُذْ اَحَدَنَا مَكَانَهٗ ۚ اِنَّا نَرٰىكَ مِنَ الْمُحْسِنِيْنَ ﴿٧٩﴾

79. They said, 'O noble chief, he has a very aged father,[1399] so take one of us in his place; for we see thee to be of those who are benevolent.'

قَالَ مَعَاذَ اللّٰهِ اَنْ نَّاْخُذَ اِلَّا مَنْ وَّجَدْنَا مَتَاعَنَا عِنْدَهٗٓ ۙ اِنَّآ اِذًا لَّظٰلِمُوْنَ ﴿٨٠﴾ ع ۱۳

80. He replied, 'Allāh forbid that we should take any other but him with whom we have found our property; for then we should certainly be unjust.'

[a] 6:84.

Quite inadvertently Joseph happened to place the King's measuring-vessel, which he used as a drinking-cup on that occasion, in Benjamin's luggage and his brothers themselves made the suggestion which enabled Joseph to detain Benjamin. Thus a providential combination of circumstances enabled Joseph to satisfy his heart's desire.

1398. One sin leads to another. Joseph's brothers had first sought to put him to death. Now quite unashamedly they hastened to accuse him of theft.

1399. Not being satisfied with accusing Benjamin of theft, they proceed to disown him and even refuse to acknowledge him as their brother saying, 'he has a very aged father.'

1399A. Najiyy means, (1) a secret; (2) one to whom a secret is confided;

(3) one who confers with another in private; (4) the act of conferring in private (Aqrab).

1400. According to the Bible it was Judah, the fourth among the brothers, and not Reuben, the eldest of them, who refused to go back to his father without Benjamin. The word which the Qur'ān has used is Kabīr which means, 'big' or 'elder' and not Akbar which means, 'the eldest.' Judah, being the fourth son of Jacob, was indeed one of the bigger or elder brothers of Joseph. Moreover, Kabīr does not only mean 'big' or 'elder' but also means 'leader' and 'great in estimation, rank or dignity,' and it is in this sense that the word has been used here and so applies to Judah and not to Reuben. Judah was more important than Reuben in the eyes of Jacob (Gen. 43:8-10).

1401. In the verse Qaryah (town) is in reality Ahlul-Qaryah (people of the town) and 'Īr (caravan) is Aṣḥābul-'Īr (members of the caravan). The words Ahl and Aṣḥāb have been omitted to lend emphasis to the statement.

1403. Bayyaḍas-Siqā means, he filled the skin with water or milk. The expression Ibyaḍḍat 'Ainā-hu is used regarding a person who is stricken with grief and his eyes become filled with tears. The verse thus only signifies that the world became dark for Jacob and his eyes became filled with tears on account of grief (Lane, Rāzī & Biḥār).

1404. Ḥaraḍ means, a man corrupt in body and intellect; sick or diseased; suffering from protracted disquietude of mind and disease; weary or fatigued and at the point of death; emaciated or dissolved by excessive grief or love, etc. (Lane).

1404A. The verse implies that Jacob had been informed by God that Joseph, Benjamin and Judah were alive.

1405. This verse also shows that Jacob was convinced that Joseph, Benjamin and Judah were alive in Egypt.

1405A. The conduct of Joseph's brothers on this occasion seems to be inexplicable. They seemed to have morally sunk so low that, ignoring the real purpose of their present visit to Egypt, which was to make a search for Joseph, Benjamin and Judah, they began to beg for corn.

1406. Bearing no longer to see his brothers degrade themselves by thus begging for corn Joseph decided to reveal himself to them; but approached the subject indirectly.

قَالُوْا تَاللّٰهِ لَقَدْ اٰثَرَكَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْنَا وَاِنْ كُنَّا لَخٰطِـِٕيْنَ ﴿۹۲﴾

92. They replied, 'By Allāh; surely, Allāh has preferred thee above us and we have indeed been sinners.'

قَالَ لَا تَثْرِيْبَ عَلَيْكُمُ الْيَوْمَ ؕ يَغْفِرُ اللّٰهُ لَكُمْ ۫ وَهُوَ اَرْحَمُ الرّٰحِمِيْنَ ﴿۹۳﴾

93. He said, 'No blame shall lie on you this day;[1407] may Allāh forgive you! And He is the Most Merciful of those who show mercy;

اِذْهَبُوْا بِقَمِيْصِيْ هٰذَا فَاَلْقُوْهُ عَلٰى وَجْهِ اَبِيْ يَاْتِ بَصِيْرًا ۚ وَاْتُوْنِيْ بِاَهْلِكُمْ اَجْمَعِيْنَ ﴿۹۴﴾ ع ۱۴

وَلَمَّا فَصَلَتِ الْعِيْرُ قَالَ اَبُوْهُمْ اِنِّيْ لَاَجِدُ رِيْحَ يُوْسُفَ لَوْلَاۤ اَنْ تُفَنِّدُوْنِ ﴿۹۵﴾

95. And when the caravan departed, their father said, 'Surely, I perceive the scent of Joseph, even though you take me to be a dotard.'[1408]

1407. Joseph did not keep his brothers in suspense and at once removed all their fears and apprehensions concerning the treatment he would extend to them, by telling them forthwith that his pardon was unreserved and unqualified. This large-hearted and generous forgiving of his brothers by Joseph constitutes his greatest and most outstanding resemblance to the Holy Prophet. Like Joseph, the Holy Prophet, too, gained honour and power in flight and banishment; and when after years of exile he entered his native town as a conqueror, at the head of ten thousand Companions, and Mecca lay prostrate at his feet, he asked his people what treatment did they expect from him. 'The treatment that Joseph accorded to his brethren,' they replied. 'Then no reproach shall lie on you this day,' promptly returned the Holy Prophet. This noble treatment by the Holy Prophet of his erstwhile bloodthirsty enemies, the Quraish of Mecca, who had left no stone unturned to compass his death and destroy Islām root and branch stands unparalleled in the whole annals of human history.

1408. Even before the caravan reached home, Jacob had told his people that, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, he hoped to meet Joseph soon; and

قَالُوْا تَاللّٰهِ اِنَّكَ لَفِيْ ضَلٰلِكَ الْقَدِيْمِ ﴿٩٦﴾

97. And when the bearer of glad tidings came, he laid the shirt before him and he became enlightened.[1409] Then he said, "Did I not say to you, 'I know from Allāh what you know not?"

قَالُوْا يٰٓاَبَانَا اسْتَغْفِرْ لَنَا ذُنُوْبَنَآ اِنَّا كُنَّا خٰطِـِٕيْنَ ﴿٩٨﴾

98. They said, 'O our father, ask of Allāh forgiveness of our sins for us; we have indeed been sinners.'

قَالَ سَوْفَ اَسْتَغْفِرُ لَكُمْ رَبِّيْ ۭ اِنَّهٗ هُوَ الْغَفُوْرُ الرَّحِيْمُ ﴿٩٩﴾

99. He said, 'I will certainly ask forgiveness for you of my Lord. Surely, He is the Most Forgiving, the Merciful.'

فَلَمَّا دَخَلُوْا عَلٰي يُوْسُفَ اٰوٰٓى اِلَيْهِ اَبَوَيْهِ وَقَالَ ادْخُلُوْا مِصْرَ اِنْ شَاۗءَ اللّٰهُ اٰمِنِيْنَ ﴿١٠٠﴾

100. And when they came to Joseph, he put up his parents[1410] with himself and said, 'Enter Egypt in peace, if it please Allāh.'

[a]12:9.

in order to lend emphasis to his conviction, he added the words 'even though you take me to be a dotard' meaning thereby, 'you consider this meeting to be an impossibility, being not more than the illusion and wishful thinking of an old man, but I know it as a fact and a certainty.'

1409. When Joseph's shirt was laid before Jacob, the conviction that Joseph was alive which, being based on revelation was previously only a matter of faith, now became converted into factual knowledge. This is the meaning of the words, he became enlightened. The Qur'ān lends no support whatsoever to the view that Jacob had become blind. Not only was it inconsistent with his dignity as a great Prophet of God but several verses also contradict this view. It seems that it was the same shirt which Joseph had worn when he was thrown into the well.

1410. Joseph's own mother Rachel had already died, but the use of the word 'parents' in the verse implies that a step-mother is as much entitled to one's respect and affection as one's real mother.

that those who were destined to believe had already believed and as for the rest they despair of their believing in them. But God's Prophets never despair of God's mercy and help (15:57). Their opponents, on the other hand, owing to the delay in the coming of Divine punishment, begin to feel secure in the thought that they will never be visited with any punishment and that the prophecies about the Prophets' final success and about the discomfiture of their enemies were nothing but false utterances.

AR-RA‘D

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

Preponderance of scholarly opinion is in favour of the view that this Sūrah was revealed at Mecca. Its subject-matter also confirms this view. Some verses, however, were revealed at Medina. These verses are 44th (according to ‘Aṭā), 32nd (according to Qatādah), and 13-15th (according to certain other authorities). In Chapter 10 (Sūrah Yūnus) it was stated that whenever a Prophet appears in the world, people are made to accept the Divine Messenger either by being visited with Heavenly punishment or God showers his mercy upon them if they deserve it. Stress was laid in Chapter 11 (Sūrah Hūd) on Divine punishment and in Chapter 12 (Sūrah Yūsuf) on God’s mercy. The present Sūrah, however, explains how the promises and prophecies about the rise and prosperity of the Holy Prophet, made in the three preceding Chapters, will be fulfilled and how Islām eventually will prevail over other religions.

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah opens with the theme that God works in inscrutable ways. The means by which His Messengers and Prophets rise to power remain hidden from human eyes till the results, towards the accomplishment of which they work, become apparent. It proceeds to draw attention to a well-known law of nature that different kinds of fruits and vegetation grow from a soil which is watered by the same water. Similarly, the Holy Prophet, born and brought up in the same environment with the pagan Meccans, rose to be God’s great Messenger. The disbelievers are further told that they should not judge the Holy Prophet by his present weak state and by the paucity of his means and resources, nor should they wonder at the promises of his ultimate success. It is not his promised success that is to be wondered at; rather it would have been strange if he had not appeared at the time of humanity’s crying need. The Holy Prophet is bound to succeed and his enemies must fail. The cause of Islām shall triumph and the children of the leaders of disbelief themselves shall join its fold. God will withdraw His help from disbelievers and their power and glory will depart. All the laws and elements of nature being under God’s control, He will make them subservient to the Holy Prophet’s cause. The false gods of the idolaters will be quite powerless to impede or arrest the progress of the new Faith. The Sūrah goes on to develop the theme that so great are the spiritual powers of the Holy Prophet that he could overcome his enemies single-handed, even as a man having eyes could overcome a host of blind men. Polytheism cannot stand against the doctrine of the Unity of God, nor can the votaries of false gods against the devotees of the True God. The enemies of truth shall melt away and vanish like foam or froth. Men of weak understanding see only the rising foam and froth and do not care or have the intelligence to see the pure water underneath. The foam and froth disappear but pure water and gold remain. Similarly, the superficial and trifling beliefs of the polytheists are bound to perish and the great and noble ideals preached by the Qur'ān will endure and its teachings, being in harmony with human nature, will find their way into the hearts of men, who will gradually come to realize on which side lies the truth when they compare the moral stature of believers with that of disbelievers. Mighty Signs will be shown and great miracles wrought by means of the Qur'ān and human hearts, the strongest of all earthly citadels shall fall. One of these Signs will be that his people will drive out the Holy Prophet from Mecca and will draw the sword against him. But Islām shall continue to make headway till Mecca, the centre of disbelief and opposition will fall to the victorious arms of the Holy Prophet. Idolatry shall disappear from Arabia for all time and Islām shall be firmly established there. The world shall witness all these Signs wrought not by human agency but by the hand of the Almighty God Himself. The Sūrah contains many prophecies about the discomfiture and destruction of the leaders of disbelief and foretells a bright future for Islām.

The Title

The above constitutes the main theme of the Sūrah and it is in conformity with this theme that it has been named Ra'd or Thunder. Rain brings with it lightning and thunder and it is in the fitness of things that heavenly rain—the Quranic revelation—should also be accompanied by thunder and lightning. Islām has brought with it thunderbolts. Those who draw the sword against Islām shall perish by the sword and those who owe allegiance to it shall sit on the thrones of power and glory.

1419. Whereas Chapters 10, 11 & 12 begin with the letters Alif Lām Rā, the present Sūrah which is the 13th in number opens with the letters, Alif Lām Mīm Rā. This difference in the abbreviated letters shows that the subject-matter of this Sūrah varies a little from that of the three preceding Chapters. These four abbreviated letters mean, I am Allāh, the All-Knowing, the All-Seeing; the attribute, 'Knowing,' having been added to the attribute, 'Seeing,' referred to in the preceding Chapters.

1420. These words mean: (1) You see that the heavens stand without pillars; (2) the heavens do not stand on pillars which you can see, i.e. they have supports but you cannot see them. Taken literally the verse means that the heavens stand without the support of pillars. Figuratively, it means that the heavens or, for that matter, the heavenly bodies, do stand on supports but these supports are not visible to the human eye, e.g. the force of gravity, or magnetic power or the special movements of planets or other means which science has discovered so far or which may be discovered in future.

1420A. The word 'Arsh (Throne) has been used in the Qur'ān to express the bringing to perfection of spiritual or physical laws. The use of this expression is analogous to the practice of worldly monarchs. They make their important proclamations 'from the throne.'

4. And [b]He it is Who spread out the earth and made therein mountains and rivers, and of [c]fruits of every kind He made therein two sexes.[1421] [d]He causes the night to cover the day. Therein, verily, are Signs for a people who reflect.

1421. Though the present verse refers only to fruits, elsewhere the Qur'ān speaks of God having made pairs—male and female—of all things (36:37; 51:50). This is a truth which of all religious Scriptures the Qur'ān was the first to propound. Scientists have begun to discover pairs even in inorganic matter. The verse draws attention to the fact that the law that everything has a pair applies to the human intellect also. Until heavenly light descends on it, man cannot have true knowledge, which is born of a combination of both Divine revelation and human reason.

1422. The expression signifies that when trees watered with the same water bear fruits vastly different in taste and colour, why cannot the Holy Prophet, even though he lives in the same town and among the same people, excel them, especially when he is nourished by the elixir of Divine revelation and his opponents are brought up under the fostering care of Satan?

1425. In v. 4 we are told that all things in the universe have pairs and that in the spiritual world also some individuals act like males and others like females, the former exercising influence and the latter receiving it. The verse under comment points out that in the person of the Holy Prophet there has appeared one who is spiritually a male and that nobody can attain any spiritual rank without receiving his stamp. It further says that God knows well the natural capacities and aptitudes of the Holy Prophet's people, whether they will accept Divine or satanic influence, and which influence will grow and which will decline. Those who accept the Holy Prophet and receive his stamp will grow and increase in power, influence and numbers, while his opponents will decline and decrease.

1426. The overt or covert plans of the Holy Prophet's enemies cannot succeed because God, Who knows them all, is his Helper and Protector.

1427. The word Al-Mu'aqqibāt signifies, the angels of the night and the day because they succeed each other by turns. The plural feminine form is used because of the frequency of their doing so, since in Arabic the feminine form is sometimes employed to impart emphasis and frequency. The word, rendered here as 'a succession of angels,' may refer to the celestial beings in Heaven; or to the devoted Companions of the Holy Prophet who guarded him risking their lives.

1428. Lightning inspires both fear and hope. It inspires fear because sometimes men die of it and embryos, and certain plants get adversely affected. It also brings hope to men, for it heralds fertilizing rain and also helps to destroy germs of different diseases and thus serves to put an end to epidemics.

1429. The expression may be translated as: (1) God alone is worthy of worship; (2) it is praying to God alone that can be useful or beneficial for man; (3) the Voice of God alone rises in support of truth; and (4) the Voice of God alone must prevail.

1430. The right way to succeed in life is to place all things in their proper places—to give God the status which is His due and to create things the position which they rightly possess. That alone is the way to success and true happiness.

1431. The verse embodies a great truth, viz. that all creation is bound to obey God-made laws of nature, willingly or unwillingly. The tongue must perform the function of tasting and the ear cannot help hearing. This obedience to the laws of nature may be called compulsory. But man is given a certain freedom of action where he can use his volition and discretion. But even in actions in which he appears to have been granted freedom, he is subject to certain amount of compulsion, and he must obey God's laws in whatever he does, whether he likes it or not. The words, willingly or unwillingly, may also refer to two classes of men, viz. believers who give willing submission to God and disbelievers who obey His laws grudgingly.

18. [a]He sends down water from the sky so that valleys flow according to their measure and the flood bears on its surface swelling foam. And from that which they heat in the fire, seeking to make ornaments or utensils, comes out a foam similar to it. Thus does Allāh illustrate truth and falsehood. Now, as to the foam, it goes away as rubbish and perishes but as to that which benefits men, it stays in the earth. Thus does Allāh set forth parables.[1433]

1432. The Qur'ān has used two different words to express Divine Unity: (1) Aḥad and (2) Wāḥid. Whereas the former word denotes the absolute Unity of God without relation to any other being, the latter means only 'the first' or 'the starting point,' and requires a second and a third to follow it. The Divine attribute, Wāḥid (One), shows that God is the real 'source' from which all creation springs, and everything points to Him just as a second or a third thing necessarily points to the first. But where the Qur'ān seeks to refute the doctrine of the sonship of those who have been falsely given that status, it uses the word Aḥad, i.e. He Who is and has ever been One and Alone and Who has begotten no child (112:2).

1433. The verse has used two very apt illustrations. In the first illustration, truth is compared to water and falsehood to foam. Falsehood in the beginning seems to prevail over truth, but in the end it is swept away by truth even as rubbish is swept away by a powerful current of water. In the second illustration, truth is likened to gold or silver which, when melted, throws off

For those who respond to their Lord is eternal good; and as for those who respond not to Him, [a]if they had all that is in the earth and the like of it added thereto, they would readily ransom themselves therewith. It is these that shall have an evil reckoning and their abode is Hell. What a wretched place of rest!

1435. The believers follow the course best suited for the eradication of evil. They resort to punishment where it serves a useful purpose and to forgiveness if forgiveness is calculated to bring about the desired result. In short, they cut at the very root of evil by whatever method is appropriate in the circumstances.

1436. This verse enunciates a great principle. Any good act that a man does, is done with the intentional or unintentional help or cooperation of his relatives and kinsmen. Therefore, they all are made to participate, proportionately to their share, in the reward he wins.

1437. The various categories of good deeds of believers will, in the next world, be represented as so many gates of Heaven.

28. And those who disbelieve say, [c]'Why is not a Sign sent down to him from his Lord?' Say, 'Allāh leaves to go astray[1439] whom He wills and [d]guides to Himself those who turn to Him;

اَلَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَتَطْمَئِنُّ قُلُوْبُهُمْ بِذِكْرِ اللّٰهِ ؕ اَلَا بِذِكْرِ اللّٰهِ تَطْمَئِنُّ الْقُلُوْبُ ﴿۲۹﴾

1438. The particle fī is sometimes used to denote comparison (Lane).

1439. It is God's immutable law that He guides those who are desirous of turning to Him and leaves to go astray those who themselves turn away from Him and refuse to accept His guidance.

1440. Search after God is the innermost yearning of the human soul and is the real object and goal of man's life, and when that goal is attained man enjoys perfect peace of mind, for then he rests, as it were, in the very lap of God.

32. And if there were a Qur'ān by which mountains[1441] could be moved or by which the earth could be cut asunder[1442] or by which the dead could be spoken[1443] to, they would still not believe in it. [b]Nay, the matter of their believing rests entirely with Allāh. Have not the believers yet come to know that if Allāh had enforced His Will He could have surely guided all mankind? And as for those who disbelieve,

1441. Jibāl is the plural of Jabal which figuratively means, (1) chief of a tribe or community; (2) a learned man towering above those around him; (3) great hardship or calamity (Aqrab). The clause may mean that the Qur'ān solves all the difficult problems that confront man, or it may mean that it has abrogated the old order of things and has inculcated a new approach to the various human problems.

1442. These words figuratively mean that the Qur'ān would speedily spread throughout the whole earth. Literally, it means that portions of land would be cut off from enemy territory and would pass into the possession of believers.

1443. By means of the Qur'ān those spiritually dead will not only be quickened into a new life, but will also be made to speak words of wisdom and will preach the Message of the Qur'ān to the world.

[a]disaster shall not cease to befall them for what they have wrought or to alight near their home,[1444] until the promise of Allāh comes to pass. Surely, Allāh fails not in His promise.

Say, 'Do name them.'[1445] Would you inform Him of what He does not know in the earth? Or, is it a mere empty saying? 1445. Idolaters are called upon to state what are the functions which their gods perform. The word 'name' in the verse does not mean personal name but attributive name, for the personal names of some of the gods have been given in the Qur'ān itself (71:24); the words, do name them, may also be an expression of contempt, meaning that the gods of the disbelievers are so worthless that even the mention of their names would put them to shame.

1447. The words, its fruit is everlasting, signify that the fruits of Heaven will see no autumn, no season of decay, nor even of dormancy. Thus, there will be no interruption in the boons and blessings of Paradise. "Fruit" and "shade" stand respectively for inward and outward blessings, and imply that believers will enjoy all kinds of blessings in Heaven, both external and internal.

1451B. The words, knowledge of the Book, may mean, fresh Signs from Heaven and the prophecies of the previous Scriptures regarding the Holy Prophet.

CHAPTER 14
IBRĀHĪM
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Introduction

The subject-matter of the preceding Sūrah is continued and explained more fully and clearly in this Sūrah. The truth of the Quranic teaching is sought to be proved from observation, inferences to this effect having been drawn from facts of history. It is pointed out that in circumstances similar to those of the Holy Prophet, Messengers of God were successful in their own day against very powerful opposition. The Holy Prophet, therefore, is also bound to succeed in his mission, in spite of the meagreness of his means. Then the Sūrah proceeds to say that the real purpose of the Quranic revelation is to provide guidance for mankind which is groping in darkness, and the Holy Prophet has been raised to bring people out of this Cimmerian darkness into light. Prophets had also appeared before him, prominent among them being Moses. The Sūrah sheds light on the main reason for the triumph of Divine Messengers over their opponents which is that they worship God and preach the Truth. After dealing with this subject the Sūrah lays down some prominent marks and characteristics of the revealed Word of God and the criteria by which its truth can be tested. Judged by these criteria the Qur'ān is definitely proved to be God's own revealed Word. Muslims then are advised how best to profit by its noble ideals and teachings. Next, the Sūrah points out that the change which was about to take place in Arabia through the Message of the Qur'ān had been decreed ages ago by Almighty God. It had been God's plan and purpose since Abraham went to the wilderness of Paran and settled his son Ishmael and his wife Hagar there that that barren and bleak country would one day become the centre of the greatest religious Movement the world had ever seen. Mecca was founded to fulfil this Divine plan. This is why, in spite of the sterility and barrenness of its soil, God has ever provided for its inhabitants their means of livelihood in an ample measure. While Abraham was reconstructing the House of God with the help of his son, Ishmael, he prayed that God might raise up among the Meccans a Messenger, who should recite to them His Signs and teach them the Book and wisdom and should purify them (2:130). This prayer was fulfilled in the person of the Holy Prophet. The Sūrah reminds the Faithful that their duties and responsibilities had already been explained to them by Prophet Abraham and that they should never lose sight of them. It ends with a warning to disbelievers that since Mecca had been founded to become the centre and citadel for the preaching and propagation of the doctrine of the Divine Unity, they should give up idolatry. All efforts on their part to oppose the Divine purpose were bound to end in complete failure and frustration.

Messenger sent for the whole world (7:159; 34:29). Not only does the Qur'ān claim a universal mission for the Holy Prophet, but the Holy Prophet himself is reported to have said, 'I have been sent to the black and the red,' meaning the whole of mankind (Biḥār); and 'I have been raised for all mankind' (Bukhārī). The Qur'ān was revealed in the Arabic language because the Arabs were its first addressees (and also because Arabic, being the most expressive, eloquent and comprehensive language, was eminently suited to be the vehicle for the delivery of the Quranic Message) and through them its Message was to be preached to the world and not that the Message was meant for the Arabs only.

1454. The expression Ayyāmullāh signifies the favours and punishments of Allāh (Tāj), like the well-known Arabic phrase Ayyāmul-'Arab which means, the fights and conflicts of the Arabs.

وَاِذْ تَاَذَّنَ رَبُّكُمْ لَئِنْ شَكَرْتُمْ لَاَزِيْدَنَّكُمْ وَلَئِنْ كَفَرْتُمْ اِنَّ عَذَابِيْ لَشَدِيْدٌ ۝٨

It rests upon five foundations, (a) humility of him who renders it towards him to whom it is rendered; (b) his love of him; (c) his acknowledgment of his benefit; (d) his eulogizing him for it; and (e) his not making use of the benefit in a manner which he (who has conferred it) may dislike. This is Shukr on the part of man. Shukr on the part of God consists in forgiving a person or commending him, or regarding him with satisfaction, goodwill or favour, and hence necessarily recompensing or rewarding him (Lane). One can only be truly grateful to God when one makes right use of His gifts.

1456. These words indicate that Prophets were also raised among nations other than the progeny of Abraham, for, the tribes of 'Ād and Thamūd were followed by some other peoples whom 'none knows now save Allāh,' whereas the Prophets that appeared among the progeny of Abraham have been

Their Messengers said, 'Are you in doubt concerning Allāh, [a]Maker of the heavens and the earth?[1458] He calls you that He may forgive you your sins and grant you respite till an appointed term.' They said, [b]'You are but mortals like us, you desire to turn us away from that which our fathers used to worship. Bring us, then, some clear proof.'

قَالَتْ لَهُمْ رُسُلُهُمْ اِنْ نَّحْنُ اِلَّا بَشَرٌ

12. Their Messengers said to them, [c]'We are indeed only mentioned both in the Qur'ān and the Bible.

1457. The words mean that disbelievers thrust their hands into their own mouths in amazement at the high-sounding claims of the Prophets. Or they bit their hands in rage at what the Prophets said. Or they put their hands on the mouths of the Prophets so as to silence them and make them cease talking about their claims.

1458. The creation of the heavens and the earth has been adduced to prove the Divine origin of the teachings given to the Prophets. God being the Creator of the heavens and the earth it would be unreasonable to suppose that, having created man, He had left him without guidance. It would be equally inconsistent with reason to think that, whereas God had made ample provision for the material welfare and advancement of man by creating the heavens and the earth, He had neglected to provide for his spiritual welfare.

19. [c]The case of those who disbelieve in their Lord is that their works[1462] are like ashes, on which the wind blows violently on a stormy day. [d]They shall have no power over what they earned. That, indeed, is utter ruin.

1460. The Qur'ān has used both singular and plural numbers for the personal pronoun with reference to the Supreme Being. Where the Power and Majesty of God are meant to be expressed, the plural number is used; and where His Self-Sufficiency and Independence are intended to be emphasized the singular number is used. Or, as some Muslim divines have stated, where God intends to bring about a result through the agency of angels, the plural number is used; but where a work is to be performed through some special Divine decree, the singular number is resorted to. The present verse combines both.

1461. The coming of death from every quarter means that the many sins and crimes of disbelievers will assume different forms of death for them.

1462. "Their works" may mean, the efforts which disbelievers made in opposition to the Prophets of God.

22. They shall all appear before Allāh;[1463] [d]then shall those who were considered weak say to those who were arrogant, 'Surely, we were your followers can you not then avail us aught against Allāh's punishment?' They will say, 'If Allāh had guided us, we should have, surely, guided you. It is the same for us whether we show impatience or are patient, there is no way of escape for us.'[1464]

R. 4.

وَقَالَ الشَّيْطٰنُ لَمَّا قُضِيَ الْاَمْرُ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ

[a]6:74; 16:4; 29:45; 39:6. [b]4:134; 6:134; 35:17. [c]35:18. [d]6:129; 7:39, 40; 28:64; 33:68, 69; 34:32, 33; 40:48, 49.

1463. It is not so much the actual misdeeds of a people that bring about their downfall as the exposure of their weaknesses. With their weaknesses having become exposed, their prestige and reputation which, more than their achievements, are the mainstay of their success, suffer a mortal blow, lowering them in the estimation of rival communities and bringing in their wake their decline and decadence. This is the significance of the verse, 'they shall appear before Allāh.'

1464. A people who are destined to perish give way to despair and become readily resigned to their low state.

وَعَدَكُمْ وَعْدَ الْحَقِّ وَوَعَدْتُّكُمْ

24. And [b]those who believe and act righteously will be admitted into Gardens through which streams flow, wherein they will abide by the command of their Lord. [c]Their greeting therein for each other will be, 'Peace be on you.'

اَلَمْ تَرَ كَيْفَ ضَرَبَ اللّٰهُ مَثَلًا كَلِمَةً
طَيِّبَةً كَشَجَرَةٍ طَيِّبَةٍ اَصْلُهَا ثَابِتٌ
وَّفَرْعُهَا فِي السَّمَآءِ ﴿۲۵﴾

25. Dost thou not see how Allāh sets forth a parable of a good word? It is like a good tree, whose root is firm and whose branches reach into heaven?[1465]

[a]15:43; 16:100; 17:66. [b]10:10; 22:24. [c]10:11; 15:47; 36:59; 50:35.

1465. The Word of God has been likened in these verses to a tree which possesses four essential qualities: (a) It is good, meaning it is free from all such teachings as may, in any way, offend against human reason and conscience or against human feelings and susceptibilities. (b) Like a good and deep-rooted fruitful tree it possesses a strong and stable foundation and receives fresh life and sustenance from its Source, and like a strong tree it

تُؤْتِيْٓ اُكُلَهَا كُلَّ حِيْنٍۢ بِاِذْنِ رَبِّهَا ؕ وَيَضْرِبُ اللّٰهُ الْاَمْثَالَ لِلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَذَكَّرُوْنَ ﴿۲۶﴾

26. It brings forth its fruit at all times by the command of its Lord. And [a]Allāh sets forth parables for men that they may be reminded.

وَمَثَلُ كَلِمَةٍ خَبِيْثَةٍ كَشَجَرَةٍ خَبِيْثَةِ ِۨ اجْتُثَّتْ مِنْ فَوْقِ الْاَرْضِ مَا لَهَا مِنْ قَرَارٍ ﴿۲۷﴾

27. And the case of an evil word[1466] is like that of an evil tree, which is uprooted from above the earth and has no stability.

يُثَبِّتُ اللّٰهُ الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا بِالْقَوْلِ الثَّابِتِ فِى الْحَيٰوةِ الدُّنْيَا وَفِى الْاٰخِرَةِ ۚ وَيُضِلُّ اللّٰهُ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ۙ وَيَفْعَلُ اللّٰهُ مَا يَشَآءُ ﴿۲۸﴾ ع ۱۶

28. Allāh strengthens the believers with the word that is firmly established, both in the present life and in the Hereafter; and Allāh lets the wrongdoers go astray. And Allāh does what He wills.

does not bend before the blasts of objections and adverse criticism but stands firm against all storms. It derives life and sustenance from only One Source and there is therefore no disharmony or discard in its principles and teachings. (c) Its branches reach into heaven, which means that by acting upon it a man can scale the highest summits of spiritual eminence. (d) It yields its fruits in abundance in all seasons which signifies that its blessings are witnessed at all times and it continues to produce in every age men who by acting upon its teaching attain communion with God and by their uprightness and the purity of their conduct tower high above their contemporaries. The Qur'ān possesses all these qualities in full measure.

1466. Unlike the good tree a book which is forged by a fabricator is like an evil tree. It does not possess permanence or stability. Its teachings are supported neither by reason nor by the laws of nature. It cannot stand criticism and its principles and ideals keep on changing with the change in human conditions and circumstances. It is a hotchpotch of teachings collected from doubtful sources. It fails to produce men who can claim to have established true and real connection with God. It does not receive fresh life from the Divine Source and is subject to decay and degeneration.

35. And He gives you all that you ask[1467] of Him, and [b]if you try to count the favours of Allāh, you will not be able to number them. Verily, man is very unjust, very ungrateful.

R. 6.

وَاِذْ قَالَ اِبْرٰهِيْمُ رَبِّ اجْعَلْ هٰذَا الْبَلَدَ اٰمِنًا وَّاجْنُبْنِيْ وَبَنِيَّ اَنْ نَّعْبُدَ الْاَصْنَامَ ﴿٣٦﴾

36. And call to mind [c]when Abraham said, 'My Lord, make this city a city of peace, and [d]preserve me and my children from worshipping idols,[1468]

رَبِّ اِنَّهُنَّ اَضْلَلْنَ كَثِيْرًا مِّنَ النَّاسِ ۚ فَمَنْ تَبِعَنِيْ فَاِنَّهٗ مِنِّيْ ۚ وَمَنْ عَصَانِيْ فَاِنَّكَ غَفُوْرٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ﴿٣٧﴾

37. 'My Lord, [e]they have indeed led astray many among mankind. So whoever follows me, he is certainly of me; and whoever disobeys me Thou art, surely, Most Forgiving, Merciful,

[a]7:55; 13:3; 16:13; 39:6. [b]16:19. [c]2:127. [d]2:129. [e]71:25.

1467. The words, 'You ask of Him,' refer to the demands of human nature which have all been fully met. God has made full provision for the satisfaction of all the cravings and demands of human nature.

1468. Abraham's prayer, referred to in the present verse, shows that he knew that idolatry would one day prevail in Mecca and the country around it. Hence his anxiety for the protection of his progeny against idol-worship when the prayer was offered many hundred years ago.

رَبَّنَآ اِنِّيْٓ اَسْكَنْتُ مِنْ ذُرِّيَّتِيْ بِوَادٍ غَيْرِ

مِّنَ الثَّمَرٰتِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَشْكُرُوْنَ ﴿٣٨﴾

38. [a]'Our Lord, I have settled some of my progeny in an uncultivable valley near Thy Sacred House.[1469]—Our Lord,—that they may observe Prayer.[1470] So make men's hearts incline[1471] towards them and [b]provide them with fruits that they may be thankful,

رَبَّنَآ اِنَّكَ تَعْلَمُ مَا نُخْفِيْ وَمَا نُعْلِنُ ؕ
وَمَا يَخْفٰى عَلَى اللّٰهِ مِنْ شَيْءٍ فِي الْاَرْضِ
وَلَا فِي السَّمَآءِ ﴿٣٩﴾

39. 'Our Lord, certainly, [c]Thou knowest what we keep secret and what we make known. And nothing whatever is hidden from Allāh, whether in the earth or in the heaven,

اَلْحَمْدُ لِلّٰهِ الَّذِيْ وَهَبَ لِيْ عَلَى الْكِبَرِ
اِسْمٰعِيْلَ وَ اِسْحٰقَ ؕ اِنَّ رَبِّيْ
لَسَمِيْعُ الدُّعَآءِ ﴿٤٠﴾

40. 'All praise belongs to Allāh Who has given me, despite my old age, Ishmael and Isaac. Surely, my Lord is the Hearer of Prayer,

[a]22:27. [b]2:127; 28:58. [c]2:78; 3:6; 27:66.

1469. The reference is to the settling by Abraham of his son Ishmael and his wife Hagar in the wilderness of Arabia. Ishmael was yet a child when in obedience to Divine command and in fulfilment of Divine plan Abraham brought him and his mother Hagar in the bleak and barren tract where Mecca now stands. At that time there was no sign of life and no means of subsistence at the place (Bukhārī). But God had so designed that the place should become the scene of the activities of God's last Message for mankind. Ishmael was chosen as the vehicle for the implementation of the Divine plan.

1470. This prayer of Abraham found its complete fulfilment in the Holy Prophet; for before him it was only the Arabs who visited Mecca to offer their oblations but, after his advent, people from all over the world began to visit it.

1471. The prayer was made at a time when not a blade of grass was to be seen for many miles around Mecca. Yet the prophecy met with fulfilment in a marvellous manner, for the choicest fruits come to Mecca in plenty in all seasons.

رَبِّ اجْعَلْنِيْ مُقِيْمَ الصَّلٰوةِ وَمِنْ

41. [a]'My Lord, make me constant in observing Prayer, and my children too. Our Lord! [b]bestow Thy grace on me and accept my prayer, 1472. The reason, why Divine Prophets pray to God for forgiveness notwithstanding the fact that they enjoy protection against Satan, is their realization of the holiness and majesty of God and of their own weakness. It is this realization of human weakness which makes them humbly pray to God that He may "cover" them with His grace and mercy so that their very self may become completely obliterated and may merge completely in Him.

1473. This and the preceding verse give a graphic description of the bewilderment and consternation of the Meccans when they suddenly found the Holy Prophet at the gates of Mecca with an army ten thousand strong, without their having the least inkling of his coming.

1475. With the Fall of Mecca and the establishment of Islām in Arabia as a mighty force, a new universe, as it were, came into being with a new heaven and a new earth. The old order was swept away, and a new one, completely different from the old one, took its place.

CHAPTER 15

AL-ḤIJR

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

According to consensus of scholarly opinion the Sūrah was revealed at Mecca. In the preceding Sūrah it was pointed out that though the former Prophets possessed no material means, yet their mission progressed and prospered because they had the Word of God to guide and help them. So will the Holy Prophet succeed in his mission. The Word of God, the present Sūrah emphatically declares, is a great force before which no worldly power can stand. Forging of lies against God is not a thing to be trifled with and impostors and forgers of lies against God soon meet their deserved end, and it is stated that the Qur'ān is the revealed Word of God and possesses irrefutable proofs to establish its Divine origin.

Subject-Matter

The basic theme of the Sūrah is that no heavenly Scripture can approach the Qur'ān in beauty of diction and style and in the grandeur of its contents. It is a revealed Scripture par excellence. It stands unequalled and unrivalled in every respect. Its beauties and good qualities are so many and so varied that even disbelievers on occasions are forced to confess that they possess nothing like it and wish that they too had possessed a Scripture like it. In spite of this confession on their part, they do not see their way to accept it and do not realize that by their refusal to accept the Qur'ān they would be deprived of truth and would draw upon themselves the displeasure and punishment of God. The Quranic Message is bound to succeed and nothing can stand in its way. Those who hesitate or refuse to accept it will themselves be the sufferers. The Sūrah then states that if the Quranic revelation is ridiculed and treated with contempt, it is nothing to be wondered at, for the revelations of previous Prophets also were held up to scorn. But the scoffers do not appreciate this patent fact that it is no easy thing to forge lies against God, because to do so is to invite sure destruction. The All-Powerful God sees to it that lies are not successfully forged against Him and that a forgery becomes easily distinguished from His revealed Word. He vouchsafes it a special distinction and eminence and creates a favourable atmosphere for its acceptance by right thinking men, and raises those who accept it from a low to a very high level of moral excellence.

سُوْرَةُ الْحِجْرِ مَكِّيَّةٌ ١٥ — اٰياتها ١٠٠ — ركوعاتها ٦

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ①

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

الٓرٰ ۚ تِلْكَ اٰيٰتُ الْكِتٰبِ وَقُرْاٰنٍ مُّبِيْنٍ ②

2. [b]Alif Lām Rā. [c]These are verses of the perfect Book and of the illuminating Qur'ān.[1476]

PART XIV

رُبَمَا يَوَدُّ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا لَوْ كَانُوْا مُسْلِمِيْنَ ③

3. Often do the disbelievers wish that they were Muslims.[1477]

ذَرْهُمْ يَاْكُلُوْا وَيَتَمَتَّعُوْا وَيُلْهِهِمُ الْاَمَلُ فَسَوْفَ يَعْلَمُوْنَ ④

4. [d]Leave them alone that they may eat and enjoy themselves and that vain hope[1478] may beguile them, but they will soon know.

[a]1:1. [b]10:2; 11:2; 12:2; 13:2; 14:2. [c]27:2; 31:3. [d]47:13.

1476. Only in 27:2 and in the verse under comment do the words, 'Book' and 'Qur'ān', occur together but, whereas in the present verse the word 'Book' precedes the word 'Qur'ān', in 27:2 the order has been reversed. While the word 'Book' implies a prophecy that the Holy Book of Islam will continue to be written, the word 'Qur'ān' points to the prophecy that it will continue to be increasingly read and recited. Moreover, whereas the words 'illuminating Qur'ān' have been used in the Qur'ān only twice, the words 'illuminating Book' have been used no less than twelve times. This is to hint that a record in writing is much more useful than mere oral transmission. Muslims should, therefore, give more attention to education and to the study of written knowledge.

1477. It is on record that such a desire was actually expressed by some disbelievers in the time of the Holy Prophet.

1478. The verse may mean that the wish of disbelievers mentioned in the last verse—that they had been Muslims—is simply a 'vain hope', i.e. a mere passing wish; their real desire being the pursuit of worldly enjoyment and material gains.

وَمَآ اَهْلَكْنَا مِنْ قَرْيَةٍ اِلَّا وَلَهَا كِتَابٌ مَّعْلُوْمٌ ۝٥

5. And never a town[1479] have We destroyed but there was for it a known decree.[1479A]

6. [a]No people can escape their doom by outstripping their appointed term, nor can they remain behind.

وَقَالُوْا يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْ نُزِّلَ عَلَيْهِ الذِّكْرُ اِنَّكَ لَمَجْنُوْنٌ ۝٧

7. And they said, [b]'O thou to whom this exhortation has been sent down, thou art surely a madman,[1480]

8. [c]'Why dost thou not bring angels to us, if thou art of the truthful?'

مَا نُنَزِّلُ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةَ اِلَّا بِالْحَقِّ وَمَا كَانُوْٓا اِذًا مُّنْظَرِيْنَ ۝٩

9. [d]We do not send down angels but with the requirements of justice, and when We do send them, the disbelievers are not respited.[1481]

اِنَّا نَحْنُ نَزَّلْنَا الذِّكْرَ وَاِنَّا لَهٗ لَحٰفِظُوْنَ ۝١٠

10. Verily, it is [e]We Who have sent down this Exhortation, and most surely

[a]7:35; 10:50; 16:62. [b]37:37; 44:15; 68:52. [c]6:9; 11:13; 25:8. [d]6:9. [e]36:70; 65:11.

1479A. The words, 'known decree,' here signifies the time appointed for the destruction of the opponents of a Prophet as predicted by him.

1480. Majnūn does not mean 'one possessed by a devil or a jinn' or simply 'possessed', but 'a mad or insane person', or 'one whose intellectual faculties have become very much impaired' (Lane).

1481. Disbelievers are here told that when in accordance with the requirements of truth, justice and wisdom (Bilḥaqq) they will become deserving of Divine punishment, angels will descend upon them and they will be granted no respite.

We are its Guardian.[1482]

وَلَقَدْ اَرْسَلْنَا مِنْ قَبْلِكَ فِيْ شِيَعِ الْاَوَّلِيْنَ ﴿١١﴾

11. And We sent Messengers before thee among parties of ancient peoples.

وَمَا يَاْتِيْهِمْ مِّنْ رَّسُوْلٍ اِلَّا كَانُوْا بِهٖ يَسْتَهْزِءُوْنَ ﴿١٢﴾

12. And [a]there never came to them a Messenger but they mocked at him.

كَذٰلِكَ نَسْلُكُهٗ فِيْ قُلُوْبِ الْمُجْرِمِيْنَ ﴿١٣﴾

13. [b]Thus do We cause this[1483] habit of mocking to enter into the hearts of the sinful people;

[a]36:31; 43:8. [b]26:201.

1482. The promise about the protection and preservation of the Qur'ān made in this verse has been so remarkably fulfilled that even if there had been no other proof, this fact alone would have sufficed to establish its Divine origin. This Sūrah was revealed at Mecca (Noldeke) when the life of the Holy Prophet and his followers was extremely precarious and the enemy could easily crush the new Faith. It was then that disbelievers were challenged to do their worst to destroy it and were warned that God would frustrate all their designs because He Himself was its Guardian. The challenge was open and unequivocal and the enemy strong and ruthless, and yet the Qur'ān remained safe against corruption and interpolation and tampering with and has ever continued to enjoy perfect security. This distinction of the Qur'ān is not shared by any other revealed Book. Sir William Muir, the notoriously hostile critic of Islām, says: 'We may, upon the strongest presumption, affirm that every verse in the Qur'ān is the genuine and unaltered composition of Mohammad himself… There is otherwise every security, internal and external, that we possess the text which Moḥammad himself gave forth and used… To compare their pure text with the various readings of our Scriptures, is to compare things between which there is no analogy' (Introduction to 'The Life of Moḥammad'). Prof. Noldeke, the great German Orientalist writes as follows: 'Efforts of European scholars to prove the existence of later interpolations in the Qur'ān have failed' (Enc. Brit.). The utter failure of Dr. Mingana, a few years ago, to find fault with the purity of the Quranic text, on the contrary, set the seal on the truth of its claim that among all revealed Scriptures the Qur'ān alone has remained completely immune from all interpolation or tampering with it. See "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp.1263-1266.

1483. The pronoun 'this' refers to the disbelievers' practice of ridiculing the Divine Prophets mentioned in the preceding verse.

لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِهٖ وَقَدْ خَلَتْ سُنَّةُ الْاَوَّلِيْنَ ﴿١٤﴾

14. [a]They believe not in this Qur'ān, though the example of the former peoples has gone before them.

وَلَوْ فَتَحْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ بَابًا مِّنَ السَّمَآءِ فَظَلُّوْا فِيْهِ يَعْرُجُوْنَ ﴿١٥﴾ لَ

15. And even if We opened to them a gate in heaven, and they kept ascending[1484] through it,

لَقَالُوْٓا اِنَّمَا سُكِّرَتْ اَبْصَارُنَا بَلْ نَحْنُ قَوْمٌ مَّسْحُوْرُوْنَ ﴿١٦﴾ ع ١٤

16. They would surely say, 'Only our eyes are dazed; rather we are a bewitched[1485] people.'

R. 2.

وَلَقَدْ جَعَلْنَا فِي السَّمَآءِ بُرُوْجًا وَّزَيَّنّٰهَا لِلنّٰظِرِيْنَ ﴿١٧﴾ لَ

17. And [b]We have, indeed, made mansions of stars in the heaven and have adorned[1486] it for beholders.

وَحَفِظْنٰهَا مِنْ كُلِّ شَيْطٰنٍ رَّجِيْمٍ ﴿١٨﴾ لَ

18. And [c]We have guarded it against the intrusion of every rejected Satan.[1487]

[a]26:202. [b]37:7; 41:13; 67:6. [c]37:8; 41:13.

1484. The verse may mean that if God were to open the gates of His mercy and avert punishment, then instead of turning to Him, the disbelievers would become engaged in the acquisition of material prosperity and comforts.

1485. Disbelievers have become such strangers to spiritual matters that even if they were to enjoy some of the spiritual experiences which the Holy Prophet had gone through and were to have some of the visions of the spiritual heights to which he had arisen, they would not believe and would only say that they had become victims of magic or witchcraft.

1486. It is not merely the beautiful appearance of the planets and the stars at night that is meant here. The great purpose which their creation serves is mentioned in the following verses as well as in 16:17 and 67:6, and it is in the fulfilment of that great purpose that their real beauty lies.

1487. The verse points out that just as in the physical world evilly disposed persons exercise some sort of power or influence and can cause a certain amount of injury to other men but cannot completely deprive them of heavenly blessings, e.g. the wholesome influence of stars, etc. similarly, in the spiritual world, satans too have no control over the Prophets and their true followers (v.43). "Satan" in the verse under comment refers to such

إِلَّا مَنِ اسْتَرَقَ السَّمْعَ فَأَتْبَعَهُ شِهَابٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٩﴾

19. But [a]if anyone hears stealthily something of revelation and distorts it,[1488] there pursues him a bright flame.[1488A] disbelievers as desire to attain union with God independently of the Prophets (vv.14-16). Against such persons the spiritual heavens have indeed been guarded and their gates barred.

[a]37:11; 67:6.

1488A The word 'mansions of stars' in v.17 represents Divine Messengers in general, while the words 'bright flame' in the present verse or 'penetrating flame' occurring in 37:11 stand for the Prophet of the day, or the Master-Prophet (the Holy Prophet). The pursuit of satans by Shihāb signifies that so long as a religious teaching remains based on Divine revelation (adh-Dhikr v.10) and gives light and guidance, Divine Reformers also continue to appear to guard it. One of the signs of the appearance of Divine Reformers in the world is the frequent occurrence of meteoric phenomenon, called the falling of stars in large numbers. In the time of the Holy Prophet meteors fell in such large numbers that disbelievers thought that both heaven and earth were going to fall asunder (Kathīr). It was from these extraordinary happenings that Heraclius who, it appears, had some knowledge of astronomy, inferred that the Prophet-King of the Arabs must have appeared (Bukhārī ch. Bad'ul-Waḥy). In the time of Jesus also meteors fell in unusually large numbers (Biḥār). This celestial phenomenon was also witnessed in our own time—in 1885. Thus both history and Ḥadīth bear testimony to the fact that the falling of meteors in unusually large numbers is a sure sign of the appearance of a Divine Reformer. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp.1272-1276.

'Satan' in v.18 may be taken to refer to diviners and soothsayers. In that case 'the pelting of the satans' (67:6) would mean that during the time when there is no Divine Reformer in the world, astrologers and soothsayers succeed, to some extent, in their nefarious trade of hoodwinking simple-minded people but, with the appearance of a Divine Reformer, their false knowledge becomes

وَالْاَرْضَ مَدَدْنٰهَا وَاَلْقَيْنَا فِيْهَا رَوَاسِيَ وَاَنْۢبَتْنَا فِيْهَا مِنْ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ مَّوْزُوْنٍ ﴿٢٠﴾

20. [a]And the earth have We spread out,[1489] and [b]set therein firm mountains[1489A] and caused everything to grow therein in proper proportion.

وَجَعَلْنَا لَكُمْ فِيْهَا مَعَايِشَ وَمَنْ لَّسْتُمْ لَهٗ بِرٰزِقِيْنَ ﴿٢١﴾

21. And [c]We have made for you therein means of livelihood and also for all those for whom you do not provide.

وَاِنْ مِّنْ شَيْءٍ اِلَّا عِنْدَنَا خَزَآئِنُهٗ ۫ وَمَا نُنَزِّلُهٗۤ اِلَّا بِقَدَرٍ مَّعْلُوْمٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

22. And [d]there is not a thing but are limitless treasures thereof with Us and We send it not down except in a known measure.[1490] exposed and people can easily distinguish between the true prophecies of heavenly Messengers and the conjectures of astrologers and soothsayers. The verse may also signify that when some mischievous people, after tearing out a passage from the text of the heavenly revelation, seek to spread it in a distorted form, a fresh Sign comes like a brilliant flash and destroys the machinations of the satanic people.

1489. The words, Wal Arḍa Madadnā-hā, mean, 'We have spread out the earth' or, 'We have enriched it.' Both meanings are applicable here. The verse signifies that God has made the earth so large that in spite of its being round, man feels no discomfort on account of its roundness; or it means that God has enriched the earth with fertilizers. Astronomical researches have disclosed the fact that the earth continues to acquire new strength and fertility from the stars from which particles of matter fall on it in the form of meteors or meteoric dust, which serves to increase its fertility.

1489A. The earth needs a good supply of water to grow food. For this purpose God has created mountains which serve as reservoirs of water, storing it in the form of snow and distributing it over the earth by means of rivers.

1490. God possesses an unlimited stock of everything. But in His infinite mercy He directs the minds of men to a particular thing only when a real and genuine need for it arises. Like the material universe, the Qur'ān is a spiritual universe in which lie hidden treasures of spiritual knowledge which are revealed to man according to the needs of the time.

وَاَرْسَلْنَا الرِّيٰحَ لَوَاقِحَ فَاَنْزَلْنَا مِنَ السَّمَآءِ مَآءً فَاَسْقَيْنٰكُمُوْهُ ۚ وَمَآ اَنْتُمْ لَهٗ بِخٰزِنِيْنَ ﴿٢٣﴾

23. And [a]We send fecundating[1491] winds, then We send down water from the clouds, then We give it to you to drink, and you could not yourselves store it.

وَاِنَّا لَنَحْنُ نُحْيٖ وَنُمِيْتُ وَنَحْنُ الْوٰرِثُوْنَ ﴿٢٤﴾

24. And verily, [b]it is We Who give life, and We Who cause death; and [c]it is We Who are the sole Inheritors of all.[1492]

وَلَقَدْ عَلِمْنَا الْمُسْتَقْدِمِيْنَ مِنْكُمْ وَلَقَدْ عَلِمْنَا الْمُسْتَاْخِرِيْنَ ﴿٢٥﴾

25. And We do know those who go ahead among you and We also do know those who lag behind.

وَاِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ يَحْشُرُهُمْ ؕ اِنَّهٗ حَكِيْمٌ عَلِيْمٌ ﴿٢٦﴾ ع ۲

26. And, surely, [d]it is thy Lord Who will gather them together. Surely, He is Wise, All-Knowing.

R. 3.

وَلَقَدْ خَلَقْنَا الْاِنْسَانَ مِنْ صَلْصَالٍ مِّنْ حَمَاٍ مَّسْنُوْنٍ ﴿٢٧﴾ ج

27. And, surely, [e]We created man of dry ringing clay, of black mud wrought into shape.[1493]

[a]7:58; 24:44; 25:49. [b]50:44. [c]19:41. [d]6:129; 25:18; 34:41. [e]6:3; 15:29, 34; 55:15.

1491. Lawāqiḥ are such winds as carry pollen from the male to the female trees in order to fecundate them. The word also means such winds as carry vapours rising from the earth to the upper regions where they assume the form of clouds.

1492. A great revolution will take place through the teachings of the Qur'ān, causing the old order to die, and true believers will inherit the earth.

1493. The creation of man from Ṣalṣāl (dry ringing clay) signifies that he has been created from a matter in which the faculty and attribute of speech lay latent. This shows that man has been endowed with the power to respond to the heavenly voice. But as Ṣalṣāl (dry ringing clay) emits a sound only when struck with something extraneous, the word is intended to hint that man's power to respond is subject to his receiving the Divine Call. This faculty establishes his superiority over the whole creation. The word Ḥama' signifies that man has been created from black mud, i.e. earth and water; earth being the source of the body and water of the soul. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān speaks of

وَالْجَآنَّ خَلَقْنٰهُ مِنْ قَبْلُ مِنْ نَّارِ السَّمُوْمِ ﴿٢٨﴾

28. And [a]the jinn We had created before of the fire of hot wind.[1494]

وَاِذْ قَالَ رَبُّكَ لِلْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ اِنِّيْ خَالِقٌۢ بَشَرًا مِّنْ صَلْصَالٍ مِّنْ حَمَاٍ مَّسْنُوْنٍ ﴿٢٩﴾

29. And remember when thy Lord said to the angels, [b]'I am about to create man of dry ringing clay, of black mud wrought into shape;

فَاِذَا سَوَّيْتُهٗ وَنَفَخْتُ فِيْهِ مِنْ رُّوْحِيْ فَقَعُوْا لَهٗ سٰجِدِيْنَ ﴿٣٠﴾

30. 'So [c]when I have fashioned him in perfection and have breathed into him of My Spirit, [d]fall ye down in submission to him.'[1495]

'earth' and 'water' separately as things of which man has been created (3:60; 21:31). By joining the word Ṣalṣāl (dry ringing clay) to the word Ḥama' (black mud), the Qur'ān means to point out that while other living creatures are created of Ḥama' (black mud) only, viz. of earth and water, for they too possess a certain kind of undeveloped soul, man is created of Ḥama' (black mud) combined with Ṣalṣāl (dry ringing clay), i.e. the attribute of speech. He is also Masnūn, i.e. wrought into perfect shape (95:5). The verse does not mean that clay became at once moulded into a living being when God breathed life into it. The Qur'ān repeatedly states that the creation of the universe was gradual. The present verse speaks of only the first stage of man's creation. Other stages of his creation have been mentioned in 30:21; 35:12; 22:6; 23:15 and 40:68. The Quranic statement that man was created out of "earth" (which, incidentally, means that the long process of his creation started with it) finds corroboration from the fact that even now man's food is derived from the earth, certain parts of it being derived directly and others indirectly. This shows that the matter contained in the earth forms the origin of man; for if such had not been the case, he could not have derived his nutrition from it, because only that thing of which a being is made can supply it with nutrition, a foreign element being unable to replenish the wastage. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary" under this verse.

1494. A similar Quranic expression, man is made of haste (21:38)—shows that the verse under comment means that the jinn possessed a fiery nature and not that they were actually made of fire. Thus creation from clay or from fire are metaphors signifying a pliant and submissive nature or a fiery and inflammable temperament.

1495. By the word "angels" is meant the whole of creation, because angels

31. [a]So the angels submitted, all of them together.

34 [d]He answered, 'I am not going to submit to a mortal whom Thou hast created of dry ringing clay, of black mud wrought into shape.'

قَالَ فَاخْرُجْ مِنْهَا فَاِنَّكَ رَجِيْمٌ ۙ﴿۳۵﴾

35. [e]God said, 'Then get out hence,[1497] for, surely, thou art rejected.

constitute the first link of all creation and, as such, a command given to them really applies to the whole of creation. It is significant that whereas elsewhere the Qur'ān speaks of the command of God to the angels to submit to "Adam", in the present and the following verses the word used is "man". Thus both these words have been used synonymously in the Qur'ān. The command given to angels with regard to Adam applies to every man. Into every man God breathes His Spirit and angels are commanded to serve him. Man is God's vicegerent on earth and in his person he reflects Divine attributes.

1496. God punished Satan (vv.35, 36) for his failure to carry out a command which was addressed only to angels (vv.29, 30), because a command given to angels automatically applied to all those creatures which were subject to the authority of the angels. Elsewhere, the Qur'ān itself makes the point clear that the command to angels applied to Iblīs also (7:12, 13).

1496A. The Arabic expression also means, what ails thee; what is your reason; what is the matter with thee?

1497. The pronoun hā in the expression min-hā does not refer to the post-mortal Heaven because Heaven is a place where Satan could not possibly enter and tempt Adam and from where no one is ever turned out (15:49). It refers to that state of apparent bliss in this world in which men happen to be before the advent of a Prophet when, though they might be victim to wrong beliefs, yet, not having rejected a Prophet, they are not altogether deprived of Divine favours which are represented as Jannah (garden) in the Qur'ān.

1498. The words 'when they shall be raised' signify the spiritual rebirth of man when having attained the stage of Nafs-e-Muṭma'innah (the soul at peace with God) he becomes immune to satanic seduction and spiritual fall. This dialogue between God and Satan is, as hinted here, only an allegory or a metaphor.

1499. The words 'appointed time' mean, as explained in v. 37, the day when the Prophets and their followers achieve final victory over their adversaries, and falsehood and its votaries are finally crushed.

1500. The verse seems to suggest that human nature is intrinsically pure. Only those lose the right path who defile their own nature and choose to follow Satan. This idea has been further explained in 91:11.

1501. In Arabic the number "seven," as also "seventy," are often used to express not a specific numeral but the idea either of perfection and completeness or of profusion. The verse signifies that Hell will have the number of gates corresponding to the number and variety of sins committed by the guilty persons. The number "seven" may also refer to the seven exteroceptive senses, viz. the senses of vision, hearing, smell, taste, touch, pain and temperature, by which man receives impressions from the outer world.

1502. The words "peace" and "security" signify, respectively, freedom from internal anxieties that eat into the heart of a person and from external pain and punishment.

1503. Only those persons can be said to be enjoying a truly heavenly life whose hearts are free from all feelings of rancour and spite against their brethren.

1504. The verse implies that Heaven will be a place of constant and continuous work. In spite of this, however, believers will feel none of the fatigue which is the inevitable result of hard work, and there will also be no waste or decay which are the result of fatigue.

1506. By using the word al-Mursalūn (messengers), the Qur'ān hints that the bearers of the message were humans. The Bible, however, sometimes mentions them as men (Gen. 18:2, 16, 22) and sometimes as angels (Gen. 19:11, 15).

1507. Lot thought these men to be mere wayfarers whose visit to the place was only casual.

used in this verse shows that the party who left the city with Lot did not consist of his two daughters only, as stated in the Bible (Gen. chap. 19), but of other believers as well, some of whom must have been males, as the plural masculine pronoun indicates. This view is supported by another passage in the Bible (Gen. 18:32).

1509. The words may have been used figuratively, meaning 'let none of you give thought to,' or 'feel anxious for,' those left behind.

1510. Lot had been told by his people not to bring strangers into the city and so when the guests came to him they were glad that he would be taken to task for having defied their warnings.

1511. Lot begged his people not to disgrace him for offering hospitality to the strangers.

1512. As relations between Lot's people and the neighbouring tribes were strained his people had warned him not to bring strangers into the city. But as travel was neither safe nor comfortable in those parts of the country, Prophet Lot would entertain lonely and stranded wayfarers in his house. This was resented by his people, who were looking for a pretext to expel him from the city, being already tired of his teaching and preaching. But they could not do so without a valid excuse. Now they found a seemingly good excuse for venting their wrath on him because he had given shelter to strangers in his house against their warnings. From this it is clear that Lot's people did not

1513. See 11:79.

1514. Mutawassimīn is plural of Mutawassim which is derived from Tawassama and means, one who deliberates over a thing and examines it or does so repeatedly to obtain a clear knowledge of it (Aqrab).

1515. A way is said to be Muqīm when it continues to be used by wayfarers. The way referred to here, i.e. the one connecting Arabia with Syria, is still in use, thus fulfilling the prophecy implied in the adjective used for it in this verse. The way passes along the Dead Sea which is locally known as the Sea of Lot.

1516. The fact that, according to the Qur'ān, the Prophet Shu'aib was sent both to Aṣḥābul-Aikah, i.e. People of the Wood (26:177, 178) and Ahl-e-

Madyan, People of Midian (11:85) shows that both are the names of the same people or, rather of two sections of the same people who had adopted two different means of livelihood, one living on commerce and the other keeping herds of camels and sheep. Evidence of the close relationship of the "People of the Wood" with the "People of Midian" is furnished by the fact that identical faults have been ascribed to both in the Qur'ān (7:86 & 26:182-184). Midian seems to be both the name of the tribe and the town in which these people lived at the head of the Gulf of Aqabah, near which was situated the wilderness of Aikah, abounding in dwarf trees of the species of wild plums and affording shelter to camels, sheep and goats ("The Gold Mines of Midian" by Sir Richard Francis Burton).

1517. In the case of the city of Lot the highway has been called 'the way that still exists' (v. 77) which implies a prophecy that it will continue to exist in the future. In the case of the habitation of 'the People of the Wood,' the road has been called 'an open highway.' The old road which connected Asia with Egypt, has now ceased to be used by caravans, though as the word "open" hints, the track still remains.

1518. Ḥijr lay between Tabūk and Medina. Here lived the tribe of Thamūd to whom Ṣāliḥ was sent as a Warner. The city appears to have been largely built of stones and was surrounded by a stone wall and ramparts. Hence this name.

1519. In the foregoing verses three different peoples have been mentioned—(a) the people of Lot; (b) the people of Shu'aib and (c) the people of Ṣāliḥ. They have not been mentioned in their chronological order but in the order of the distance of their towns from Mecca. The town of the people of Lot was the most distant of the three. Next in order of distance lived the people of Aikah. Ḥijr being situated between Tabūk and Medina, the tribe of Thamūd were the nearest of the three and it has consequently been mentioned last of all. This unusual order has been adopted in preference to the more natural one with a view to making the statement effective from the point of view of the persons addressed, the tribe that was least known to the Arabs being mentioned first and the tribe which the Arabs knew most being mentioned last.

1520. This verse shows that the Thamūd were a civilized, powerful and rich people. They had separate summer and winter resorts and led secure and comfortable lives. Even when they went to the hills in summer for recreation and change of climate and left their winter habitations, they felt free from attacks from any quarter. The verse also hints at the highly developed state of their architecture.

1521. It appears from 7:79 that the calamity referred to in this verse was an earthquake.

1521A. The creation of the universe and the wonderful design and order that pervade it surely lead to the one inescapable inference that human life is not limited to the temporary and short existence on this earth, and that a great purpose underlies it and man has not been created just to eat, drink and be merry for a while and then die an eternal death.

88. And [a]We have, indeed, given thee the seven oft-repeated verses,[1522] and the Great Qur'ān.

لَا تَمُدَّنَّ عَيْنَيْكَ اِلٰى مَا مَتَّعْنَا بِهٖۤ اَزْوَاجًا مِّنْهُمْ وَلَا تَحْزَنْ عَلَيْهِمْ وَاخْفِضْ جَنَاحَكَ لِلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ ﴿٨٩﴾

89. [b]Stretch not thine eyes towards what We have bestowed on some classes of them for temporary enjoyment and grieve[1523] not for them; and lower thy wing of mercy for the believers.

وَقُلْ اِنِّيْۤ اَنَا النَّذِيْرُ الْمُبِيْنُ ﴿٩٠﴾ۚ

90. And say, [c]'I am, indeed, a plain Warner.'

كَمَاۤ اَنْزَلْنَا عَلَى الْمُقْتَسِمِيْنَ ﴿٩١﴾ۙ

91. Because We have decided to send down punishment on

[a]39:24. [b]20:132. [c]22:50; 29:51; 51:51, 52; 67:27.

1522. According to such eminent authorities as 'Umar, 'Alī, Ibn-e-'Abbās and Ibn-e-Mas'ūd, these words refer to the Opening Chapter of the Qur'ān, i.e. Al-Fātiḥah, because it is repeated and recited in every Rak'at of the Prayer. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that As-Sab'ul-Mathānī is the Opening Chapter of the Qur'ān (Bukhārī). This Chapter is also called 'Mother of the Qur'ān' (Ummul-Qur'ān) and 'the Opening Chapter of the Book' (Fātiḥatul-Kitāb). According to Zajjāj and Abū Ḥayyān, the Opening Chapter is given this name because it contains the praises of God. The rest of the Qur'ān which follows the Opening Chapter has been called 'the Great Qur'ān' (Al-Qur'ānul-'Aẓīm). This name, however, equally applies to the First Chapter also inasmuch as a portion of the Book may rightly be called the Book itself There is a saying of the Holy Prophet to the effect that the Opening Chapter of the Qur'ān is also 'the Great Qur'ān' (Musnad v. 2, p. 448). In fact, this Chapter constitutes an abridgement of the whole of the Qur'ān or, as it is said, it is the Qur'ān in miniature; the Book as a whole having been summarised and epitomised in it. Mathānī being also the plural of Mathnā, which means praise, the verse would mean that Sūrah Al-Fātiḥah gives a comprehensive description of Divine attributes. Mathānī also meaning a bend of the valley, the verse would mean that Al-Fātiḥah fully explains the relationship of God to man.

1523. The real significance of the verse is that the Holy Prophet has been told not to grieve over the fact that disbelievers were about to be punished and all their riches, prosperity and glory of which they are so proud would be of no avail to them.

those who have formed themselves into groups[1524] against thee;

الَّذِيْنَ جَعَلُوا الْقُرْاٰنَ عِضِيْنَ ﴿٩٢﴾

92. Who have pronounced the Qur'ān to be so many lies.[1525]

فَوَرَبِّكَ لَنَسْـَٔلَنَّهُمْ اَجْمَعِيْنَ ﴿٩٣﴾

93. So by thy Lord, We will, surely, question them all

عَمَّا كَانُوْا يَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿٩٤﴾

94. Concerning that which they used to do.

فَاصْدَعْ بِمَا تُؤْمَرُ وَاَعْرِضْ عَنِ الْمُشْرِكِيْنَ ﴿٩٥﴾

95. So [a]declare openly that which thou art commanded to convey and turn aside from those who ascribe partners to Allāh.

اِنَّا كَفَيْنٰكَ الْمُسْتَهْزِءِيْنَ ﴿٩٦﴾

96. [b]We will, certainly, suffice thee against those who mock—

الَّذِيْنَ يَجْعَلُوْنَ مَعَ اللّٰهِ اِلٰهًا اٰخَرَ ۚ فَسَوْفَ يَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿٩٧﴾

97. Who set up another god with Allāh, but soon shall they come to know.

وَلَقَدْ نَعْلَمُ اَنَّكَ يَضِيْقُ صَدْرُكَ بِمَا يَقُوْلُوْنَ ﴿٩٨﴾

98. And, indeed, [c]We know that bosom becomes straitened[1526] because of what they say.

[a]5:68. [b]2:138. [c]6:34; 11:13.

1524. The Meccans had formed themselves into several groups and had taken upon themselves different duties to put obstacles in the way of the Holy Prophet, or these different groups had assigned to themselves different roles when they had resolved to kill him; Muqtasimīn also signifying, 'those who allotted different duties to one another.'

1525. 'Iḍīn is the plural of 'Iḍah which means, a lie or falsehood; a calumny; an enchantment; a piece, part or portion of a thing; a party, sect or class of people (Lane).

1526. The Holy Prophet was not grieved because the disbelievers mocked at him but because they associated other gods with Allāh. His grief was due to his jealous love for God on the one hand and to his sincere solicitude for his people on the other.

فَسَبِّحْ بِحَمْدِ رَبِّكَ وَكُنْ مِّنَ السّٰجِدِيْنَ ﴿٩٩﴾

99. But [a]glorify thy Lord praising Him, and be of those who prostrate themselves before Him.

وَاعْبُدْ رَبَّكَ حَتّٰى يَاْتِيَكَ الْيَقِيْنُ ﴿١٠٠﴾

100. And continue worshipping thy Lord till death comes to thee.[1527]

[a]20:131; 50:40; 110:4.

1527. The verse purports to say that inasmuch as the main purpose of the Holy Prophet's mission, viz. the establishment of the Unity of God, was now going to be fulfilled, he should in joyous thanksgiving extol the praises of God and bow down to Him in devoted prostration.

CHAPTER 16
AN-NAḤL
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

This Sūrah was revealed at Mecca. Ibn-e-'Abbās makes an exception of vv.96, 97 and 98, which according to him were revealed at Medina. Professor Noldeke, however, thinks that the Sūrah was revealed at Mecca with the exception of vv. 44, 112, 120, 121 and 126. It is prefaced with no abbreviated letters. As the subject-matter of a Sūrah is an amplification and expansion of the abbreviated letters placed at its head and is governed by them, the subject-matter of a Sūrah which has no abbreviated letters constitutes, in fact, a continuation of the subject-matter of the preceding Sūrah which has abbreviated letters in its beginning; and is subject to, and governed by, those abbreviated letters. Thus the subject-matter of this Sūrah should be considered as a continuation of the subject-matter of the preceding Sūrah (Al-Ḥijr) and should be taken as governed by the letters Alif Lām Rā, placed in the beginning of that Sūrah; only the method of approach and treatment of the subject is different.

Subject-Matter

Quite appropriately the Sūrah has been given the title of An-Naḥl (lit. the Bee), because by a reference to the natural instinct of the bee which has been termed Waḥy in the Qur'ān (16:69) attention is drawn to the fact that the entire universe depends for its smooth and successful working on Waḥy, whether manifest or hidden, direct or indirect. This subject constitutes the pivot or basic theme of the Sūrah. Moreover, the subject of Jihād has been introduced here as an important subject. As Jihād was to become the target of attacks from all quarters, it is hinted that, like honey, which is protected by the bee from undue interference by its God-given sting, the Qur'ān which is a storehouse of spiritual honey shall be protected by the use of force which Muslims will have to employ to protect it. Believers are then told that if they wish their kith and kin to accept the Qur'ān they should see that their own hearts are cleansed because without purity of heart it is impossible to know God. God does not compel anyone to accept the truth, because by using force the very purpose of religion is defeated.

Next, the Sūrah enters into a discussion of the Life after death and it is stated that even in this world nations are resurrected and given a new life, and it is with their Hijrah (Emigration) that their resurrection begins. Accordingly, the Holy Prophet also would have to leave his native place and emigrate to Medina because it was essential for the spiritual development of his followers that they should be separated from disbelievers and be educated and trained in the teaching of their religion in congenial environments. From this the conclusion is drawn that if it is so necessary for the spiritual progress of believers to undergo Hijrah in this world, how far more is it necessary for the permanent spiritual advancement of man that he should undergo a spiritual Hijrah which is another name for death. After this Hijrah the Faithful and the disbelievers begin to travel on separate paths; the disbelievers go to Hell and the Faithful bask in the sunshine of Divine Grace and scale the heights of atonement with God. The subject that great and wholesome results will flow from the Holy Prophet's Hijrah (Emigration) is continued. The Sūrah proceeds briefly to deal with the question, why respite is granted to disbelievers and why they are not forced to accept the Truth. This leads to the treatment of the objection that if the Holy Prophet is a true Messenger of God, why is his teaching at variance with that of earlier Prophets. In answer to this objection it is stated that the real teaching which former Prophets gave to their peoples greatly differed from the current, adulterated and corrupt teachings attributed to them. In fact, a new Prophet comes only when former Teachings become corrupt and lose their title to Divine protection. By citing the example of the bee, the Sūrah draws attention to the fact that just as, guided by Divine inspiration, the bee collects its food from fruits and flowers and converts it into delicious and wholesome honey, it is in the fitness of things that for his moral regeneration and spiritual development man should be guided by revelation, and proceeds to say that just as honey varies in quality, so are all men not of equal spiritual development. Like the different colours and flavours of honey, revelations of various Prophets are also of different patterns. Then one more argument is given to establish the need of Divine revelation. When with the passage of time people become separated from the era of a Prophet and vested interests grow up and become entrenched and privileges flow from father to son and all natural avenues of progress and advancement are closed upon the common man, God raises a new Prophet who wages a relentless war against this tyranny of man against man, and the so-called leaders who erstwhile enjoyed monopoly of power and benefit are dethroned from seats of authority and the common men who follow the new Prophet take their place. The chains of bondage of men are broken and they begin to breathe in an atmosphere of true freedom. Next, disbelievers are warned that great changes which are decreed to be brought about by means of the Qur'ān would take place very soon. The time cries for a change and the new Message possesses all the essential qualities and ingredients of a perfect Teaching. The followers of this new Teaching will succeed and all power and dominion will pass into their hands. A veritable war will be waged against disbelief and its leaders will be destroyed. Towards the end of the Sūrah the Holy Prophet is told that the sphere and scope of his preaching should now widen and embrace in its orbit Christians and Jews. This would excite a new opposition and Muslims would suffer persecution from all quarters; but the Divine cause of Islam would continue to grow and prosper amid opposition and persecution, and its enemies would meet with their deserved fate.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ①

1. [a]In the name of Allāh, the Gracious, the Merciful.

اَتٰۤى اَمْرُ اللّٰهِ فَلَا تَسْتَعْجِلُوْهُ ؕ سُبْحٰنَهٗ وَتَعٰلٰى عَمَّا يُشْرِكُوْنَ ②

2. [b]The decree of Allāh is at hand,[1528] so seek ye not to hasten it. Holy is He and Exalted far above all that which they associate with Him.

4. [c]He has created the heavens and the earth in accordance with the requirements of wisdom.[1530] Exalted is He far above all that they associate with Him.

1528. The words mean that the time of punishment for disbelievers, or the time of the ushering in of the new order has already arrived.

1529. By Rūḥ, (which signifies soul or spirit; Divine revelation; the Qur'ān; etc.—Lane), is here meant the life-giving Word of God. The word also denotes a Prophet's Divine Message because of its life-giving qualities.

1530. The expression 'with the requirements of wisdom' may mean that heavens and earth have their allotted tasks in the spiritual regeneration of man so that both jointly produce the desired result. Or it may mean that God has created the heavens and the earth so that they may serve to turn man's attention to God, and man may see that nothing is perfect by itself except Him. The heavens stand in need of earth for the performance of their work and likewise the earth is dependent on heavens and both are subject to the Will of God. So the purpose of the creation of the heavens and the earth is to demonstrate to man the fact that nothing is perfect in itself except God.

1531. After God had created the heavens and the earth according to a definite system of laws, He created man and sent down His revelation for his guidance. But notwithstanding the fact that after having created man from an apparently contemptible seed God endowed him with the highest faculties, he, instead of acting upon the guidance vouchsafed to him by God, starts questioning His powers and prerogatives.

1532. When God has taken so much care to provide for the physical and material needs of man, the idea cannot be entertained for a single moment that He should have neglected to make a similar provision for his spiritual needs.

1532A. The words may mean that God will bring into existence new means of transport which were yet unknown to man. The prophecy has been wonderfully fulfilled in the form of railway trains, steamships, motor cars, aeroplanes, etc. God alone knows what new means of transport are yet to be invented.

1533. The energy, which makes plants grow, might be latent in the soil, but it does not come into play unless the soil receives water from heaven. Even so man may possess most excellent inherent faculties, but he cannot develop them without the help of Divine revelation. To base man's spiritual development upon his intellect alone is like saying that the earth can grow plants without the help of water.

وَمَا ذَرَاَ لَكُمْ فِي الْاَرْضِ مُخْتَلِفًا

15. And [b]He it is Who has subjected to you the sea that you may eat therefrom fresh flesh and may take forth therefrom articles which you wear as ornaments. And thou seest the ships ploughing through it, that you may journey[1536] thereby and that you may seek of His bounty in other ways and that you may be grateful.

1534. One of the most wonderful features of God's creation is that no two things or persons are exactly alike. But for this diversity there would have been indescribable confusion and chaos in the world. It would have been difficult to distinguish one thing from another or one person from another person. Similarly, there is such diversity in the dispositions and temperaments of men that it is beyond human power to devise a teaching which may equally suit all natures. No man has full knowledge of the diversity that exists in nature. God alone knows these differences and diversities and, therefore, He alone can give a Teaching which can equally suit and benefit all.

1535. Each of the three words, viz. Yatafakkarūn, Ya'qilūn and Yadhdhakkarūn which have been placed at the end of vv. 12th, 13th and 14th respectively may be understood not only as especially appropriate to the theme of the particular verse in which it is used, but also as applicable to the general theme dealt with collectively in the three verses, their use in their particular places being determined by the degree of their importance. The word "reflection" has been used first because it constitutes the first means for, and of all moral qualities it is the first to be awakened in, the process of the moral reformation of man. From the habit of reflection grows understanding or 'making use of reason.' At this second stage man accomplishes his moral reformation. After this comes the third stage when temptations have been completely overcome and moral struggle ceases and man 'takes heed' and is self-admonished and the doing of good works becomes a part of his nature.

1536. The sea is a most important source of material benefits to man. It is the great repository of water from which the sun supplies us with rain. It is also a great highway for travel and commerce and an important source of food for man.

وَاَلْقٰى فِى الْاَرْضِ رَوَاسِىَ اَنْ

1537. Geology has established the fact that mountains have, to a great extent, made secure the earth against earthquakes.

1538. The word Subul (routes) here does not mean the artificial roads constructed by human hands but natural pathways formed by mountain-passes, rivers and valleys which have served as highways throughout the ages.

1539. The verse signifies that had the earth been of uniform surface and there had been no ups and downs, no valleys, mountains or rivers, it would have been almost impossible for men to find their way from one place to another. The distinctive physical features of the earth's surface help men to know their way. Today these landmarks have proved to be of great help in air navigation. The stars also help wayfarers to find their way on land and sea.

وَالَّذِيْنَ يَدْعُوْنَ مِنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ لَا يَخْلُقُوْنَ شَيْـًٔا وَّهُمْ يُخْلَقُوْنَ ﴿٢١﴾

قَدْ مَكَرَ الَّذِيْنَ مِنْ قَبْلِهِمْ فَاَتَى اللّٰهُ بُنْيَانَهُمْ مِّنَ الْقَوَاعِدِ فَخَرَّ عَلَيْهِمُ السَّقْفُ مِنْ فَوْقِهِمْ وَاَتٰىهُمُ الْعَذَابُ مِنْ حَيْثُ لَا يَشْعُرُوْنَ ﴿٢٧﴾

27. Those who were before them also devised plans, but [a]Allāh came upon their structure from the very foundations, so that the roof fell down upon them from above them,[1540] and the punishment came upon them from where they knew not.

ثُمَّ يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ يُخْزِيْهِمْ وَيَقُوْلُ اَيْنَ شُرَكَآءِيَ الَّذِيْنَ كُنْتُمْ تُشَآقُّوْنَ فِيْهِمْ ؕ قَالَ الَّذِيْنَ اُوْتُوا الْعِلْمَ اِنَّ الْخِزْيَ الْيَوْمَ وَالسُّوْٓءَ عَلَى الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ﴿٢٨﴾ۙ

28. Then on the Day of Resurrection He will humiliate them and will say, [b]'Where are My partners for whose sake you used to oppose My Prophets?' Those endowed with knowledge will say, 'This day humiliation and affliction will surely befall the disbelievers.'

29. [c]Those whom the angels cause to die while they are wronging their souls, [d]will offer submission, pleading, 'We used not to do any evil.' It will be said to them, 'Nay, surely, Allāh knows well what you used to do,[1541]

1540. It was no ordinary destruction which overtook the opponents of past Prophets. They were destroyed root and branch. The very foundations of the edifices they had erected and the walls and the roofs thereof tumbled down upon them, that is to say, neither the leaders nor their followers were spared.

1541. The disbelievers would protest that what they did was actuated by good intentions and pure motives and that they worshipped their false gods only as an aid to concentration on Divine attributes. The verse gives the lie to this sense of injured innocence of disbelievers.

1542. The desires of the righteous will become identified with God's Will, so they will desire only those things which it will be the Will of God to give them.

1543. 'The coming of angels' signifies the destruction of individual disbelievers, and 'the coming of God or of His decree' signifies their national ruin.

1545. Realization of truth on the Day of Resurrection will be so complete that disbelievers will admit that they were foolish to deny Resurrection. Indeed, it would be a full and complete realization.

1546. The word kun (be) does not mean that God gives the command to something already existing. It merely gives expression to a wish, and means that when God so expresses a wish, it finds immediate objective fulfilment.

1547. The expression, fillāhi, may mean: (a) For the sake of Allāh; (b) for the sake of God's religion, i.e. for the sake of free and unfettered exercise of religion; (c) "in Allah" which signifies that they had become completely lost in Allāh.

47. Or that He will not seize them in their going to and fro[1548] so that they shall not be able to frustrate His plans?

اَوْ يَاْخُذَهُمْ فِيْ تَقَلُّبِهِمْ فَمَا هُمْ بِمُعْجِزِيْنَ ﴿٤٧﴾

48. Or that He will not destroy them through a process of gradual attrition?[1549] Your Lord is indeed Compassionate, Merciful.

اَوْ يَاْخُذَهُمْ عَلٰى تَخَوُّفٍ ؕ فَاِنَّ رَبَّكُمْ لَرَءُوْفٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ﴿٤٨﴾

49. Have they not observed, bowing in humility before Allāh, that the shadows of everything which Allāh has created shift from the right and from the left,[1550] and they are being humbled?

اَوَلَمْ يَرَوْا اِلٰى مَا خَلَقَ اللّٰهُ مِنْ شَيْءٍ يَّتَفَيَّؤُا ظِلٰلُهٗ عَنِ الْيَمِيْنِ وَالشَّمَآئِلِ سُجَّدًا لِّلّٰهِ وَهُمْ دٰخِرُوْنَ ﴿٤٩﴾

50. And [a]whatever is in the heavens and whatever creature is in the earth submits humbly to Allāh, and the angels too, and they are not proud.

وَلِلّٰهِ يَسْجُدُ مَا فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِي الْاَرْضِ مِنْ دَآبَّةٍ وَّالْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ وَهُمْ لَا يَسْتَكْبِرُوْنَ ﴿٥٠﴾

[a]13:16; 22:19.

1548. The frequent journeying of disbelievers and their free and unrestricted movements in the land should not lead believers to think that their might is invincible and that their glory will never depart. Soon these movements will result in the destruction of their political power.

1549. Takhawwuf meaning "to take little by little" (Lane), the verse signifies that the power of disbelievers will gradually decline, or that before their final overthrow they would be seized with a consuming fear of the growing power of Islām and its ultimate triumph.

1550. It is a natural phenomenon that the shadow of everything after reaching a certain stage becomes contracted, signifying that its power, influence and glory are about to depart and that it is about to be reduced to a mere shadow of its former self. Thus disbelievers are warned that Divine punishment will result in the complete obliteration of their shadows while the shadow of the Holy Prophet will continue to expand and lengthen, because things have long shadows when the sun is at their backs, and the sun of the grace of God is at the back of the Holy Prophet.

1551. A study of the working of the universe reveals a wonderful uniformity of the system running through it. If there had been more gods than one, this uniformity would have disappeared. Moreover, if there had been two gods, one would have to be subordinate to the other to carry out his orders. In that case the existence of one of the two would be superfluous. But if both of them had been of an equal status, then each of them would have his own separate sphere of influence and control. In such an event differences certainly would have arisen between them. But both these suppositions are absurd. Hence there must be One God, the Only Creator of the entire universe.

59. And [c]when to one of them is conveyed the tidings of the birth of a female, his face darkenss[1552A] with inward suppressed grief;

1552. The verse does not imply that the offence of disbelievers lies in attributing to God daughters and not sons though the Qur'ān has also strongly denounced the attribution of a son to God (19:91, 92). The verse only points to the folly of the disbelievers that they attribute daughters to God while they themselves feel humiliated at daughters being attributed to them.

1552A. Iswadda Wajhu-hū means, his face became black, i.e. his face became expressive of grief or overcast with gloom; he became grieved, sorrowful or confounded; he became disgraced (Lane).

1553. The reference is to the barbarous custom of burying alive of female children which was in vogue among certain Arab tribes. They had a very low conception of their womenfolk and accorded them an extremely degraded position in their society. The Qur'ān has strongly upheld the honour of women and has recognized all their legitimate rights, and in this respect it stands unique among all the Scriptures of the world.

1554. The reason why punishment is delayed is that if all sins had been at once punished by God, the world would have come to an end and all life on earth would have become extinct. Man would have perished as a result of his sins and there would have been left no purpose in the survival of beasts, animals and birds, etc. after his destruction. Being created for man's use and benefit they would have perished with him.

1555. 'Ibrah, meaning 'an indication or evidence whereby one passes from ignorance to knowledge' (Lane), alludes to some subtle process taking place inside the bellies of the animals. A study of the process of conversion of grass or leaves of trees which the animals eat into milk in the bellies of the animals leads to the conclusion that the natural propensities and inclinations of man cannot lead him to the right path unless they are controlled and regulated by some heavenly agency which is Divine revelation.

1555A. When things created by God remain in their natural and unadulterated form they constitute pure, wholesome and invigorating food. But when man interferes with their natural use he corrupts them. Similarly, as long as Divine Teaching remains intact, it is a source of great spiritual benefit, but when it is interfered with, it loses all its usefulness.

1556. Revelation here signifies the natural instincts with which God has endowed all creatures. The verse contains a beautiful hint that the entire universe depends for its smooth and successful working on revelation (or inspiration), whether manifest or hidden. In other words, all things and creatures serve the purpose of their existence only by working according to their natural instincts and inborn faculties and aptitudes. The bee has been selected as a prominent example, because its wonderful organization and work impress even a casual observer and are discernible even by the naked eye.

1557. The subject of the bee has been further elaborated in this verse. God inspires the bee to collect its food from different fruits and flowers and then by means of the mechanism provided in its body and by the methods revealed to it by God it converts the collected food into honey. Honey possesses different colours and flavours, but all its different varieties are highly useful for men. This suggests that revelation has continued to descend on Prophets at different times and that the teachings of one Prophet differed in some details from the teachings of others, nevertheless all were the means of moral and spiritual regeneration for the people for whom they were designed.

وَاللّٰهُ خَلَقَكُمْ ثُمَّ يَتَوَفّٰىكُمْ ۚ وَمِنْكُمْ

1558. In every age some individuals or nations, by their superior intellect and harder work, come to acquire ascendancy and control over other individuals or nations. This is neither unfair nor unjust so long as proper opportunities are not denied to the less fortunate peoples also to make proper use of their talents and intelligence to earn the good things of life. But the "haves" have always set their face against all attempts on the part of the "have-nots" to better their condition and to have a share in the power and privileges they enjoy. In order to save the world from the tyranny of those in possession of power and privileges and to open the doors of progress and advancement to real merit and talent and thereby to rehabilitate justice and equality among mankind, God raises Reformers. Their advent heralds a new era and the dispossessed and the "have-nots" have their rights restored to them. Briefly, but very beautifully, the verse has laid down the Islamic law with regard to private ownership. Whereas on the one hand Islām has recognized the right of private ownership by emphasizing the word "their" in the expression 'of their worldly gifts' it has, by using the words 'will restore,' also to those whom their right hands possess,[1559] so that they may be equal sharers in them. Knowing this, will they still deny the favour of Allāh?

وَاللّٰهُ جَعَلَ لَكُمْ مِّنْ اَنْفُسِكُمْ اَزْوَاجًا وَّجَعَلَ لَكُمْ مِّنْ اَزْوَاجِكُمْ بَنِيْنَ وَحَفَدَةً وَّرَزَقَكُمْ مِّنَ الطَّيِّبٰتِ ؕ اَفَبِالْبَاطِلِ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ وَبِنِعْمَتِ اللّٰهِ هُمْ يَكْفُرُوْنَ ﴿۷۳﴾

73. And [a]Allāh has made for you mates from among yourselves, and has made for you, from your mates, sons and grandsons, and has provided you with good things. [b]Will they then believe in that which perishes and deny the favour of Allāh?[1560]

وَيَعْبُدُوْنَ مِنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ مَا لَا يَمْلِكُ لَهُمْ رِزْقًا مِّنَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ شَيْـًٔا وَّلَا يَسْتَطِيْعُوْنَ ﴿۷۴﴾

74. And [c]they worship beside Allāh such as have no power to bestow on them any gift from the heavens or the earth, nor can they ever have such power.

فَلَا تَضْرِبُوْا لِلّٰهِ الْاَمْثَالَ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ يَعْلَمُ وَاَنْتُمْ لَا تَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿۷۵﴾ laid down the principle of the collective ownership of all things by all human beings as such, because only that thing is "restored" to another person which belongs to him. In fact, the Qur'ān has accepted the principle of dual ownership of everything—the right to possess a property to be recognized in the person who earns it by the sweat of his brow and the right in that property of all human beings as human beings. Islām, in reality, neither believes in the right of unrestricted private ownership nor in complete and unreserved possession of wealth and the means of its production by the State. It adopts the middle course.

[a]4:2; 7:190; 30:22; 39:7. [b]29:68. [c]10:19; 22:72; 29:18.

1559. The expression clearly includes all persons under one's control such as private servants, subordinates, labourers, ryots etc.

1560. The verse refers to the instinct of private possession as an argument in support of the Unity of God.

1561. It is highly presumptuous on the part of man to devise a law regarding God while he is quite ignorant of His great and unlimited powers.

77. And Allāh sets forth another parable of two men—one of them is dumb, having no power over anything, and he is a burden on his master; withersoever he sends him, he brings no good. Can he be equal to him who enjoins justice and who is on the straight path?[1564]

1562. The disbelievers are like a person who has lost all freedom of will and action and is the slave of his own low desires and fancies.

1563. The implied reference may be to the Holy Prophet—God's servant par excellence. (1) He served mankind secretly (by praying for them at night) and openly (by tangible acts of service). (2) He served mankind at all hours of the day and night.

1564. This and the preceding verse refer to two different classes of disbelievers. The preceding verse refers to those disbelievers, who are slaves to superstitious beliefs and idolatrous practices and customs and, though possessing some means and the ability to do some useful work, are prevented from doing it because they are deprived of freedom of action. And the present verse refers to such disbelievers as are not only slaves to superstitious practices but are also totally lacking in the means and the ability to do any real good work.

1565. "The unseen," i.e. the eventual defeat and discomfiture of disbelief and the victory of Islām.

1566. The faculties of hearing, seeing and understanding have been mentioned in the order in which they help man to acquire knowledge. First of all a newborn child makes use of the power of hearing. The faculty of seeing develops later and that of understanding is the last to mature.

1567. The verse only contains a reference to the punishment which was soon to overtake the disbelievers of Mecca. The keeping back of the birds signifies the withholding of the punishment that was in store for them. Arabic poetry abounds in verses where birds are spoken of as following in the rear of a victorious army to feed on the dead bodies of the enemy killed and left on the field of battle. And the hovering of birds, according to Arabic idiom, is symbolic of the defeat and destruction of a people (see 67:20). The present verse declares that God has withheld Muslims from waging war against disbelievers. But once they were given permission to fight the disbelievers will be defeated and destroyed and their dead bodies will be eaten by the birds which they see flying in the sky.

1570. The verse contains three commandments and three prohibitions which briefly deal with all the various stages of the moral and spiritual development of man and with both its positive and negative sides. It enjoins justice, the doing of good to others and kindness as between kindred; and forbids indecency, manifest evil and transgression. Justice implies that a person should treat others as he is treated by them. He should return to others the good or evil to the extent or measure to which he receives it from them. Higher than 'Adl (justice) is the stage of Iḥsān (goodness) when man should do good to others regardless of what sort of treatment he receives from them, or even if he is maltreated by them. His conduct should not be actuated by considerations of reciprocity. At the last and highest stage of moral development, viz. Ītā'i Dhil-Qurbā (giving like kindred), a believer is expected to do good to others not in return for any good received from them, nor with the idea of doing more good than the good received, but to do good prompted by a natural impulse, as good is done to very near blood relations. His condition at this stage resembles that of a mother whose love for her children springs from natural impulse. After a believer has attained this stage his moral development becomes complete. These three stages of morals constitute the positive side of man's moral development. Its negative side is portrayed in the three words, viz. Faḥshā' (indecency), Munkar (manifest evil) and Baghy (transgression). Faḥshā' signifies vice of which the knowledge is confined to the doer and Munkar signifies those evils which other men also see and condemn, though they may not suffer any loss or infringement of their own rights by them. Baghy, however, comprehends all those vices and evils which not only are seen, felt and denounced by other people but which do them positive harm also. These three simple words cover all conceivable vices.

1571. Obligations which the believers owe to God are covered by the words "covenant of Allāh" and the duties they owe to their fellowmen are implied in the words, "the oaths."

1572. This and the preceding verse lay the greatest stress on the inviolability of oaths which should be observed at all costs.

1573. The Arabic expression is capable of three interpretations:

(1) Because one people (non-Muslims) are stronger and wealthier than the other people (Muslims), i.e. Muslims should not put other stronger people out of their guard by concluding with them a peace treaty, thus biding their time till a favourable opportunity arises and they are strong enough to dishonour it.

(2) For fear lest one people (non-Muslims) should become stronger and wealthier than the other people (Muslims).

(3) So that one people (Muslims) should become stronger than the other people (non-Muslims), i.e. Muslims should not make a treaty with non-Muslims with this object in view that by taking advantage of it they should add to their own strength and break it when they find themselves stronger than non-Muslims.

وَلَوْ شَآءَ اللّٰهُ لَجَعَلَكُمْ اُمَّةً وَّاحِدَةً وَّلٰكِنْ يُّضِلُّ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ وَيَهْدِىْ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ ؕ وَلَتُسْـَٔلُنَّ عَمَّا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ﴿٩٤﴾

94. And [a]if Allāh had enforced His Will, He would surely have made you all one people; but He lets go astray him who wishes it, and guides him who wishes it, and you shall surely be questioned concerning that which you have been doing.

وَلَا تَتَّخِذُوْٓا اَيْمَانَكُمْ دَخَلًاۢ بَيْنَكُمْ فَتَزِلَّ قَدَمٌۢ بَعْدَ ثُبُوْتِهَا وَتَذُوْقُوا السُّوْٓءَ بِمَا صَدَدْتُّمْ عَنْ سَبِيْلِ اللّٰهِ ۚ وَلَكُمْ عَذَابٌ عَظِيْمٌ ﴿٩٥﴾

95. And make not your oaths a means of deceit between you; or your foot will slip after it has been firmly established[1574] and you will taste evil because by acting thus you turned people away from the path of Allāh, and you will have a severe punishment.

وَلَا تَشْتَرُوْا بِعَهْدِ اللّٰهِ ثَمَنًا قَلِيْلًا ؕ اِنَّمَا عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ هُوَ خَيْرٌ لَّكُمْ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ تَعْلَمُوْنَ ﴿٩٦﴾

97. That which you have shall pass away, but that which is with Allāh is lasting. [c]And We will certainly give those, who are steadfast, their reward according to the best of their works.

[a]5:49; 11:119. [b]3:78. [c]11:12; 39:11.

1574. Such conduct will weaken your power.

1576. The verse recognizes the equality of the rights of men and women and promises both equal share in Divine favours.

1577. The meaning is: "When We avert or delay punishment on account of a change for the better on the part of those who are threatened with it." There is no reference here to the abrogation of any of the verses of the Qur'ān. There is no verse in the Qur'ān which clashes with any other verse of the Book and which may therefore have to be regarded as abrogated. All parts of the Qur'ān support and corroborate one another. There is nothing in the context either to suggest any reference to the idea of abrogation.

قُلْ نَزَّلَهٗ رُوْحُ الْقُدُسِ مِنْ رَّبِّكَ بِالْحَقِّ لِيُثَبِّتَ الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَهُدًى وَّبُشْرٰى لِلْمُسْلِمِيْنَ ﴿۱۰۳﴾

104. And indeed We know that they say that it is only a man who teaches[1578] him. But

[a]2:98; 26:194. [b]12:112.

1578. Names of different persons have been mentioned in the traditions who, according to the allegations of the disbelievers, helped the Holy Prophet in composing the Qur'ān—Jabr, a Christian slave, 'Aish or Ya'īsh, a servant of Al-Ḥuwaiṭib Ibn-e-'Abdul-'Uzzā and Abū Fuqaih who was known as Yasār and 'Adas or 'Addās, a slave of Aus bin Rabī' (Ma'ānī & Fatḥ). The names of 'Ammār, Ṣuhaib, Salmān, 'Abdullāh bin Salām and of Sergius, a Nestorian monk, have also been mentioned in this connection. In fact, the Qur'ān here makes reference to two objections of disbelievers, one relating to certain slave converts from whom the Holy Prophet is alleged to have received help in composing the Qur'ān which is mentioned in 25:5-7, and the other relating to what he heard of the Gospels from a certain Christian slave convert to Islām, and which was incorporated in the Qur'ān to which this verse refers. Now with regard to the second objection, did the slave in question read the Arabic version of the Gospels or their Greek or Hebrew version? If he read the Arabic version then it will have to be proved that the New Testament had been translated into Arabic in the Holy Prophet's time and the translation was so common that even slaves read it while working at their shops. But up to the time of the Holy Prophet, translations of the Gospels had not been made in any language. The Jewish tribes of Medina had not even translated the Torah into Arabic by that time, and whenever he needed a reference to this Book, he consulted 'Abdullāh bin Salām a great Hebrew scholar. Dr. Alexander Souter, M.A., LL.D., writes in his book, "The Test and Canon of the New Testament" (Second Edition, 1925, p. 74), under the caption, "Arabic Versions"… 'The oldest manuscript goes no further back than the 8th century. Two versions of the Arabic are reported to have taken place at Alexandria in the 13th century.' And if the Christian slave-convert read to the Holy Prophet Hebrew or Greek Gospels, how could he benefit by listening to a Book which he could not understand and how could the man from whom he was alleged to have received help for composing the Qur'ān being 'Ajamī (foreign and defective in speech) explain to him in his defective Arabic those great eternal truths

اَعۡجَمِیٌّ وَّ هٰذَا لِسَانٌ عَرَبِیٌّ مُّبِیۡنٌ ﴿۱۰۴﴾

the tongue of him towards whom their minds incline in making this insinuation is foreign while this is Arabic tongue plain and clear.

اِنَّ الَّذِیۡنَ لَا یُؤۡمِنُوۡنَ بِاٰیٰتِ اللّٰہِ ۙ لَا یَہۡدِیۡہِمُ اللّٰہُ وَ لَہُمۡ عَذَابٌ اَلِیۡمٌ ﴿۱۰۵﴾

105. As for those who do not believe in the Signs of Allāh, surely, Allāh will not guide them, and they shall have a grievous punishment.

اِنَّمَا یَفۡتَرِی الۡکَذِبَ الَّذِیۡنَ لَا یُؤۡمِنُوۡنَ بِاٰیٰتِ اللّٰہِ ۚ وَ اُولٰٓئِکَ ہُمُ الۡکٰذِبُوۡنَ ﴿۱۰۶﴾

106. It is only those who believe not in the Signs of Allāh, who forge falsehood, and they it is who are the liars.

مَنۡ کَفَرَ بِاللّٰہِ مِنۡۢ بَعۡدِ اِیۡمَانِہٖۤ اِلَّا مَنۡ اُکۡرِہَ وَ قَلۡبُہٗ مُطۡمَئِنٌّۢ بِالۡاِیۡمَانِ وَ لٰکِنۡ مَّنۡ شَرَحَ بِالۡکُفۡرِ صَدۡرًا فَعَلَیۡہِمۡ غَضَبٌ مِّنَ اللّٰہِ ۚ وَ لَہُمۡ عَذَابٌ عَظِیۡمٌ ﴿۱۰۷﴾

107. [a]Whoso disbelieves in Allāh after he has believed—save him who is forced to make a declaration of disbelief while his heart finds peace in faith[1579]—but such as open their breasts to disbelief, on them is Allāh's wrath; and for them is decreed a severe punishment.

which the Qur'ān comprises and for explaining which a sound and deep knowledge of Arabic was essential? See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary" under this verse.

1579. The verse is silent about the treatment which a person who, under the severest trial, utters words that may appear to express disbelief though inwardly he may be satisfied with Islām, will receive from God. It implies that final judgment in the case of such persons has been reserved and that their future behaviour will determine the nature of the treatment they will receive from God.

1580. Whereas vv. 109, 110 referred to those persons who revert to disbelief and open up their hearts to it and join the ranks of the enemies of Islām, the verse under comment deals with such persons regarding whom judgment had been reserved (verse 107). The judgment given in their case is that if they migrate from their homes and strive in the cause of God and endure with patience all the hardships that may befall them in the way of Islām, then, and not till then, will God pardon their previous sins, for only then will it become established that they have made full amends for their past lapse. The Sūrah being of Meccan origin, Jihād mentioned in the verse is not fighting with the sword but is only "striving" to promote the cause of Islām.

1582. The dreadful famine which held Mecca in its grip for seven long years. See 2694.

1583. Fear of war in which the Meccans were involved with Muslims and were defeated. They lived in a state of extreme fear as if fear of war had quite covered them. In Arabic idiom the word Dhāqa (tasting) sometimes is used for Libās (dress). There is a well-known Arabic verse:—Qālū Iqtariḥ Shai'an Najid Laka Ṭabkha-hū. Qulto Itbakhū Lī Jubbatan wa Qamīṣā, i.e. they said what would you desire us to cook for you. I said, 'Cook for me a long coat and a shirt.'

1585. Jahālah means, both lack of knowledge and lack of spiritual realization. Here it is used in the second sense because there is no justification for punishing a person who does not possess knowledge of a commandment for the non-observance of which he is being punished.

1586. Ummah among other things means a nation; a race; a righteous man who is an object of imitation; a man possessing all good qualities, a paragon of virtue (Lane).

1587. The Jews believed that their national degradation and misery were due to their profaning the Sabbath. They are told that now they could retrieve their departed glory by accepting Islām and not by observing the Sabbath.

1589. A Muttaqī is one who establishes such a strong connection with God that God Himself becomes his Protector and shields him from every evil. A Muḥsin is he who, after he himself has come under the protection of God, tries to bring others also under His protection. Thus a Muḥsin possesses a higher spiritual stature than a Muttaqī.

CHAPTER 17
BANĪ-ISRĀ'ĪL
(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

This Chapter is known as Banī Isrā'īl because it deals with some important incidents in the history of the Israelites and with the experiences through which they had to pass. It also bears the title of Isrā' because it opens with the Holy Prophet's great Vision about his spiritual Night Journey to Jerusalem which forms one of the most outstanding topics of this Chapter. According to Ibn-e-Mas'ūd, one of the earliest Companions of the Holy Prophet, the revelation of this Sūrah was completed between the 4th and 11th year of the Call. Christian writers assign this period between the 6th and the 12th year. Towards the end of the previous Sūrah Muslims were warned that very soon they would meet with opposition from 'the People of the Book' as severe as they had already experienced at the hands of Meccan idolaters, but that they should bear it with patience and fortitude till God should give them victory over their opponents. In the present Sūrah their attention is drawn to the fact that this opposition will start at Medina and will end in the total defeat and discomfiture of 'the People of the Book;' their sacred places falling into the hands of Muslims.

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah, as its title shows, deals with the history of the Jewish people, with a pointed reference to two outstanding occasions when they openly disobeyed and defied the two great Prophets of God—David and Jesus. As a result of this defiance they suffered the destruction of their national life, first at the hands of the Babylonian Nebuchadnezzar and then at those of the Roman Emperor Titus. This special reference to the twofold destruction of Jews implied a warning to Muslims that their wrongdoings and transgressions would also result in the double eclipse of their national life. The warning, however, was also accompanied with a word of hope and good cheer for them. It was to this effect that since the Holy Prophet was the last Law-giving Prophet, his Dispensation would not, like the Jewish Dispensation, suffer total extinction but after initial reverses would emerge triumphant with increased lustre and effulgence. Besides, some other subjects to which only an implied reference was made in the preceding Sūrah have also been dealt with at some length. The Sūrah opens with the subject of Isrā' (Spiritual Night Journey of the Holy Prophet) in order to show that as the successor and counterpart of Moses, his followers will conquer the lands which were promised to Moses, and that like Moses he will have to leave his native place. But his Emigration will lead to very rapid progress and advancement of his noble cause. Then it is briefly stated that the people of Moses acquired great power and prestige through their Prophet, though subsequently they came to grief by defying and ignoring Divine warning. But the Qur'ān, being a much more complete code of Laws, is capable of bringing about a greater and a completer change in the lives of its followers than was the Book of Moses. This brief reference to the rise and decline of Jews is attended with a warning to Muslims that God would bestow upon them His favours and like the Jews they would also rise to great heights of material greatness and glory, but that after they had acquired wealth, power and influence, they should not forget God. Then some rules of conduct are mentioned by acting upon which a people could rise to a very high spiritual stature. But, instead of benefiting by these rules, disbelievers arrogantly turn away from them and give no thought to the dreadful end to which their conceit and pride are likely to lead them. They are warned that rejection of truth never produces wholesome results and that they will be visited with severe Divine punishment, particularly in the Latter Days, when the world will witness a fight to the finish between the forces of Light and Darkness and finally the forces of Satan shall be completely routed. The Sūrah then administers a severe rebuke to disbelievers that they seek to annihilate the Holy Prophet, but God has decreed a great and noble purpose for him and a mighty destiny awaits him. His name shall be known unto the remotest corners of the earth and shall be honoured to the end of time. The world shall recognize him as humanity's greatest Guide and Leader and the Qur'ān as a storehouse of limitless spiritual knowledge. The Sūrah closes with a brief description of the signs of the Latter Days and of the evils which will then prevail in the world and declares that it is prayer and true connection with God that can save man from sin.

1590. The verse which seems to mention a vision of the Holy Prophet is supposed by most Commentators of the Qur'ān to refer to his Mi'rāj (Spiritual Ascension). Contrary to popular opinion we are inclined to the view that the verse deals with the Isrā' (Spiritual Night Journey) of the Holy Prophet in a vision from Mecca to Jerusalem, while his Mi'rāj (Spiritual Ascension) has been dealt with at some length in Sūrah An-Najm. All the facts, mentioned in Sūrah An-Najm (vv. 8-18) which was revealed immediately after the Emigration to Abyssinia which took place in the month of Rajab in the 5th year of the Call, are to be found narrated in detail in the traditions which deal with the Mi'rāj of the Holy Prophet. The Isrā' or the Spiritual Night Journey of the Holy Prophet from Mecca to Jerusalem, with which the present verse deals, took place in the eleventh year of the Call, according to Zurqānī, and in the 12th year according to Muir and some other Christian writers. According to Merdawaih and Ibn-e-Sa'd, however, the Isrā' took place on the 17th of Rabī'ul-Awwal, a year before Hijrah (Al-Khaṣā'iṣul-Kubrā). Baihaqī also relates that the Isrā' took place a year or six months before the Hijrah. Thus all relevant traditions go to show that the Isrā' took place a year or six months prior to Hijrah about the 12th year of the Call when after the death of Khadījah which took place in the 10th year, the Holy Prophet was living with Umm-e-Hānī', his cousin. But the Mi'rāj, according to overwhelming scholarly opinion, took place about the 5th year. Thus the two incidents are separated from each other by an interval of six or seven years and, therefore, cannot be identical; the one must be regarded as quite distinct and separate from the other. Moreover, the incidents which are mentioned in the Traditions to have taken place in the Prophet's Mi'rāj, are of quite a distinct nature from those which took place in his Isrā'. It may also be stated in passing that the two incidents were only spiritual phenomena and that the Holy Prophet did not physically go up to heaven or travelled to Jerusalem.

In addition to this strong historical evidence, other relevant circumstances lend support to the view that the two incidents were quite distinct and separate from each other: (a) The Qur'ān gives an account of the Holy Prophet's Mi'rāj (Spiritual Ascension) in Chapter 53, but makes no reference to his Isrā'

(Night Journey to Jerusalem), while in the present Sūrah it speaks of his Isrā' but omits all allusion to his Mi'rāj (b) Umm-e-Hānī' the Holy Prophet's cousin with whom he was staying on the night when the Isrā' (Spiritual Night Journey to Jerusalem) took place speaks only of his visit to Jerusalem and makes no mention of his journey to the heavens. She was the first person whom the Holy Prophet informed of his Night Journey to Jerusalem and at least seven collectors of Traditions have given her account of the incident on the authority of four different reporters who have reported the incident from her. All these four reporters concur in saying that the Holy Prophet went to Jerusalem and returned to Mecca the same night. If the Holy Prophet had spoken of his Ascension to the heavens also, Umm-e-Hānī' could not have failed to refer to it in one or other of her reports. But she does not do so in any of her reports, which conclusively shows that during the night in question the Holy Prophet made the Isrā' or the Spiritual Night Journey to Jerusalem only and that the Mi'rāj did not take place on that occasion. It seems that some reporters of Traditions mixed up the two accounts of the Isrā' and the Mi'rāj. The confusion appears to have arisen from the word Isrā' (Night Journey) having been used both for the Isrā' and the Mi'rāj; and the resemblance that existed in some of the details in the descriptions of the Isrā' and the Mi'rāj heightened and confirmed it. (c) The Traditions which first give an account of the Holy Prophet's visit to Jerusalem and then of his transportation from Jerusalem to heaven also state that at Jerusalem he met the former Prophets, including Adam, Abraham, Moses and Jesus, and that in the heavens he met the same Prophets again but did not recognize them. How did these Prophets whom he had met at Jerusalem reach the heavens before him and why could he not recognize them while he had seen them only a short while ago in the course of the same journey. It is inconceivable that he should have failed to recognize them when he had met them only a short while ago in the course of the same journey. For a detailed discussion of this important subject see "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1404-1409.

1591. "The Distant Mosque" refers to Prophet Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem.

1591A. The Vision of the Prophet referred to in the present verse implied a great prophecy. His journey to "The Distant Mosque" meant his Emigration to

وَاٰتَيْنَا مُوْسَى الْكِتٰبَ وَجَعَلْنٰهُ هُدًى لِّبَنِيْٓ اِسْرَآءِيْلَ اَلَّا تَتَّخِذُوْا مِنْ دُوْنِيْ وَكِيْلًا ۝٣

6. So when the time for the fulfilment of the first[1593] of Medina where he was to build a Mosque which was destined to become later on the Central Mosque of Islām, and his seeing himself in the Vision that he was leading other Prophets of God in Prayers signified that the New Faith—Islām—was not to remain confined to the place of its birth but was to spread all over the world and the followers of all religions were to join its fold. His going to Jerusalem in the Vision may also be understood to mean that he was to be given dominion over the territory in which Jerusalem was situated. This prophecy was fulfilled during the Caliphate of 'Umar. The Vision may also be taken as referring to a spiritual journey of the Holy Prophet to a distant land in some future time. It meant that when spiritual darkness would envelop the entire world, the Holy Prophet would appear in a spiritual sense a second time in the person of one of his followers, in a land far away from the scene of his First Advent. A pointed reference to this Second Advent of the Holy Prophet is to be found in 62:3, 4.

1592. The two transgressions of the Israelites mentioned in the Book of Moses (Deut. 28:15. 49-53, 63, 64 & 30:15) are referred to in this verse. Those amongst the Children of Israel who disbelieved were cursed twice by David and Jesus, son of Mary (5:79) and consequently were punished twice.

1593. The first Divine punishment overtook the Israelites after David, and the second after Jesus. It appears from the Bible that the Jews had become a the two warnings came, We sent against you some servants of Ours, possessed of great might in war, and they penetrated into your houses and it was a warning that was bound to be fulfilled.

very powerful nation after Moses, and in the time of David they laid the foundations of a mighty kingdom which continued to flourish for sometime after his death in its old might and glory. Then it fell a prey to gradual decay and in about 733 B.C. Samaria was conquered by the Assyrians, who annexed the whole of Israel north of Jezreel. In 608 B.C. Palestine was ravaged by an Egyptian force under Pharaoh Necho and the Israelites came under Egyptian sway (Jew. Enc., vol. 6, p. 665). The loss of their temporal power and their destruction and desolation, however, did not induce them to mend their ways. They persisted in their old wicked practices. The Prophet Jeremiah warned them to give up their evil ways as the wrath of God was about to overtake them, but they paid no heed to Jeremiah's warnings. In the reign of Jehoiakim, Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon made his first invasion of Palestine and carried off some of the Temple vessels, but the city was spared the rigours of a siege. In 597 B.C. also the city was invested and fell victim to a severe famine. The rebellion of Zedekiah, however, caused a second invasion by Nebuchadnezzar in 587 B.C., and after a siege of a year and a half, the city was taken by storm. King Zedekiah fled from the city but was taken prisoner. His sons were slain and his eyes were put out, and bound in fetters he was carried off to Babylon. The Temple, the King's palace and all the great buildings in the city were burnt down, the chief priests and other leaders were put to death and many people were carried off in captivity (Jew. Enc. vol. 6, p. 665 & vol. 7, p. 122 under "Jerusalem").

1594. The Jews fared well in exile. Most of them were employed on public works in central Babylonia and many among them eventually gained their freedom and rose to influential positions. Their faith and religious devotion were renewed; the literature of the Kingdom was studied, re-edited, and adapted to the needs of the reviving Community, and the hope of restoration

8. Now, [a]if you do good, you will do good for your own souls; and if you do evil, it will be to your own loss. So when the time for the fulfilment of the latter warning came, We raised a people against you that they might cover your faces with grief,[1594A] and that they enter the Mosque, as they entered it the first time, and that they might destroy utterly all that they conquered.[1595] to Palestine was preached and cherished. About 545 B.C., this aspiration took a more definite form. The Jews made a secret agreement with Cyrus, King of Media and Persia and helped him to conquer Babylon. The city surrendered to his army without resistance in July, 539 B.C. As a reward for their services Cyrus permitted the Jews to return to Jerusalem and also helped them to rebuild the Temple (Historians' History of the World, vol. II, p. 126; Jew. Enc., vol. 7, under "Jerusalem;" Enc. Bib., under "Cyrus" and 2 Chronicles 36:22, 23). The Judean, Sheshbazzar (a governor under Cyrus) brought back to the Temple vessels which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away and prepared to undertake the work at the expense of the royal purse. A large body of exiles returned to Jerusalem (Ezra 1:3-5). The work of rebuilding the Temple steadily progressed and was completed in 516 B.C. It is to these events and the subsequent prosperity of the Jews that the verse under comment refers. All this, however, was foretold by Moses long before it came to pass (Deut. 30:1-5).

1594A. The words also mean: 'They might humiliate your leaders,' wujūh meaning leaders (Lane).

1595. This verse speaks of the second relapse into iniquitous ways of the Jews and of the punishment which befell them in consequence. They persecuted Jesus and sought to kill him on the Cross and stamp out his Movement. So God afflicted them with a terrible punishment when in 70 A.D. the Roman forces under Titus swept the country and amid circumstances of unparalleled horror Jerusalem was destroyed and the Temple of Solomon was burnt down (Enc. Bib., under "Jerusalem"). This disaster took place when Jesus was yet living in Kashmir. This was also foretold by Moses (Deut. 32:18-26). It may be noted here that this prophecy about the second

11. And warns that for [b]those who do not believe in the Hereafter We have prepared a grievous punishment.

punishment is mentioned in the Bible after the prophecy which speaks of the first punishment (Deut. chap. 28). More than that, it is mentioned even after the prophecy which speaks of the return of the Jews to Jerusalem (Deut. 30:1-5). This shows that this prophecy (Deut. 32:18-26) refers to the second punishment, to which reference has been made in the Qur'ān, viz. You will surely do great mischief in the land twice (17:5). The verse implied a warning for Muslims that, like the Jews, they too will be punished twice if they did not give up their evil ways. But they did not profit by the timely warning and did not give up their evil ways and were punished twice. The first punishment overtook them when Baghdad fell in 1258 A.D. The barbarous hordes of Halaku completely destroyed that great seat of learning and power and 1,800,000 Muslims are said to have been put to the sword. Islam, however, emerged triumphant from that dreadful catastrophe. The victors became the vanquished. The grandson of Halaku along with a large number of Mongols and the Tartars accepted Islām. The second punishment was decreed to overtake them in the Latter Days.

1596. The goal which the Qur'ān sets before its followers is nobler and more sublime than that of the former peoples, and promises its true followers both spiritual and temporal blessings. They should, therefore, make great efforts to attain them and be on their guard against a lax and undisciplined life and in every way prove themselves deserving of the promised Divine boons.

1597. The Arabic expression means that such is the condition of man that while by words of his mouth he prays to God to grant him good, by his actual evil deeds he invites the displeasure and punishment of God. Thus his actions belie his words. The expression may also be taken to mean that 'man calls for evil as he should have called for good.' According to both the renderings the verse signifies that when nations or individuals attain material wealth and rise to power and influence, they tend to neglect their duties and responsibilities and thus in the very hour of their power and glory they lay the foundations of their later decay and death. The verse may also mean that man invites evil to himself with the same zeal and vehemence as God invites him to good. In this case the act of inviting to good will be taken as referring to God.

1598. Both night and day have their benefits for man; but whereas the benefits of the night are subtle and hidden, those of the day are clear and manifest. The verse may also signify that the natural phenomenon of the alternation of night and day helps man to determine dates of the year and to prepare calendars. This phenomenon has also led to the development and progress of the science of mathematics.

1599. The fastening of the works to the neck of a man denotes that his actions and their effects stick to him permanently as long as he lives, Ṭā'ir

(bird) signifying an habitual act (Aqrab). He is reminded that a deed once done cannot be undone and has far-reaching effects and, even if hidden from the human eye, it remains attached to the doer's neck, and it is impossible to obliterate it. The verse may also mean that man augurs good or evil from outside things while his good or bad augury is inseparably linked to his own neck.

1600. Punishment is not something that comes from outside but it takes its birth within man himself. In fact, the punishments and rewards of Heaven and Hell will only be so many embodiments and representations of the deeds, good or bad, of man done by him in this life. Thus in this life man is the architect of his own destiny and in the next he will be, so to say, his own rewarder or punisher.

1601. Everyone has to bear his own cross. Nobody's vicarious sacrifice can do him any good. The verse strikes at the root of the doctrine of atonement.

1602. The world has, in our own generation, seen pestilences, famines, wars, earthquakes and other calamities of unprecedented severity and unparalleled magnitude in such rapid succession as to embitter human life. Before these calamities and catastrophes visited the earth, God must have raised a Warner.

1605. Divine aid is of two kinds: (1) general aid, as a result of which good works and efforts of all sorts of peoples—Muslims, Christians, Jews, Hindus, etc. bear fruit according to their scope and magnitude; and (2) special grace and succour of God which is confined to spiritual matters and which is given to His true servants only and is denied to disbelievers.

1606. Shirk (associating false gods with Allāh) causes man to sink morally and spiritually. Never has a people, steeped in Shirk, been known to have made any real moral or material progress. In fact all evils spring from Shirk.

1607. With this verse begin those principles and rules of conduct by observing which a people can preserve the integrity of their organization and render it safe against disintegration and decline. Pride of place is given to belief in the Oneness of God and condemnation of Shirk (setting up equals with Allāh), because belief in Divine Unity is a seed out of which grow all virtues, and lack of which lies at the root of all sins. It constitutes the basis and the foundation for both the law of nature and the law of the Sharī'ah. That the whole law of the Sharī'ah is based on belief in the Unity of God is too patent a reality to need any explanation; but even the law of nature and all scientific progress are also based on it. For, if it be supposed that there are more gods than one, it necessarily follows that there are more than one law of nature. But in the absence of one fixed and uniform natural law all progress of science will come to an end, because all the discoveries and inventions made by science are due to the belief that an ordered, fixed and unchangeable system pervades the whole universe. The second important commandment laid down in the verse concerns man's moral conduct. His obligations towards his parents form the most important part of it, because it is his parents who first of all direct a man's attention to God and it is in the parental mirror that Divine attributes are reflected and on a minor human scale are given practical expression. But whereas the commandment in relation to God is negative, in the case of parents it is positive. Man is told that since it is not possible for him to make a return of God's favours, he should at least refrain from Shirk, but as in the case of parents he is in a position to return their love and kindness, though only very inadequately, he is given a positive commandment to be kind and generous to them.

1608. In Arabic the word Uff is used to express one's disgust by words of mouth and Nahr is used to express it by actual deed. By combining these two words the verse means that one should never speak harshly to one's parents, much less act unkindly towards them.

1609. By a beautiful simile the verse inculcates kindness to parents. As parental love is incapable of being adequately repaid, the deficiency in this respect is enjoined to be made up by prayer for them. The prayer shows that in old age parents need to be tended as carefully and affectionately as little children are looked after in their childhood by their parents.

1610. He who does not make right use of God-given gifts is guilty of ingratitude to Him, and he who, squanders away his wealth, in fact, seeks to shirk the responsibilities which lie upon him for its proper use.

1611. Help may sometimes be denied to a seemingly needy person when it is feared that the giving of it would have an adverse effect upon him; for instance, he may be a professional beggar or may be addicted to some bad habit. In such a case a word of good cheer may be used to give comfort to the beggar.

1612. A believer should not be so miserly as not to spend his money even when there is a real and genuine need for it, nor should he squander away his money thoughtlessly and without purpose so that when money is required for a real national need he should find to his regret that he could not contribute to it.

1613. Those miserly parents who do not give proper education to, or provide proper food and clothing for, their children, in fact, contribute both to their physical and moral death. The verse strongly condemns such "slaying" of innocent children who, if given right kind of education and afforded proper opportunities to rise to their full stature, are likely to become very useful members of the society. The "slaying of children" may also signify the questionable practice of unnecessary birth control which is encouraged in modern society.

1614. The words khiṭ' and khaṭa' differ in their significance. Whereas the former is intentional, the latter may both be intentional and unintentional (Aqrab). The Qur'ān has used the former word to establish the fact that the slaying of children is a crime at which human nature revolts and recoils and only a person devoid of all human feelings is capable of doing it.

1615. The commandment forbidding 'the slaying of children' is followed by another equally weighty injunction about adultery because adultery also causes the death of innumerable children in different forms. Unlike the biblical commandment, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery,' the Qur'ān says, 'Go not nigh unto adultery,' which is clearly a more comprehensive and more effective and sensible commandment. The Qur'ān not only prohibits and condemns the actual act of adultery but seeks to close and shut all those avenues that lead to it.

1616. In the preceding two verses reference was made to the two indirect ways of slaying. The verse under comment speaks of direct murder. After the murderer is convicted by a properly constituted court, the heirs of the murdered person have the right either to have the murderer legally executed or accept blood money in lieu of the death of the murdered person. If, however, it is against the interests of public peace or morality to allow blood money to the heirs or if the demand of the heirs be found to be not bona-fide, the court may refuse to accept their option and order the murderer's execution. In fact, both the heirs and the State equally share the right to pardon or punish the guilty person. This right of the State in regard to the punishment of the guilty person covers all matters to which the injunction about retribution applies. Whereas in the earlier part of the verse the rights of the party offended against have been safeguarded, the words, let him not exceed the prescribed bounds in slaying, imply a recommendation in favour of the murderer. The words show that although 'life for life' is the general rule, the heirs of the murdered person should not always insist upon the literal execution of this commandment. The murderer is to suffer the extreme penalty of the law only when the dictates of equity, public peace and morality demand it. His life may be spared and blood money accepted if this act of grace is calculated to lead to his moral reformation.

1617. After having laid down the law about the punishment for murder which leaves behind orphans in two families—in the family of the murderer and in that of the murdered person—the Qur'ān proceeds to give directions about the rights of orphans. One of the most important of these is with regard to their property. The word "covenant" (meaning an obligation) has been used here to emphasize the fact that taking proper care of the property of the orphans constitutes no favour to them but is a responsibility and a duty to be discharged fully and honestly.

وَاَوْفُوا الْكَيْلَ اِذَا كِلْتُمْ وَزِنُوْا بِالْقِسْطَاسِ الْمُسْتَقِيْمِ ؕ ذٰلِكَ خَيْرٌ وَّاَحْسَنُ تَاْوِيْلًا ﴿۳۶﴾

38. [d]And walk not in the earth haughtily, for thou canst not thus rend the earth, nor canst thou reach the mountains in height.[1620]

كُلُّ ذٰلِكَ كَانَ سَيِّئُهٗ عِنْدَ رَبِّكَ مَكْرُوْهًا ﴿۳۹﴾

39. The evil of all these is hateful in the Sight of thy Lord.

1618. The secret of the commercial progress and prosperity of a people lies in honest and fair dealing in commercial transactions.

1619. The verse cuts at the root of all sources of suspicion which in natural order are "the ear," "the eye" and "the heart." "The ear" is the first avenue through which most suspicions enter one's mind. Most suspicions are caused by ill-founded reports which one hears about another person. Next source is that of sight. A person sees another doing a certain act and interprets it wrongly and is led to suspect the latter's motives and intentions. The last and most degraded kind of suspicion is that which a person entertains about another person not as the result of a bad report which he might have heard about him, nor in consequence of a bad act or deed which he might have seen him committing but which is purely the figment of his own diseased mind. Thus it is not only human life and property (to which a reference has already been made in the preceding verse) which are sacred and inviolable, but human honour also is sacrosanct and an attack upon it will also have to be accounted for.

1620. To be proud of and exult over one's achievements not only smacks of frivolity, but does moral injury to the proud person, for such an attitude makes

1621. For a revealed Book which has to deal with all matters of importance it is but natural and even necessary that it should revert, time and again, to the relevant points which bear on the main theme. When repetition is intended to throw light upon a matter from a new angle or to refute a new objection, no sane and intelligent person can take objection to it.

1622. Whereas the words, The seven heavens and the earth and those that are therein extol His glory, refer to the collective evidence that the whole universe bears to the Unity of God, the words, and there is not a thing but glorifies Him with His praise, refer to the evidence which all things bear to Oneness of the Divine Being individually and separately. The former means that the beautiful arrangement and order existing in the universe unmistakably show that its Creator is One, and the latter mean that everything in this universe, within its own limited sphere and in its own inimitable way, demonstrates God's various attributes.

1623. It is the covering of malice and envy, or that of a false sense of dignity and racial pride or of the fear of loss of social position and income, or the covering of a longstanding custom and belief fondly and firmly held that stands in the way of the acceptance of truth by disbelievers. It is a subtle covering which disbelievers themselves do not properly perceive.

1626. The reference is to the punishment which presages a universal calamity or series of calamities as foretold by God's Prophets and also in the Qur'ān.

1627. Or, the meaning may be: Could the fact that former people rejected the Prophets be the reason that further Signs should not be sent, i.e. it could not be the reason for the withholding of heavenly Signs.

1627A. The reference here is to the Vision mentioned in v. 2 of this Sūrah. In this Vision the Holy Prophet saw himself leading all other Prophets in Prayers in the Temple at Jerusalem which was the Qiblah of the Jews. The Vision implied that in some future time the followers of those Prophets would join the fold of Islām. This is what is meant by the words, thy Lord has decreed the ruin of this people. The general spread of Islām would follow in the wake of the worldwide disasters of which mention has been made in v. 59.

1628. 'The cursed tree' seems to be the Jewish people who have been repeatedly mentioned in the Qur'ān as having been cursed by God (5:14, 61, 65, 79). The curse of God has dogged the footsteps of these unfortunate people from the time of the Prophet David right down to our own time. This interpretation of the expression finds additional support from the fact that the present Sūrah particularly deals with the Israelites as its very name, Banī-Isrā'īl, suggests. The fact that the verse begins with a mention of the Vision in which the Holy Prophet saw himself leading the Israelite Prophets in Prayers in Jerusalem, the centre of the Jewish Faith, lends further support to the assumption that by 'cursed tree' is meant the Jewish people, the word Shajarah signifying a tribe. The verse speaks both of the Vision and the Jewish people (the accursed tree) to whom this Vision specially refers as 'a trial for men.' The Jews have, throughout the ages, proved to be a source of much misery and distress for mankind, particularly for Muslims.

1629. The particle lām among other things means, "with." The expression li Ādama may mean 'with Adam.'

1630. By "resurrection" is here meant the spiritual resurrection which is experienced by every believer when his faith becomes perfect and Satan ceases to exercise control over him.

1631. Whether or not Satan has succeeded in carrying out his threat in leading astray a vast majority of mankind is an important question which calls for an answer. A hurried and thoughtless glance over the state of good and evil in the world may lead one to the wrong conclusion that evil predominates over good in the world. But the truth is the other way about. If, for example, all the utterances of the greatest of liars were to be critically examined, the number of his truthful utterances will be found to be far exceeding his lies. Similarly, the number of the wicked people in the world is much smaller than that of the good and the virtuous people. The fact that wickedness attracts such wide notice in itself constitutes a proof of the fact that human nature is innately good and recoils at even a slight touch of evil. It is, therefore, wrong to suppose that Satan has succeeded in carrying his threat into actual fact.

1632. The verse describes the three devices that are adopted by the sons of darkness to entice men away from the right way: (1) They try to intimidate the poor and the weak by holding out threats of violence to them. (2) They use more drastic measures against those who are not frightened by verbal threats of violence by forming alliances against them and making a concerted attack upon them and persecuting and oppressing them in every way. (3) They seek to entice away the powerful and the more influential by offering to make them their leaders if only they cease to support the cause of truth.

1633. Man is amenable to the enticements of Satan so long as he is not "resurrected," i.e. so long as his faith does not attain its full stature.

1634. Such is the nature of man that when he is in distress he becomes humble and prays to God and promises and vows to lead a virtuous life. But once he is out of danger he is as arrogant and boastful as ever.

أَمْ أَمِنْتُمْ أَنْ يُعِيدَكُمْ فِيهِ تَارَةً أُخْرَىٰ فَيُرْسِلَ عَلَيْكُمْ قَاصِفًا مِنَ الرِّيحِ فَيُغْرِقَكُمْ بِمَا كَفَرْتُمْ ثُمَّ لَا تَجِدُوا لَكُمْ عَلَيْنَا بِهِ تَبِيعًا ﴿٧٠﴾

1635. God has equally honoured all the children of Adam and has not favoured any particular nation or tribe. The verse demolishes all foolish notions of superiority based on colour, creed, race or nationality. It further says that all avenues of progress and prosperity have been kept open equally for all men and these avenues lie as much in travel by land as by sea.

1635A. The laying of stress on travel by sea in the Qur'ān seems to be rather strange. The fact, that a Book revealed to an Arab, and of all Arabs the Holy Prophet, who throughout his life never experienced a sea-voyage, should have so much emphasized the importance of sea-voyaging, does indeed show that the Qur'ān could not have been his composition. He did not and could not know the great benefits of sea-voyaging.

1637. Those, who do not make proper use of their spiritual eyes in this world, would remain deprived of spiritual sight in the life to come. The Qur'ān speaks of those who do not ponder over the Signs of God and do not benefit by them as "blind." Such men will remain spiritually blind in the next life also.

1638. Disbelievers were determined to put the Holy Prophet to great hardship on account of the Teaching which had been revealed to him so that they might compel him to alter it and devise other than the one embodied in the Qur'ān. It is to these evil designs of disbelievers and their complete failure in getting them carried out that reference has been made in this verse.

1639. The Prophet's nature was so pure that even if the Qur'ān had not been revealed to him and he had no knowledge of God's great intentions about him, he would hardly have stooped to practise Shirk.

1640. The enemies of the Holy Prophet wanted to brand him with the stigma of legal banishment so that he might lose all dignity with his people, but God Himself commanded him to leave Mecca and thus saved him from this stigma which involved for him the loss of citizenship of that town.

1641. Dalakatish-Shamsu means, (1) the sun declined from the meridian; (2) it became yellow; (3) it set. Ghasaq means, the darkness of the night, or when redness in the horizon after sunset disappears (Lane). This verse seems to denote the hours of the five daily Prayers of Islām. The three meanings of Dulūk indicate the times of Afternoon Prayer, the Late Afternoon Prayer and the Sunset Prayer. The expression, Ghasaqil-Lail, includes the times of Sunset Prayer but particularly refers to the Night Prayer, and the words Qur'ānal-Fajr indicate the hour of the Morning Prayer.

1642. In addition to the meaning given in the text Nāfilah means a special favour, and signifies that Prayers are not a burden to weary the flesh but a privilege and a special favour from God.

1643. Perhaps no other person has been so much maligned and abused as the Holy Prophet of Islām and certainly no other person has been the recipient of so much Divine praise and the object of the invocation of so many Divine blessings and favours upon him as he. The Tahajjud Prayer is best suited for the believer's spiritual exaltation as in the stillness of the night, being all alone with his Creator, he enjoys special Divine communion.

1644. In acceptance of his prayers and supplications, the Holy Prophet in this verse has been vouchsafed the glad tidings that in fulfilment of the prophecy made in the words, Glory be to Him Who carried His servant by night from the Sacred Mosque to the Distant Mosque (17:2), he would be taken to Medina. In anticipation of the fulfilment of this prophecy he is commanded to pray that his entry in Medina may be doubly blessed and so may his departure from the town—Mecca—in which he is now living.

1645. It is among the marvels of Quranic diction that to convey a certain sense it selects that particular word which points to a long sequence of events. In this particular instance the sense of the vanishing of falsehood might as well have been expressed by some other word such as Halaka (perished) or Baṭala (became useless), but neither of these words would have conveyed the sense of gradual weakening and ultimate disappearance which is expressed by Zahaqa. The verse contains the hint that with the entry of the Holy Prophet into Medina, his power would continue to grow and that of his enemy decline till it would be finally broken. Again, it is a marvel of the style of the Qur'ān that, without being poetry, its verses possess poetic rhythm and cadence without which it is not possible to give full expression to feelings of extreme delight. The verse under comment furnishes one such example. After the conquest of Mecca as the Holy Prophet was clearing the Ka'bah of the idols which had desecrated it, he repeatedly recited this verse as he struck the idols (Bukhārī).

1646. The words, 'Alā Shākilati-hī, mean, according to his own motives; way of thinking; aims and purposes.

1647. In the period of their spiritual decline and decadence the Jews seem to have come to dabble in occult practices like many modern Spiritualists, Theosophists and Hindu Yogis. Some of the Jews of Medina also seem to have resorted to these practices in the time of the Holy Prophet. This is why when the Meccan idolaters sought their help to confute the Holy Prophet, they suggested that they (the Meccan idolaters) should question him about the human soul. The Qur'ān answers them by the verse under comment by saying that the soul derives its powers from the command of God and anything else that is claimed to be acquired by the so-called spiritual exercises and magical art is all humbug. The question regarding the nature of the human soul is reported to have been first put to the Holy Prophet at Mecca by the Quraish and then, according to 'Abdullāh bin Mas'ūd, by the Jews at Medina. The soul has been described here as something created by the direct command of God. According to the Qur'ān all creation falls under two categories: (1) Original creation which is brought about without the aid or help of any substance or matter previously created. (2) Subsequent creation which is brought about with the aid and help of the means and matter previously created. The former kind of creation falls under the category of Amr (lit. command) for which see 2:118, and the latter is known as Khalq (lit. creating). The human soul belongs to the first category.

The word Rūḥ also means, Divine revelation (Lane). The context seems to support this meaning.

1648. The verse seems to imply a prophecy that a time would come when Quranic knowledge would depart from the earth. A similar prophecy of the Holy Prophet has been reported by Merdawaih, Baihaqī and Ibn-e-Mājah that there would come a time when the kernel and spirit of the Qur'ān would disappear from the earth, and not all the so-called mystics and Ṣufīs of the time claiming, like their Jewish prototypes, to possess supernatural powers, would be able to restore it with their concerted efforts.

1649. The challenge is held out in the first place to those people who indulge in occult practices that they should summon to their aid the hidden spirits from whom they claim to receive spiritual knowledge. The challenge also stands for all time to all people who deny the Divine origin of the Holy Qur'ān.

1650. Human faculties being limited man can, at best, deal with only a limited number of problems. But the Qur'ān has fully dealt with all those matters that concern his moral and spiritual development.

اَوۡ تَكُوۡنَ لَكَ جَنَّةٌ مِّنۡ نَّخِيۡلٍ وَّعِنَبٍ فَتُفَجِّرَ الۡاَنۡهٰرَ خِلٰلَهَا تَفۡجِيۡرًا ﴿۹۲﴾

[a]25:11. [b]17:60; 23:25; 34:44.

1651. When the Meccans were confounded by the answers of the Qur'ān to their questions and objections, they turned round and demanded of the Holy Prophet that if the Qur'ān comprehended every kind of knowledge then he should be able to work miracles—cause springs to gush forth from the earth, grow gardens and build houses of gold for himself, etc.

1652. In answer to their impudent demands the disbelievers are told that these demands pertain either to God or to the Prophet. The demands of the first category are frivolous in character and God is above such frivolities. As for their demands pertaining to the Holy Prophet, they are incompatible with his limited powers as a human being and his mission as a Prophet of God.

1653. The verse may have two meanings: (a) Angels descend upon angel-like men, and not upon their opposites, and if the disbelievers should also bring about an angelic change in their lives, angels would descend upon them. (b) Beings of the same species only can serve as exemplars or models for one another. Thus only a man could be the bearer of Divine Message for mankind, because only he alone could serve as a model for other men.

1654. When, by burning in the Fire for a long time, the disbelievers' feelings became dull, God would again sharpen them and they would once more begin to feel the torment of burning as keenly as before.

1655. All rejection of religion and truth is, in fact, the result of denial of the Hereafter. This is why the Qur'ān has laid so much stress on Life after death and reverts to this all important subject time and again.

1656. The verse embodies an invincible argument to prove the existence of Life after death. It does not straightway say to disbelievers that they would be born again because God has the power to give them a new birth. Such a statement would have been an empty assertion. On the contrary, it says to them that if they would not believe that there is life after death, they would as well disbelieve if they were told that they would lose their power and prestige to those very weak and poor Muslims whom they now looked down upon as of no worth and consequence. If this seemingly impossible prophecy about their own destruction and about that of the rise to power of the poor Muslims turned out to be true, the claim that there is a Life after death would automatically become established.

1657. These nine Signs mentioned elsewhere in the Qur'ān are, (a) the rod (7:108); (b) the white hand (7:109); (c), (d) drought and scarcity of fruits

(7:131); (e) the storm; (f) the locusts; (g) the lice; (h) the frogs; and (i) the punishment of the blood (7:134).

1658. The verse implies that like Jews, the Muslims would suffer national disaster twice. The first of these two disasters befell Muslims when Baghdad fell to the arms of the Tartars under Halaku Khan. They are here told that they would be visited with Divine punishment for the second time in the Latter Days—in the time of the Promised Messiah, just as the Jews were punished in that of the first Messiah—Jesus. The verse signifies that when Muslims are punished for the second time, which means the fulfilment of 'the promise of the Latter Days,' the Jews would be brought back to the Holy Land from all parts of the world. The prophecy has been remarkably fulfilled by the return of the Jews to Palestine under the Balfour Declaration and by the setting up of the so-called State of Israel. 'The promise of the Latter Days' applies to the time of the Promised Messiah (Bayān).

1659. The Qur'ān had to meet the needs of two classes of people: (a) It had to answer the temporary objections of its immediate addressees and to satisfy the immediate spiritual needs of the first converts to Islām: and (b) it had to lay down guidance for the multitudinous and multifarious problems of mankind for all time. The verses dealing with the objections of Meccan idolaters and the spiritual upbringing of early Muslims naturally had to be revealed first and those which dealt with the lasting spiritual human needs were revealed afterwards. Thus the Quranic verses were revealed piecemeal and at intervals. Whenever a particular objection was raised by disbelievers, verses containing the answer to such an objection were revealed. Similarly, when the early Muslims were required to be provided with guidance at a particular occasion, necessary and relevant verses were revealed to meet the needs of that occasion. That was the order in which the Qur'ān was originally revealed. But since the temporary needs of the immediate addressees of the Qur'ān were different from the permanent requirements of mankind in general, the order in which the Qur'ān was later compiled in the form of a book had naturally to be different from that in which it was originally revealed.

1660. The verse expresses a Muslim's state of mind when in the posture of prostration the realization of the greatness of God and of his own weakness humbles his spirit. The believers are required to prostrate themselves after reciting those verses in which the command to fall down in prostration is contained. The Holy Prophet used to prostrate himself after having recited any of those verses.

1661. God possesses innumerable attributes and a Muslim should invoke in his prayer that particular Divine attribute which has special bearing on the matter for which he seeks Divine guidance and help.

CHAPTER 18

AL-KAHF

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

According to Ibn-e-'Abbās and Ibn-e-Zubair the whole of this Sūrah was revealed at Mecca (Manthūr). Almost all the Commentators of the Qur'ān appear to be agreed upon this point. Western scholars have assigned the Sūrah to the sixth year of the Call, but most probably it was revealed in the fourth or fifth year. Anas reports that the Sūrah was revealed in one whole and was guarded by seventy thousand angels (Manthūr, vol. 4, p. 210). In Chapter An-Naḥl the prophecy that the Holy Prophet would meet with severe opposition from the Jews and the Christians had been dealt with at some length. This subject was further elaborated in Sūrah Banī Isrā'īl in which it was stated that he would be taken to regions where he would live among the Jews and would establish new contacts with them and later meet with opposition from both the Jews and the Christians and in the end would conquer them. The Sūrah Banī Isrā'īl mentioned a Vision of the Holy Prophet, which also embodied a prophecy that he would conquer the Holy Land of the Jews, and alluded to two revolts of the Jews foretold in the Book of Deuteronomy. The first revolt took place after the time of David as a consequence of which the Jews were expelled from their native land. They repented of their sins and their homeland was restored to them. But they again relapsed into iniquitous practices, defied God's commandments and revolted for the second time in the time of Jesus. This second defiance brought upon them severer punishment. Their holy places were destroyed and they were exiled from their beloved Land of Promise. These prophecies had also mentioned the conditions and circumstances under which the first part of the Israelites—the Jews—had to pass. A description of their condition, however, gave rise to two obvious questions: (a) If Christians, who form the second part of the Mosaic Dispensation, have been spared the punishment with which the Jews who were its first part were afflicted, does it not follow that Christians are heirs to the Divine blessings and favours promised to the Jews? (b) Why are Muslims warned to be on their guard lest they incur Divine displeasure by following in the footsteps of the Jews, and what does this warning portend and what has the future in store for them?

Subject-Matter

Both these very natural and pertinent questions have been answered in the present Chapter and some light has also been shed on the vicissitudes through which Christianity—second branch of the Mosaic Dispensation—was to pass. Mention has also been made of how Muslims would behave and make themselves the object of Divine wrath by imitating the iniquitous ways of the Jews. An answer has also been supplied to yet another question, viz. what connection is there between these matters and the story of the Dwellers of the Cave, and of Dhul-Qarnain and Gog and Magog and the parable of "Two Gardens" and the Isrā' (Spiritual Journey) of Moses? The answer which this Sūrah gives to this question is that these parables describe in metaphorical language the rise and fall of Christian nations and also the hardships and tribulations which the Muslims were to suffer from them on account of their own iniquities.

In order to expand the subject and give it more clarity, the Isrā' (Spiritual Journey) of Moses has been mentioned after the parable of the "Two Gardens." This Spiritual Journey of Moses describes in metaphorical language the great material and moral progress which his followers were to make just as the phenomenal progress of the followers of the Holy Prophet has been described in his own Isrā', mentioned in Chapter Banī Isrā'īl. The Isrā' of Moses describes in detail when and how this great advancement would commence and where it would stop and when the Israelites would become deprived of Divine favours which would be transferred to the House of Ishmael. After this we are told that the Ishmaelites, after having inherited God's favours, would, in their turn, incur His displeasure by defying His commandments and would be punished by Gog and Magog who would, at one time, spread over and dominate the entire world. Towards the end of the Sūrah mention is made of one—Dhul-Qarnain, who stood in the way of the domination of the whole world by Gog and Magog. Thus light is thrown on the material and spiritual conditions of Christians both in the early stages of their Faith and in the Latter Days. The Dwellers of the Cave symbolize early Christians in the period of their weakness, and Gog and Magog represent them in the heyday of their glory in the Latter Days. The Sūrah closes with an assurance to the followers of Islām that God would break and shatter the forces of irreligiousness unleashed by Gog and Magog, and would bring about the deliverance of Muslims by means of a second Dhul-Qarnain. This second Dhul-Qarnain is the Holy Founder of the Aḥmadiyya Movement who is a follower of the Holy Prophet.

The Sūrah being very important, some additional details of its subject-matter may be mentioned. It states that God has revealed the Qur'ān in order to remove the errors that had crept into previous heavenly Scriptures. It warns those who ascribe a son to God that by so doing they incur Divine displeasure. These people hate Islām, and their beginning is not like their end. In the beginning they were very weak and were subjected to bitter persecution. God had mercy on them and delivered them from their trials and tribulations and put them on the road to progress and prosperity. But when they grew rich and prosperous, they resorted to idolatrous practices, and instead of turning to God they turned to the world and became entirely lost in it. Muslims are warned to take a lesson from their fate and in the day of their own power and glory to be on their guard, particularly against being remiss in Divine worship, against excessive love of wealth and worldly possessions, and against a life of ease and luxury. The glory and power of Christian nations as compared with the degradation and poverty of Muslims are then graphically depicted in 'the parable of two men,' one rich and the other poor. The rich man—Christian nations—would be proud of his riches while the poor man would turn to God. Pride and conceit would come to grief in the long run and circumstances beyond human control would bring about the rich man's decline and fall. The Sūrah proceeds to give some details of those great changes which were revealed to Moses in his Vision in which he was told that the development and progress of his Dispensation would fall far short of the great heights which another and a later Dispensation would attain. This later Dispensation—Islām—would bring to perfection and completion the teaching which the Mosaic Dispensation had left incomplete, and would emerge triumphant from the ashes of a declining and decadent Christendom. After having dealt with the decline and fall of Christian nations and with the rise of Islām, the Sūrah describes the conditions which would follow the triumph of Islām. It is stated that a time would come when Muslims would also turn their backs upon religion and would become entirely engrossed in the pursuit of material wealth and power. To punish them for their sins God would once again grant success and prosperity to Christian nations which for a time had been restrained from advancing into Southern and Eastern regions. Then would come great destruction upon the world and nations of the world would become divided into two hostile camps, wedded to two opposite ideologies. Sin and iniquity would prevail in the world and injustice and tyranny would become rampant. When things would come to such a pass God would create circumstances which would finally check the seemingly irresistible onrush of the flood threatening to engulf the entire world. While dealing with this subject the Sūrah clearly hints that the same people would play an important part in arresting and stopping this flood who had once before broken the political power of Gog and Magog—true followers of the Holy Prophet. 1662. The Qur'ān as Qayyim (guardian) performs a double function. It is a guardian over the previous Scriptures in that it corrects and removes the errors that have found their way into them, and it is also a guardian over future generations because it takes upon itself their spiritual upbringing and guides them to the paths which lead to the realization of the sublime object of human life.

1663. The Qur'ān is first spoken of as 'giving warning,' next as 'giving glad tidings' (v. 3), and then again as 'giving warning' as in the present verse. Disbelievers have been warned twice and in between these two warnings the believers have been given glad tidings. This double warning interspersed with glad tidings for Muslims implied three prophecies: (a) the discomfiture and destruction of the Holy Prophet's opponents in his own time, (b) the phenomenal rise of Muslims to power and glory, and, (c) after the departure of their glory, the punishment in store for the nations who say that 'Allāh has taken unto Himself a son.'

1664. Bākhi‘ being active participle from Bakha‘a which means, he did a thing most effectively, the verse speaks volumes for the Holy Prophet’s concern and solicitude for the spiritual well-being of his people. His grief over their rejection of the Divine Message and opposition to it had almost killed him. God’s Messengers and His Prophets are full of the milk of human kindness. They cry and weep and grieve for mankind. But such is human ingratitude that those very people for whom they feel so deeply persecute them and seek to kill them.

1665. Of all the innumerable things that God has created there is not one which has not its particular use or which is devoid of all good. All of them add to the beauty of human life. Muslims were enjoined always to keep in view the great truth underlying these simple words and to devote their time and energy to delving into the great secrets of nature and to exploring the unlimited properties of elements.

1666. The verse implies a prophecy that the Christian nations of the West, after acquiring wealth, power and dominion and making great discoveries and inventions, would make God’s earth abound, as the Bible says, in sin and iniquity. Divine wrath would be excited and, as the prophecies uttered by the mouths of God’s great Prophets in the Old and New Testaments and the Qur’ān and Ḥadīth, widespread calamities would descend upon the earth and all the progress that they will have made and all their handiworks, their lofty and stately buildings, the beauty of their land and all their pomp, glory and grandeur would be completely destroyed.

10. Dost thou think that the Companions of the Cave[1666A] and the Inscription were a wonder among Our Signs?[1667]

أَمْ حَسِبْتَ أَنَّ أَصْحٰبَ الْكَهْفِ وَالرَّقِيْمِ ۙ كَانُوْا مِنْ اٰيٰتِنَا عَجَبًا ۝١٠

1666A. The expression, Aṣḥābul-Kahf, has been variously interpreted as 'People of the Cave;' 'Men of the Cave;' 'Companions of the Cave;' 'Inmates of the Cave' and 'Dwellers of the Cave.'

1667. The verse declares that the Dwellers of the Cave were not strange things. There was nothing about them which might be considered as a departure from the ordinary laws of nature. Curiously enough many fantastic legends have been woven round them. The memorable story of the "Seven Sleepers," as told by Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," provides an important clue to the solution of the mystery that surrounds the Dwellers of the Cave. 'When the Emperor Decius,' says Gibbon, 'persecuted the Christians, seven noble youths of Ephesus concealed themselves in a spacious cavern in the side of an adjacent mountain, where they were doomed to perish by the tyrant, who gave orders that the entrance of the cavern should be firmly secured with a pile of huge stones.' Now it is a well-known historical fact that early Christians had to suffer untold persecution at the hands of the idolatrous Roman Emperors for their belief in Divine Unity. This persecution began as early as the time of the notorious Emperor Nero who is said to have set fire to Rome; he was fiddling while that great seat of learning and civilization burnt. It continued intermittently till after a brief respite of about forty years it began with renewed fury under Emperor Decius who wanted to restore the religion and institutions of ancient Rome, and with this object in view he began a systematic extermination of Christians. The edicts of Diocletian in 303 A.D., however, surpassed all anti-Christian measures. By these edicts Christian churches in all the provinces of the Empire were demolished, all their sacred books were publicly burnt and the property of the Church was confiscated and Christians were put out of the protection of the land' (Gibbon's Roman Empire, Enc. Brit. & Story of Rome). To save themselves from this cruel and inhuman persecution its helpless victims sought refuge in hiding in the catacombs at Rome. For this purpose these catacombs were admirably adapted both by the intricacy of their labyrinthine passages and the numerous small chambers and hiding places at different levels which might remain undetected in the dark by pursuers. From the inscriptions on the tombstones in the catacombs it appears that the early Christians were strict monotheists. Jesus has been mentioned only as a shepherd, or a Prophet of God and Mary, his mother, as nothing more than a pious woman. It also appears that Christians who took refuge in the catacombs kept dogs at their entrance which would announce the approach of strangers by their barking. The account of the Dwellers of the Cave thus, in fact,

اِذْ اَوَى الْفِتْيَةُ اِلَى الْكَهْفِ فَقَالُوْا رَبَّنَآ اٰتِنَا مِنْ لَّدُنْكَ رَحْمَةً وَّهَيِّئْ لَنَا مِنْ اَمْرِنَا رَشَدًا ⑩

11. When the young men betook themselves to the Cave for refuge they said, 'Our Lord, bestow on us mercy from Thyself, and furnish us right guidance in our affair.'

فَضَرَبْنَا عَلٰٓى اٰذَانِهِمْ فِي الْكَهْفِ سِنِيْنَ عَدَدًا ⑪ represents the history of early Christians and shows how they suffered untold persecution for their belief in the Unity of God. The position and description of the Cave, as given in v. 18, is of secondary importance. It applies more fully and in greater detail and exactness to the catacombs at Rome than to any other place.

The story of the Dwellers of the Cave may also be taken to apply to Joseph of Arimathaea and his companions. According to William of Malmesbury, Joseph was sent to Britain by St. Philip and having been given a small island in Somersetshire there constructed with twisted twigs the first Christian church in Britain, which afterwards became the Abbey of Glastonbury. According to another account Joseph is said to have wandered into Britain in the year 63 A.D.… According to legends the first Church of Glastonbury was a little wattled building erected by Joseph of Arimathaea as the leader of the twelve apostles sent over to Britain from Gaul by St. Philip (Enc. Brit., 10th edition & 13th edition, under "Joseph of Arimathaea" & under "Glastonbury"). The latest theory, which also finds powerful support from a study of "Dead Sea Scrolls," assigns the caves, in which the early Christians sought refuge and where they committed to writing their beliefs and teachings, to the valley near the Dead Sea.

"Cave" and "Inscription" represent two most prominent aspects of the Christian Faith, viz. that it began as a religion of renunciation and withdrawal from the world and has ended by becoming a religion of entire engrossment in worldly affairs, a religion of business and trade in a world of writings and inscriptions. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1486-1490.

1668. The Arabic expression Ḍaraba'alā Udhnihī means, he prevented him from hearing. The Quranic expression means, 'We prevented them from hearing.' It also means, 'We made them sleep by preventing any sound from penetrating into their ears in consequence of which they would have awakened' (Lane). Literally, the verse means, 'We prevented any sound from penetrating into their ears,' i.e. for a number of years they remained wholly isolated from the affairs of the outside world and did not know what was happening there.

1669. There seemed to be two parties among the early Christians: (a) Those who did not like to dissemble or dissimulate and knowing no compromise with unbelief and idolatry suffered persecution for their faith with patience and fortitude. These people had to seek refuge in caves. (b) Those who thinking prudence to be the better part of valour concealed their faith and saved themselves from persecution. "Two parties" may also refer to the persecutors and the persecuted.

1670. The verse shows that many fantastic stories were current about the Dwellers of the Cave in the Holy Prophet's time. The truth about them, however, is that they were young men of noble conduct who had staked their all for the sake of their Lord and that their faith had steadily grown under persecution.

1671. Though their people were against them and mercilessly persecuted them, yet the Dwellers of the Cave could not be intimidated into giving up their religion. God had strengthened their hearts and had bestowed upon them firmness of faith.

1672. The people to whom the Dwellers of the Cave belonged were idol-

17. 'And now when you have withdrawn from them and from that which they worship beside Allāh, then seek refuge in the Cave;[1673] your Lord will unfold to you His mercy and will provide for you some easy and comfortable course in this affair of yours.'

worshippers. Such were the Romans.

1673. The verse brings to light the fact that those monotheistic young men were no scattered individuals but formed part of an organized and disciplined religious community whose members met frequently in private. The verse shows that when these young men talked of taking shelter in the Cave they had some specific Cave in mind. This Cave seems to have already been used as a place of refuge by Roman slaves when they fled from their cruel masters. The words, And now when you have withdrawn from them, signify that they had already been the victims of a severe social boycott and had lived apart from their people in a separate group of their own.

1674. It appears that the Cave was so situated that it faced north-west, for the sun passes a place, which has its face to the north, from right to left. It seemed to cover a vast area as the words 'spacious hollow' show. The catacombs at Rome which still exist confirm this view. They enclose a vast area, which has been estimated variously as extending over as many as 870 miles (Enc. Brit.). It also appears that the catacombs admitted very little light. The Cave was made in such a way as to serve as a hiding place. St. Jerome, who visited the catacombs in the 4th century, says, "It is all so dark that the language of the Prophet (Ps. 55:15) seems to be fulfilled, 'let them go down quick into Hell." Only occasionally is light let in to mitigate the horror of the gloom, and then not so much through a window as through a hole' (Enc. Brit., 11th edition).

among the Signs of Allāh. [a]He whom Allāh guides is alone rightly guided; but he whom He leaves to go astray, for him thou wilt find no helper or guide.

1675. The Muslims in the Holy Prophet's time were forewarned that Christian nations in northern regions were lying in a state of dormancy but they would soon rise from their deep sleep of centuries and would spread all over the world and hold it under their sway.

1675A. The words, 'We shall cause them to turn over to the right and to the left' seem to refer to their going about in the world, spreading in all directions in search of new markets and making new conquests.

1676. The words, besides referring to the great fondness of Western Christian nations for dogs, may also be taken as referring to the Byzantine Empire which then kept guard over Europe on both sides of the Sea of Marmora, and which looks like a dog keeping watch with its forelegs stretched forth on both sides.

1677. These words refer to the time when Christian nations of the West were to acquire great political power. The Qur'ān foretold this fact hundreds of years ago when Christian nations were yet sunk in a deep sleep of centuries and the wildest stretch of imagination could not have foreseen the power and glory to which they subsequently rose. The verse contains a characteristic picture of the domination of Western nations over Eastern and Southern lands, their peculiar mode of life and the fear and awe they inspire among the peoples of these regions.

1678. The verse seems to refer to the Christian nations of the West after they had spread all over the world. The words, We raised them up, refer to the great progress which these nations were destined to make in the future. The words, One of them said, 'How long have you tarried,' signify that Christian nations would begin to feel that it was now time for them to bestir themselves and shake off their lethargy. This awakening took place in the time of the Crusades when the monarchs of England, France and Germany made common cause and the whole of Europe united to make a concerted attack upon Muslims to wrest the Holy Land from their hands. According to Arabic idiom the words 'a day or part of a day' denote an indefinite period. Elsewhere the Qur'ān (20:103, 104) has specified as one thousand years the period during which Christian nations of the West remained in a state of sleep or inactivity. "Ten days" in 20:103, 104 stand for ten centuries and the words "blue-eyed" in these verses refer to the peoples of the West who generally have blue eyes. It is a well-known historical fact that the foundations of British power in the East were laid in the beginning of the seventeenth century ("March of Man"). This period approximates to one thousand years after the Holy Prophet.

1679. When the Dwellers of the Cave saw that the wave of persecution against them had subsided, they sent one of their members to the city with some old coins to buy provisions and to find out how matters stood with regard to them. Ṭa'ām may signify such articles of food as wheat, barley, millet, dates, etc. (Lane). This refers to the commercial expeditions of the 1680. European businessmen have a special knack for being gentle and courteous in their commercial dealings. To this characteristic of theirs the expression, And let him be courteous, seems to refer. It also means, 'Let him conduct himself with caution.'

1681. The words, but let him not inform anyone about you, refer to the quiet and unobtrusive penetration of the Western influence in the East.

1682. The words mean, 'If the people to whom you are sending trade parties became acquainted with your real intentions, or before your feet became firmly established in their country some political quarrel or commercial disagreement arose and you were overpowered, then you would either have to quit their country or embrace their religion. [a]18:40; 74:57; 76:31; 81:30.

1683. The words, We will surely build a place of worship over them, mention one of the distinctive marks of the Dwellers of the Cave which is that their successors, the Christian nations, will build churches in memory of their dead saints. It is further worthy of note that many such churches have been found in the catacombs.

1684. These guesses seem to be based on inscriptions on the walls of some of the chambers in the catacombs; but each inscription has reference only to a particular family, party or group. The total number of those who took refuge in the catacombs at any time is not known. A dog seems, from the inscriptions, to have always accompanied a party of refugees.

1685. The verse may mean that in the time of their decline and degradation Muslims will lose all initiative for any real and useful work and will indulge only in daydreaming and all their activities will remain confined to talking about the future, and they will do nothing to improve their lot.

1686. The period in which early Christians were subjected to persecution and had frequently to take refuge in caves and other places of hiding extends approximately over 309 years, and historical data have corroborated this calculation. As popularly believed the persecution of Christians began with Jesus's Crucifixion in 28 A.D., and ended with Emperor Constantine's conversion to Christianity in 337 A.D. (Enc. Brit.), a period of about 309 years. And Constantine was not converted in 337 A.D., but in 309 A.D. The tragedy of the Crucifixion took place 28 years later than is generally believed (Chronology by Archbishop Ushers & Daily Bible Illustrations by Dr. Kitto).

1687. The early Christians were persecuted in many lands and at different times, e.g. in Rome, Alexandria, etc. They were compelled to seek refuge in caves and catacombs at different times and for different periods. Their stay in the catacombs was not a single, uninterrupted episode. The exact length of the total period of such stay is known only to Allāh.

1687A. The words also mean: 'Clear is His Sight and keen His Hearing' or 'He sees all and hears all.'

[a]15:48; 36:57; 83:24.

1688. Gold bracelets being symbols of royalty, the verse may signify that Muslims will become rulers of vast and mighty empires and will enjoy great power, honour and dignity and their womenfolk will wear garments of fine silk and heavy brocade interwoven with gold. This prophecy was fulfilled when the treasures of Persia and Rome were laid at the feet of the illiterate Arabs who used to wear clothes made of coarse skins and of the hair of animals.

1689. With this verse begins, in the form of a parable, the conditions of the two peoples—Christians and Muslims, the "two men" representing these two peoples and "two gardens" the two periods of the rise of the Christian nations. The verse denotes that in their chequered history Christian nations would rise to great power twice. The first period preceded the advent of Islām while the second began with the dawn of the 17th century. A.D., when Christian nations of Europe began to make great progress and acquire unprecedented power and prestige which reached its zenith in the nineteenth century.

1690. "The stream" represents the time of the Holy Prophet, through whom portions of the true teachings of Moses and Jesus were preserved.

وَّكَانَ لَهٗ ثَمَرٌ ۚ فَقَالَ لِصَاحِبِهٖ وَهُوَ يُحَاوِرُهٗٓ اَنَا اَكْثَرُ مِنْكَ مَالًا وَّاَعَزُّ نَفَرًا ﴿٣٥﴾

1690A. The powerful and prosperous Christian nations would look down upon and taunt the poor and powerless Muslims for their poverty and lack of material resources.

1691. Being proud of their material progress Western Christian nations would give themselves up to a life of ease and luxury and in their conceit and arrogance misconceive that their power, progress and prosperity will last for ever, and being lulled into a false sense of security and complacency, they would be entirely lost in a life of sin and iniquity.

[a]68:33. [b]68:20.

1692. This verse and vv. 36 and 40 speak of one garden only because of the two gardens (v. 33) one had practically perished before Islām. The "garden" which proved to be the greatest source of pride for Christians is the one which flourished after Islam their present material great progress and power.

1693. The words 'from heaven' show that no earthly power will be able effectively to combat and resist the military might of Western Christian nations. God Himself will create circumstances which will bring about their destruction. It is to this irresistible might of Gog and Magog who represent the material glory of Christianity that the Holy Prophet referred when he is reported to have said, 'None will have the power to fight them' (Muslim, ch. on "Dajjāl").

1694. The springs of their great talents and intellectual attainments on which their material progress mainly depends or which, in the words of the Qur'ān, keep their garden fresh and green, will dry up, resulting in the complete desolation of their "garden." Their springs of spiritual freshness will also dry up.

1695. All the efforts and endeavours of Christian peoples to maintain continuity of their material wealth will end in smoke and their power and prestige will speedily and unexpectedly decline. The verse incidentally shows that the word "garden" used in these verses has not been used in its literal sense because gardens do not fall upon their trellises.

The expression, Ḥasharnā-hum, means that they will be gathered in battle array, facing each other, and will fight to the bitter end.

1699. The verse seems to signify that at that time there will be general talk about a new world order which will herald an era of permanent peace and concord in the world and the so-called leaders of political and social thought will seek and claim to establish it, but they will not succeed in their efforts because God has reserved for Himself the consummation of this supreme task.

1700. The verse may mean that these nations will set up high tariff walls or 1701. The disbelieving nations of the West will see a most destructive war approaching. They will try all possible means to avoid it but all their plans and efforts to this end will prove futile. The West has already passed through the ordeal of two most destructive wars which have almost destroyed its political domination and prestige in the world and have shaken Western civilization to its foundation. A third holocaust is staring it—perhaps the whole world in the face.

1702. The verse may mean: (a) Of all God's creation man has been endowed with reason and intellectual faculties but regrettably he employs them to reject truth and for other evil purposes (b) or, it may mean that he is a victim of chronic misgivings and doubts, which seldom find satisfaction, and being a confirmed sceptic seeks to discover loopholes even in the most convincing arguments.

وَإِذْ قَالَ مُوسَىٰ لِفَتَاهُ لَا أَبْرَحُ حَتَّىٰ أَبْلُغَ مَجْمَعَ الْبَحْرَيْنِ أَوْ أَمْضِيَ حُقُبًا ﴿٦١﴾

1704. With this verse begins the subject of the Isrā' (Spiritual Night Journey) of Moses. As stated above, the followers of Jesus Christ achieved great material power and prosperity, and in their chequered career left their indelible imprint twice on world's history. This double prosperity of Christian nations has been likened to "two gardens" in v. 33. The first of these two periods began with the conversion to Christianity of the Roman Emperor, Constantine when it became the religion of the State, and continued till the birth of the Holy Prophet of Islām. The second and more important of these two periods is represented by the present age when Christian nations of the West have acquired so much power and prestige that the nations of Asia and Africa have to dance attendance upon them like serfs and slaves. Between these "two gardens" flowed a "stream" (v. 34). This "stream" denoted the birth and rise to power of Islām which left its deep mark on human history during the interval between these two periods. In order to provide an historical setting to the account and to make it look like a connected whole, a somewhat detailed description of the Isrā' or Spiritual Journey of Moses has been given in the present and following few verses. Moses had foretold the advent of a Prophet like unto him (Deut. 18:18). This prophecy has been referred to in the Qur'ān in 73:16. By putting the account of Moses's Spiritual Journey between those of the Dwellers of the Cave and Gog and Magog—representing the two periods of the beginning of Christianity and its later progress and advance—the Qur'ān has pointed out to the fact that the Prophet referred to in Moses's prophecy, who was also to be his counterpart, was to appear during the interval between these two periods. Thus have these incidents been mentioned in their historical order.

1704A. Ḥuqub is plural of Ḥuqbah which means, long time, indefinite time; an age; seventy years or more (Lane & Mufradāt).

The Isrā' of Moses was, like the Isrā' of the Holy Prophet (17:2), no physical journey but a spiritual experience by means of which Moses was transported from his body of flesh and blood to a spiritual tabernacle. The Bible and the Qur'ān both support this view. Some of the arguments advanced in its support are as follows:

(1) The Bible which is considered by Christians to be more or less a reliable record of Moses's life has omitted all mention of this most unusual and wonderful incident and has failed even to make a passing reference to it. (2) Before and after he was commissioned as a Divine Prophet, Moses is known to have undertaken only one journey and that was to Midian. The Bible and the Qur'ān have both referred to this journey. Both also agree that Moses undertook the journey to Midian alone, while in the journey referred to in the present and the following verses he is described as having been accompanied by 'his young companion.' (3) There is no place in the world which is known by the name, Majma'ul-Baḥrain. The expression can only mean 'the junction of two seas.' Such junctions nearest to the place where Moses lived, after he had left Egypt, are Babul-Mandab which unites the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean and the Straits of Dardanelles which joins the Mediterranean Sea with the Sea of Marmara and Al-Baḥrain where the waters of the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean meet. Of all these places the Straits of Dardanelles alone can possibly be the point where such a meeting could have taken place because on its way from Egypt lies Canaan which was the destination of Moses but which he could not reach in his lifetime. All these three points were about one thousand miles distant from Moses's place of living, and considering the absence of good means of communication and transport in those days it would have taken him several months to cover such a long distance and Moses could not afford to remain absent from his people for such a long time without seriously jeopardising their spiritual well-being, specially after his bitter experience with them when he was absent from them on Mount Ṭūr only for forty days. The expression Majma'ul-Baḥrain, seems to mean the junction of the two Dispensations—Mosaic and Islamic.

Besides this external evidence there is much internal evidence in vv. 61-83 which shows that the journey was not a physical event but a spiritual experience of Moses:—

(a) The "Servant of God" made a big hole in the boat (v. 72) to save it from being forcibly seized by the king. But did the boat remain seaworthy after it was damaged, or did it not? If it did, why did not the king seize it? If it did not, why did it not sink? In this physical world no boat is ever known to have remained floating after a big hole had been made in its bottom. In the world of visions, however, such things are possible. (b) In this world of flesh and bones no sensible person, much less a Prophet of God, would take the life of another person without a legitimate cause, as "the Servant of God" is stated to have done (v. 75). (c) How could a great Prophet of God and a most noble and broadminded person like Moses have found fault with the "Man of God"

فَلَمَّا بَلَغَا مَجْمَعَ بَيْنِهِمَا نَسِيَا حُوْتَهُمَا فَاتَّخَذَ سَبِيْلَهٗ فِي الْبَحْرِ سَرَبًا ﴿٦٢﴾

62. But when they reached the place where the two seas met, they forgot their fish,[1705] and it made its way into the sea going away quickly.

فَلَمَّا جَاوَزَا قَالَ لِفَتٰىهُ اٰتِنَا غَدَآءَنَا ۫

63. And when they had gone beyond that place, he said to for not demanding payment from two poor orphan boys for repairing their broken wall because the people of their town had refused to entertain them? What had the two orphan boys done to deserve Moses's displeasure? It was the people of the town and not they who had refused to entertain them as guests. (d) It is inconceivable that a great Prophet of God like Moses should have undertaken a long arduous journey in search of a "Servant of God" to learn from him how to break a hole in a boat or to kill a young man or to repair a wall and demand no remuneration for it. Moreover, the 'Holy Prophet' is reported to have said, 'Would that Moses had kept silent, so that God would have revealed to us many more secrets of the unseen (Bukhārī, Kitābut-Tafsīr). But there was nothing of the secrets of the unseen in the unusual acts which the "Servant of God" is stated to have done. According to Māwardī, the person whom Moses had gone to see was no human being but an angel of God (Kathīr). All these facts taken together constitute very solid and weighty evidence, that the journey of Moses was but a vision which needs to be interpreted and explained in order to understand its reality and significance. The words 'young companion' (v. 61) may refer to Joshua, the son of Nun, but they may more fittingly apply to Jesus. Jesus was the young companion of Moses who came not to destroy but to fulfil the Law and the Prophets (Matt. 5:17). The words, I will not cease pursuing my course until I reach the junction of the two seas, show that Moses's young companion had joined him towards the end of his journey. Moses did not seem to have taken the young man with him from the very outset of his journey. Jesus came fourteen hundred years after him. The words, though I may have to journey on for ages, signify that the Mosaic Dispensation would remain in force for many centuries. The period from the time of Moses to the advent of the Holy Prophet, when the Mosaic Dispensation came to an end, extends over 2000 years.

1705. Ḥūt when seen in a vision denotes houses of worship of the righteous people (Ta'ṭīrul-Anām). In this sense of the word the expression, when they reached the place where the two seas met, they forgot their fish, signifies that at the time when the Mosaic and the Islamic Dispensations would meet, i.e. when Mosaic Dispensation would cease to function and the Islamic Dispensation would come into force, true righteousness would depart from among the followers of Moses and Jesus, and would henceforward become the special mark of the followers of the new Dispensation (48:30).

his young companion, 'Bring us our morning meal.[1706] Surely, we have suffered much fatigue on account of this journey of ours.'

قَالَ اَرَءَيْتَ اِذْ اَوَيْنَآ اِلَى الصَّخْرَةِ فَاِنِّيْ نَسِيْتُ الْحُوْتَ ۖ وَمَآ اَنْسٰنِيْهُ اِلَّا الشَّيْطٰنُ اَنْ اَذْكُرَهٗ ۚ وَاتَّخَذَ سَبِيْلَهٗ فِي الْبَحْرِ ۖ عَجَبًا ﴿٦٤﴾

66. Then they found a servant of Ours,[1708] upon whom We 1706. 'Asking for morning meal or breakfast' in a vision denotes 'weariness' (Ta'ṭīrul-Anām), and the verse purports to say that after passing the 'junction of the two seas' and going on their separate journeys for a long time and being tired of vainly waiting for the Promised Prophet (Deut. 18:18), Moses and his young companion would begin to wonder that he may have already appeared but that they had failed to recognize him. In the verse Moses and his young companion (Jesus) may stand for Jews and Christians respectively.

1707. Ṣakhrah in the language of dreams and visions denotes 'a life of vice and sin.' So the expression, when we betook ourselves to the rock, signifies that when the two seas would meet, i.e. when the Mosaic Dispensation would come to an end and a new Prophet and a new Dispensation would appear, the Jews and Christians would be sunk into a life of sin and iniquity. The words, it took its way into the sea in a marvellous manner signify that true piety and worship of God would take leave of these peoples.

1708. Who is this "Servant of God" ('Abd) upon whom God had bestowed mercy and whom He had taught knowledge and in search of whom Moses, in pursuance of Divine command, had undertaken such a long and difficult journey and who is the central figure and the hero of the whole story? He is none other than the Holy Prophet Muḥammad—his soul having taken an embodied form in Moses's Vision. Reasons for this are: (a) He has been called 'Abd servant of God, in the Qur'ān (2:24; 8:42; 17:2; 18:2; 25:2; 39:37; 53:11 & 72:20). In fact, he is 'Abdullāh (God's servant) par excellence. (b) He has been spoken of as 'a mercy to the whole world' (21:108), an epithet applied in the Qur'ān to none other than the Holy Prophet. (c) He was vouchsafed Divine knowledge in a very large measure (4:114; 20:115 & 27:7). (d) This "Servant of God" had told Moses that he (Moses) would not keep silent (v. 68 below), and the Holy Prophet is reported to have said, 'Would that Moses had kept silent! If he had done so, we would have been vouchsafed more knowledge about the unseen' (Bukhārī, Kitābut-Tafsīr). As a matter of fact, Moses had seen a manifestation of God 'in the fire' when travelling from Midian to Egypt (28:30). Later on, however, he was told that a Prophet would appear from among the brethren of the Israelites in whose mouth God would put His own Word (Deut. 18:18-22). The words of the prophecy signified that the Promised Prophet would be the object of a greater manifestation of God than Moses. Moses, therefore, naturally wished to see who 'that Prophet' could be. To satisfy his curiosity God made him see in his Vision 'that Prophet' of much higher spiritual powers. This learned "Servant of God" of Moses's Vision who has been popularly known by the name of Khiḍr was the spirit of our noble Master, the Holy Prophet Muḥammad, which had assumed a physical tabernacle. See also 7:144.

1709. Moses was denied the heights which the spiritual knowledge of the Holy Prophet had attained.

1710. The patience and steadfastness under severe trials and difficulties of the followers of Moses were not of the same high order and pattern as those of the Holy Prophet's followers (5:22-25 & Bukhārī, Kitābul-Maghāzī). The verse also compares the natural dispositions of Moses and the Holy Prophet. Moses impatiently inquired the "Servant of God" about things which he did not understand; but the Holy Prophet waited patiently till Archangel Gabriel explained to him the meanings of the various things he saw in his own Mi'rāj. This difference in the temperaments of these two great Prophets was also reflected in the behaviour of their respective followers. While the Israelites continued to pester Moses with all sorts of unnecessary and foolish questions, the demeanour of the Holy Prophet's Companions was characterized by great dignity and restraint. They scrupulously avoided putting him questions on religious matters. Both the Holy Prophet and his Companions most faithfully observed the admonition contained in 20:115.

1711. The preceding several verses served only as an introduction to the subject of the Isrā' of Moses. With the present verse, however, begins an account of the actual incidents which Moses actually saw in his Vision. The words, he made a hole in it, when interpreted, signify that the Holy Prophet would lay down commandments which would, as it were, make a hole in the boat which in the language of dreams denotes worldly riches, i.e. he would see to it that wealth did not accumulate in the hands of a few persons but was fairly distributed.

75. So they journeyed on[1713] till when they met a young boy;[1713A] he slew him. Moses said, [a]'What hast thou slain an innocent person without his having slain anyone! Surely, thou hast done a hideous thing.'

77. Moses said, 'If I ask thee concerning anything after this, keep me not in thy company, for then thou shalt have got sufficient excuse from me.'

[a]5:33.

1712. The righteous "Servant of God" in Moses's Vision (the Holy Prophet) is here represented as saying to him that as there existed great difference between the teachings of the two, therefore he (Moses) could not accompany him, i.e. Moses's people would not accept him (the Holy Prophet).

1713. The word Inṭalaqā which has been used several times in these verses was exactly the one used by the Archangel Gabriel for the Holy Prophet in his Mi'rāj (Spiritual Ascension).

1713A. A youth in the language of visions, among other things, signifies ignorance, strength and wild impulses. The killing of the young boy by the righteous "Servant of God" in Moses's Vision meant that Islam would require its Followers to bring a veritable death over their carnal desires and passions.

فَانْطَلَقَا ۫ حَتّٰٓى اِذَآ اَتَيَآ اَهْلَ قَرْيَةِ ِۨ

[a]3:8; 12:22.

1714. The verse seems to signify that Moses and the Holy Prophet would seek the cooperation of Jews and Christians in the cause of God but it would be denied to both of them.

1715. The words, "poor people," here may represent "the Muslims." Making a hole in the boat meant that Islām would exhort Muslims to spend their money in the cause of Allāh, by way of Zakāt and charity. This would appear to be a source of economic weakness rather than of strength and true prosperity, which in fact it would not be. The tyrant king of the Isrā' were the Byzantine and Iranian Empires which would have swallowed up Arabia had it not seemed to them a poor and barren land, not worth the trouble of conquering. It was thus preserved intact for the Holy Prophet.

وَاَمَّا الْغُلٰمُ فَكَانَ اَبَوٰهُ مُؤْمِنَيْنِ فَخَشِيْنَآ اَنْ يُّرْهِقَهُمَا طُغْيَانًا وَّكُفْرًا ﴿٨١﴾

83. 'And as for the wall, it belonged to two orphan boys[1717] in the town, and beneath it was a treasure belonging to them, and their father had been a righteous man, so thy Lord desired that they should reach their age of full strength and take out their treasure, as a mercy from thy Lord and I did it not of my own

1716. Ghulām (a youth), as stated above, in a dream or vision signifies ignorance, strength and wild impulses. "His parents" in the verse are the human body and soul, because the source (or the parents) from which spring all moral qualities is the combination of the human body and soul which are represented here as "believers" because, as taught by Islām, man by nature is inclined to virtue. These "believers" may be dragged into vice by the impulses represented as "youth." Islām eradicates these impulses and leaves man—the human body and soul combined, to develop along beneficent lines and thus to achieve the high purpose of human life.

1717. The orphan boys are Moses and Jesus, and their righteous father is Abraham. Their treasure was the true teaching bequeathed by them to their peoples which was in danger of being lost through the latter's irreligiousness. This treasure was safeguarded in the Qur'ān in order that when they may awaken to a realization of truth of the Quranic teaching they may accept it.

84. And they ask thee concerning Dhul-Qarnain.[1719]

1717A. It was done under Divine command.

1718. The Vision of Moses points to the fact that because Islamic teaching was based on laws and principles which differed fundamentally from some principles of the Mosaic Law, true and real cooperation between Jews and Muslims was impossible. For a detailed explanation of v. 61-83, see "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," (pp. 1517-1530).

1719. Before proceeding to know and establish the identity of Dhul-Qarnain, it is necessary to state the reasons why at all his story has been related in the Qur'ān and why it has found such prominent mention in the present Sūrah. A pointed reference has already been made in this Sūrah to the two periods of the great material progress of Western Christian nations. Its opening verses give a somewhat detailed account of the Dwellers of the Cave. After an account of the early persecution of the Dwellers of the Cave and the later material progress and prosperity of their successors, the Western Christian nations, an account of the Isrā' or Spiritual Journey of Moses which represents the advent of the Holy Prophet of Islām has been given in some detail in order to show that with the Holy Prophet's appearance the first period of the material prosperity and progress of the Christian peoples would come to an end, and though it would still be possible for them to make some progress they would reach the zenith of their material glory and greatness for a second time long after his advent. This second period of material pomp and grandeur of the Christian people is represented in Divine Scriptures by the phenomenal rise to power of Gog and Magog which forms one of the central themes of the present Sūrah. Because politically Gog and Magog and Dhul-Qarnain are inseparably linked with each other, as will appear from the following paragraphs, Dhul-Qarnain's account has also been given at some length in this Sūrah. Dhul-Qarnain seems to be the King who founded the Medo-Persian Empire which represented the two horns of the ram of Daniel's famous dream. "I saw the ram pushing westward and northward and southward, so that no beast might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will and became great" (Dan. 8:4, 20, 21). Quite in harmony with this part of Daniel's dream, the Qur'ān mentions three journeys of Dhul-Qarnain (vv. 87, 91, 94). This fact lends powerful support to the inference that Dhul-Qarnain was the descriptive name of a king of Media and Persia. And of all kings of Media and Persia, the description given in the Qur'ān most fitly applies to Cyrus. The Qur'ān has mentioned four distinctive marks of Dhul-Qarnain: (a) He was a powerful monarch and a kind and just ruler (vv. 85, 89). (b) He was a righteous servant of God and was blessed with Divine revelation (vv. 92, 99). (c) He marched to the West and made great conquests till he came to a place where he found the sun setting, as it were, in a pool of murky water and then he turned to the East and conquered and subdued vast territories (vv. 87, 88). (d) He went to a midway region where a savage people lived and where Gog and Magog made great inroads; and he built a wall there to stop these inroads (vv. 94-98). Of the great rulers and famous military captains of ancient times Cyrus possesses, in the greatest measure, the four above-mentioned qualities. He, therefore, rightly deserves to be considered the Dhul-Qarnain of the Qur'ān, (Isaiah, ch. 45; Ezra, ch. 1 & 2; II Chron., ch. 36:22, 23; Historians' History of the World, under "Cyrus").

1720. See Ezra, 1:1, 2; Isa., 45:1-3 & Historians' History of the World.

1721. The words, the setting-place of the sun, signify the westernmost parts of Cyrus's Empire or the north-western boundary of Asia Minor and refer to the Black Sea, because it formed the north-western boundary of his Empire. The verse refers to the expedition which Cyrus undertook against his enemies in the West (Enc. Brit. & Historians' History of the World, under "Cyrus").

1722. Cyrus believed in Life after death. He was a follower of Zoroaster and of all religions, second only to Islām, Zoroastrianism has laid the greatest stress on Life after death. 'There can be no doubt that Cyrus and his Persian followers were faithful believers in the pure doctrine of Zoroaster, and disdainfully regarded foreign cults' (Jew. Enc., vol. 4, p. 404).

1723. See Isa., 45:1-3 & 2 Chron.36:22, 23.

1724. This verse refers to Cyrus's expedition to the East—to Afghanistan and Baluchistan which were treeless barren tracts on which the sun beat down fiercely. It may also apply to the people who lived in the plains which extended for hundreds of miles to the east of Seistan and Herat and to the north of Duzdab up to Mashhad.

1725. The verse refers to Cyrus's third expedition to the north of Persia—to the territory between the Caspian Sea and the Caucasian mountains.

حَتّٰٓى اِذَا بَلَغَ بَيْنَ السَّدَّيْنِ وَجَدَ مِنْ دُوْنِهِمَا قَوْمًا ۙ لَّا يَكَادُوْنَ يَفْقَهُوْنَ قَوْلًا ﴿٩٤﴾

1726. "The two mountains" signify two barriers. The pass of Derbent in which the Wall was built was bounded on one side by the Caspian Sea and on the other by the Caucasian mountains. These two served as two barriers for it.

1727. The people of these regions spoke a language different from that of Cyrus but living in the immediate neighbourhood of Persia and, having constant contact with the Persians and the Medians, they had learnt to understand and speak their language, though very imperfectly and with very great difficulty. The region in which the Wall was built was adjacent to Persia and later formed a part of it. Now, however, it is included in the Russian territories. For a fuller note on Dhul-Qarnain see "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1531-1540.

1728. The words, Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj (Gog and Magog), are both derived from the root-word Ajja which means, he was quick in his pace; he or it became the flaming fire (Lane), and refer to the Scythians of the farthest East. Or, as some say, all nations inhabiting the north of Asia and Europe (Enc. Brit. & Jewish Enc. under "Gog" and "Magog," and Historians' History of the World, vol. 2, p. 582 & Ezekiel, 38:2-6 & 39:6). The words may also apply to Christian nations of the West as they have made much use of burning fire and boiling water and because all their material progress and great discoveries and inventions are due to the right and very extensive use of these things. Or, the words may imply the restless behaviour of these nations as they are always on the lookout restlessly and impatiently to make new conquests.

The description of Gog and Magog as given in the Bible leaves no doubt that it applies to some Christian Powers of the West: First, because they are represented as very numerous, powerful and mighty:—'Thou shalt ascend, and come like a storm, Thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, Thou and all thy bands and many people with thee' (Ezekiel, 38:9). 'Gog and Magog... the number of whom is as the sand of the sea' (Rev. 20:8). 'Every feathered fowl, and every beast of the field is thus addressed, ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth' (Ezekiel 39:18, 19). Secondly, they are shown coming forth from the northern parts of the earth, and from the isles:—'And thou (O Gog) shalt come from thy place out of the disorder in the earth; shall we then pay thee tribute on condition that thou set up a barrier[1729] between us and them?'

وَمَأْجُوجَ مُفْسِدُونَ فِي الْأَرْضِ فَهَلْ نَجْعَلُ لَكَ خَرْجًا عَلَىٰ أَنْ تَجْعَلَ بَيْنَنَا وَبَيْنَهُمْ سَدًّا ﴿٩٤﴾

north, thou and many people with thee' (Ezekiel 38:15). Thirdly, they will spread all over the world:—'They went up on the breadth of the earth' (Rev. 20:9). Fourthly, from their home in the north, they will migrate to other lands and settle in all the four corners of the earth and in time of war they will gather together from their distant colonies: 'satan... shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle' (Rev. 20:8). The Book of Ezekiel mentions Gog as 'Prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal,' evidently Rosh standing for Russia, Meshech for Moscow and Tubal for Tobolsk. Gog is also spoken of as 'of the land of Magog' (Ezekiel, 38:2), and Magog, according to the commentators of the Bible, represents the regions which of old went by the name of Scythia (including Russia and Tartary), from which in the past issued many hordes of barbarians. As Russia was included in the land of Magog; Rosh, Meshech and Tubal may be taken as standing for Russia, Moscow and Tobolsk. Magog has also been spoken of as the name of a people in Ezekiel, 39:6 and in Rev. 20:8. In the former, Magog has been mentioned along with those 'that dwell carelessly in the isles.' According to these passages Gog and Magog represent some of the great Powers of Europe, including Russia. In the Qur'ān (18:95) they have been spoken of as making raids into territories on the northern border of Iran, which signifies that they were the tribes generally known as Scythians. It is a known historical fact that in olden times the Scythians continued to move in large bodies from Asia into Europe, their route lying north of the Caucasus (Enc. Brit. vol. 12, p. 263, 14th Edit.). As one horde settled down in Europe, new hordes came forth from the East, pushing their predecessors further and further West. Thus the nations of Europe have been legitimately called Gog and Magog in the biblical prophecy. It is curious that the memory of two heroes named Gog and Magog is preserved to this day in Guild Hall (London) in the form of two statues. Again from Ezekiel and Revelation it appears that Gog and Magog were to make their appearance in the Latter Days, i.e. in the time just before the Second Coming of the Messiah: 'After many years thou shalt be visited in the latter years, thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword' (Ezekiel, 38:16. See also Rev., 20:7-10). These verses show that this prophecy refers to a people who were to appear in the distant future. The age in which Gog and Magog were to make their appearance was to be marked by wars, earthquakes, pestilences and terrible catastrophes. (See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1718-1720).

1729 The Scythians or Gog and Magog occupied territories to the north and northeast of the Black Sea and they came from these regions through the pass of Darband and invaded and conquered and ruled over the Persians. Cyrus defeated them and delivered the Persians from their clutches (Historians' History of the World). Exactly, at the place which, according to Herodotus, was the pass through which the Scythians made raids upon Persia stood a wall, the famous Wall of Derbent.

قَالَ مَا مَكَّنِّيْ فِيْهِ رَبِّيْ خَيْرٌ فَاَعِيْنُوْنِيْ بِقُوَّةٍ اَجْعَلْ بَيْنَكُمْ وَبَيْنَهُمْ رَدْمًا ﴿٩٦﴾

> Derbent or Darband, a town of Persia, Caucasia, in the province of Daghestan, on the western shore of the Caspian... And to the south lies the seaward extremity of the Caucasian wall, 50 miles long otherwise known as Alexander's Wall, blocking the narrow pass of the Iron Gate or the Caspian Gate. This, when entire, had a height of 29 feet and a thickness of about 10 feet, and with its iron gates and numerous watch-towers formed a veritable defence of the Persian Frontier (Enc. Brit. under "Derbent").

Against established historical data it is popularly believed that the Wall was built by Alexander the Great. But Alexander's military expeditions were like a whirlwind amidst which he could not attend to any vast project as the building of such a huge wall, nor did his death at a very early age leave him time for such a grand undertaking. The popular notion seems to have arisen from the fact that Muslim Commentators of the Qur'ān mistook Dhul-Qarnain for Alexander. The following circumstantial evidence shows that Cyrus built it;

(a) In order to break the power of the Scythians, Darius, who ascended the throne after the death of the son of Cyrus, passed through Greece and attacked them from across Europe. It is inconceivable that he should have undertaken such a long, arduous and roundabout journey to attack these people from across south-east Europe when they lived very near him in the north. The inevitable conclusion is that the existence of a huge wall which only Cyrus could have built before him had made it impossible for him to cross over to the other side with a large force, leaving his own country exposed to their attacks from across north, if there was no wall to bar their way.

(b) The fact, that before the time of Cyrus the Scythians made constant and uninterrupted raids upon Persia but after his conquests these raids completely ceased, leads to the very probable conclusion that he must have set up a barrier which effectively checked these attacks and that the barrier must be the famous wall at Derbent, mistakenly known as Alexander's Wall.

1730. Cyrus told the inhabitants of the place to provide him with human labour, Quwwah meaning physical strength, i.e. human labour.

1731. In addition to human labour Cyrus demanded iron and molten copper from the local people. Copper, unlike iron, does not rust and when it is mixed with iron the mixture becomes harder still and defies rusting and corrosion. The engineering and technical skill were supplied by the technicians of Cyrus.

1731A. The rampart was built between the Caspian Sea and the Caucasus range.

1732. When the building of the wall was completed, the raids of Gog and Magog from the north ceased. The wall was too thick to be broken through and too high to be scaled. It was 29 feet high and 10 feet thick (Enc. Brit.) and had iron gates and watch-towers. It most effectively defended the Persian frontier.

1733. Cyrus must have been informed by revelation that sometime in future the promise of my Lord is certainly true.'

Gog and Magog would again spread to the south-east and this wall would then fail to retard or check their progress. This may be the significance of the words, 'He will break it.' In 21:97 we are told that Gog and Magog would spread their tentacles all over the world. Metaphorically, the 'breaking of the wall' may mean the decline of the political power of Islām, particularly of the Turks in Europe. With the weakening of the Turkish power the way for Christian nations of Europe to conquer the East was made clear.

1734. At the time of the rise to power of Gog and Magog all the peoples of the world will come together and the whole world will become united like one country. And according to the Bible, nation shall fight against nation and kingdom against kingdom and malice, hatred and iniquity will abound. The reference seems to be to the present age. A veritable hell was let loose upon the world in the last two World Wars and human imagination shudders at the destruction that the Third World War will cause. According to Ezekiel (chaps. 38 & 39) the U.S.S.R. is Gog and the Western nations are Magog. Even now they are preparing for Armageddon.

1736. Christian nations of the West boast of their great inventions and scientific discoveries and seem to labour under the misconception that they have succeeded in fathoming the secrets of creation itself. This is but a vain boast. God's secrets are so inexhaustible and unfathomable that what these people have discovered and what they will discover hereafter by all their strivings will not be even like a drop in the ocean.

1737. The Holy Prophet is reported to have said that the recitation of the first and last ten verses of this Sūrah makes one secure against the spiritual onslaughts of the Dajjāl. This shows that the Dajjāl and Gog and Magog are one and the same people—Christian nations of the West—the Dajjāl representing their pernicious religious propaganda against Islām, and Gog and Magog their material and political power and predominance.

CHAPTER 19

MARYAM

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

Consensus of opinion among the Companions of the Holy Prophet is that the Sūrah was revealed very early at Mecca, probably towards the end of the fourth year of the Call, before the Emigration to Abyssinia which took place in the month of Rajab in the fifth year. Its connection with Chapters Banī Isrā'īl and Al-Kahf consists in the fact that some account of the rise and progress of the Jews and Christians was given in these two Chapters. In Banī Isrā'īl it was particularly stated that the Jews would suffer national eclipse twice and twice they would rise to power and glory, and that the followers of Islām would, like the Jews, also rise to power twice and twice like them they would decline and fall. In Sūrah Al-Kahf the same subject was dealt with at greater length, specially the part dealing with Christians. After it had been explained in that Sūrah that Muslims would sustain national disaster at the hands of the followers of the Messiah of the Mosaic Dispensation and would regain their lost glory under the lead and guidance of the Messiah of the Islamic Dispensation, a brief history of the Christian Faith is given in the present Sūrah. The Sūrah thus constitutes a third link in the chain in which Chapters Banī Isrā'īl and Al-Kahf respectively form the first and second link. In fact, the three Chapters deal with the same subject and follow the same pattern in dealing with that subject.

Subject-Matter

In the abbreviated letters at the head of the Sūrah a comparison has been instituted between Christian and Islamic doctrines and attention has been drawn to the fact that while originally Christianity was a Divine Dispensation, subsequently some false doctrines and dogmas found their way into its teaching. As these doctrines run counter to Divine attributes, a brief account of Jesus's birth has been given to refute them. This account is preceded by a brief mention of Prophet Zachariah, because according to biblical prophecies Prophet Elijah was to have descended from heaven 'before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord' (Mal. 4:5); and Jesus on being asked by the Jews about Elijah, who was to have appeared before him, answered that he was John who had come in his power and spirit (Matt. 11:14, 15; 17:12; Mark 9:13). He also told them that Elijah was not to have come from heaven but like all mortals was to have been born of an earthly mother in the form of another man and that he was John (Matt. 11:11; Luke 7:28).

While giving an account of Jesus, the Sūrah refers to the unusual manner of his birth without the agency of a human father. The procedure adopted to bring about this most extraordinary consummation implied that Prophethood was now going to be transferred from the House of Isaac to that of Ishmael, since there had remained among the Israelites no male from whose loins a Prophet of God should have been born. After this the Sūrah reinforces the argument against the godhead of Jesus by stating that if all the Prophets from Adam down to the last Israelite Prophet before Jesus, to whom a brief reference is made in the Sūrah, were mere human beings, why should Jesus, who was also only a Prophet of God, be invested with Divine attributes and be regarded as God or Son of God. As Resurrection and Life after death were to be widely denied in the Latter Days by Christians with whom the Sūrah particularly deals, much stress has also been laid on the Hereafter, and stale and hackneyed arguments of disbelievers against it exposed and refuted. The disbelievers, the Sūrah says, seem to derive false comfort from their wealth, material means and large numbers and adduce these things as an argument in support of their denial of the Life after death and of their belief that what really matters is the present life. They are warned that they should not be deceived by the apparent material weakness of believers and of their own power, wealth and vast resources since Truth always progresses gradually and in stages but most surely it does triumph in the end. The Sūrah ends with an answer to an implied question, viz. why Arabic has been adopted as a vehicle for the revelation of the Quranic teaching. The answer given is: Since the Arabs are the first addressees of the Qur'ān, and it is natural and also sensible that a Message should be addressed to a people in their own tongue in order that they should easily understand it and having understood it should convey it to others; therefore the Qur'ān has been revealed in Arabic.

1738. According to Umm-e-Hāni’, the Holy Prophet said that in the combined letters Kāf Hā Yā ‘Ain Ṣād, Kāf stands for Kāfin (All-Sufficient), Hā for Hādī (True Guide), ‘Ain for ‘Alīm (All-Knowing) and Ṣād for Ṣādiq (Truthful), and thus the combined abbreviated letters would read something like this: Anta Kāfin Anta Hādin Yā ‘Alīmu Yā Ṣādiqu, i.e. Thou art Sufficient for all and Thou art the True Guide, O All-Knowing, Truthful God. The four Divine attributes as represented by these combined letters expose and repudiate the basic Christian doctrine of atonement; and if this doctrine is proved to be false, the whole structure of the doctrines of the trinity and godhead of Jesus would automatically fall to the ground. Of these four attributes ‘Alīm and Ṣādiq are the principal and basic attributes and Kāfin and Hādin are subordinate ones and flow from the former two attributes and are their inevitable manifestations and result. If God is ‘Alīm (All-Knowing), then there is no place for the dogma of atonement, because this dogma presupposes that God had designed to carry on the business of the world according to a certain plan, but His knowledge being defective that plan had miscarried and, therefore, He was compelled to offer His own son as sacrifice to save the world. The failure of God’s plan contradicts His attribute 'All-Knowing,' and when God’s knowledge is shown to be defective, He cannot claim to be Kāfin (All-Sufficient), because the Being Who is ‘Alīm (All-Knowing) must necessarily be Kāfin (All-Sufficient). In the same way the attribute Ṣādiq (Truthful) and its subordinate attribute Hādī (Guide) demolish this dogma. If God is not the true Guide and salvation without belief in the vicarious sacrifice of Jesus is impossible, then all Divine Messengers will have to be accepted as so many liars and cheats because, contrary to Christian belief, they preached and taught that salvation was possible only through right beliefs and righteous actions; and a reflection on the truthfulness of God’s Messengers constitutes a reflection on the truthfulness of God Himself and consequently on His being Hādī, i.e. the True Guide. Thus in this combination of abbreviated letters a hint is given that in dealing with the beliefs and doctrines of Christians the best way to drive home to them the untenability of these doctrines is to dwell and lay emphasis upon Divine attributes, particularly on these four attributes. For a detailed discussion on Muqaṭṭa‘āt see 16.

1739. The account of Zachariah precedes that of Jesus, because Yaḥyā, (John the Baptist), the son of Zachariah, was the harbinger of Jesus. He heralded Jesus's advent to give to the Jews the glad tidings that their deliverer was about to make his appearance (Mal. 4:5). As according to Malachi's prophecy Elias should have come before the coming of Jesus, it was in the fitness of things that while giving an account of Jesus, the Qur'ān should have made a mention of Yaḥyā (John) who came in the spirit and power of Elijah.

1740. Zachariah had understood from biblical prophecies and heavenly warnings that were administered to the Jews because of their repeated rejection of God's Prophets that Prophethood was soon to be transferred from the House of Isaac to that of Ishmael. So he gave vent to his feelings in the form of a prayer for the birth of a righteous son.

1741. The prayer of Zachariah possesses all the ingredients of a complete and successful prayer. A successful prayer should be offered with fervour and in humility. The supplicant should confess his own weakness and helplessness. He should have firm faith in the power of God to accept his prayers. Zachariah's prayer fulfils all these conditions.

1742. Samiyy means, competitor or contender for superiority in eminence or glory or excellence; a like or an equal; a namesake of another (Lane). The verse does not mean that there had lived before Yaḥyā (John) no man who was his namesake. From the Bible itself it appears that there had been several persons before him who were called John (II Kings, 25:23; I Chronicles, 3:15; Ezra, 8:12). Nor does it mean that John was peerless and unequalled in every respect. He himself confesses that 'there cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose' (Mark, 1:7). The verse only signifies that Yaḥyā or John was peerless in this respect that he was the first Prophet to come as a precursor to another Prophet—Jesus. And he was peerless in this respect also that he was the first Prophet who came with the power and spirit of another Prophet—Elijah.

1743. The verse expresses Zachariah's innocent and spontaneous surprise at the greatness of the favour which God was about to bestow upon him. Every person, situated as Zachariah was, would be naturally surprised at the unusual glad tidings that he had received.

1744. The commandment enjoining upon Zachariah to abstain from talking and to devote himself fully to the remembrance and glorification of God was a spiritual measure calculated to recuperate his exhausted physical powers. He had not become deprived of his power of speech, as the Gospels seem to suggest, as a punishment for his not believing in the words of God (Luke 1:20-22).

1745. Auḥā ilā fulānin means, he communicated to such a one or gave order or made a request by gesture or sign, or he talked to him in such a way that others could not hear him (Aqrab). In 3:42 the word Ramz, which means to communicate by means of movements of the lips and not by using one's throat, has been used to express the same sense.

progress. Large numbers of people from every religion—especially from Christianity—entered its fold. They brought with them their erroneous beliefs about Jesus. As they had not imbibed fully the true spirit of Islamic teachings, their false ideas and beliefs subsequently found their way into Muslim religious literature with the result that subsequently they came to form part of Muslim beliefs. All these beliefs had been invented to invest Jesus with an extraordinary personality—a personality much above human level. It is these foolish beliefs about Jesus that the Qur'ān seeks to demolish in the present Sūrah. By instituting a comparison between Yaḥyā and Jesus, this Sūrah and the Sūrah Āl-e-'Imrān mean to suggest that there was nothing in Jesus which distinguished him from other Divine Messengers. See "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1565.

1747. It seems relevant and necessary to mention, as a prelude to the somewhat detailed account of Jesus's fatherless birth as given in the next several verses, some facts related about Mary in the Qur'ān and the New Testament. The New Testament sheds practically no light on the life of Mary before she became pregnant. The Gospels of Matthew and Luke give an extremely brief and discursive description of her circumstances before the above important event took place while Mark and John are completely silent over it. According to Matthew, Mary, on being married to Joseph, was found to be with child. Joseph intended secretly to put her away but was refrained from taking this extreme step by an angel saying to him in a dream, 'Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife' (Matt. 1:19, 20). The Qur'ān, however, gives a much more detailed account of Mary's family, the circumstances that attended her birth, the vow of her mother, of her being dedicated to the service of the Church and lastly of her having conceived Jesus (3:36, 37, 48). The present Sūrah, however, gives a still more detailed account of Mary having conceived Jesus and of what happened to her and to Jesus after his birth and after he was commissioned with Divine mission, thus providing all necessary details about Mary that have any bearing on the important subject of Prophethood which was about to be transferred from the House of Israel to that of Ishmael and which forms the principal thesis of the present Sūrah. Special mention has been made here of 'an eastern place' in the verse, in order, perhaps to point to the time-honoured customs of the Jews to hold the East sacred. Both the Jews and the Christians hold the East in special respect. They build their places of worship facing the East.

1748. For the different meanings of Rūḥ see [712].

1749. The expression signifies that the Divine glad tidings about the birth of a great son was not conveyed to Mary in the form of spoken words which she could hear; it took the form of a dream or vision. In a vision an angel came to her in the form of a healthy man and conveyed to her the Divine Message about the birth of a son. So it was no spirit that had entered Mary's body, but only an angel appeared to her in a vision in the form of a man.

1750. As is apparent from the previous verse it was a mere vision which Mary had seen; and it generally happens that when a person sees a thing in a vision which he does not like in his waking state, he does not like it either when he sees it in a vision. When Mary saw the angel standing before her in the form of a man she, being a virtuous young woman, was naturally frightened and perplexed as she would have been frightened and perplexed if she had seen him near her in her state of wakefulness, and it is, therefore, quite natural that she sought Divine protection from him.

1751. The word 'messenger' shows that the angel was only the bearer of a Divine message and that he had not come to give Mary a son but only the glad tidings about the birth of a son. Who does not know that it is God Who can bestow a son and not an angel? An angel's mission is confined only to conveying the wish and decree of God.

1752. The incident referred to in this and the preceding verses took place in

قَالَ كَذٰلِكِ ۚ قَالَ رَبُّكِ هُوَ عَلَيَّ هَيِّنٌ ۚ وَلِنَجْعَلَهٗۤ اٰيَةً لِّلنَّاسِ وَ رَحْمَةً مِّنَّا ۚ وَكَانَ اَمْرًا مَّقْضِيًّا ﴿۲۲﴾

22. [a]The angel said, 'Thus it shall be.' But says thy Lord, 'It is easy for Me; and We shall do so that We may make him a Sign[1753] unto men, and a mercy from Us, and it is a thing decreed.'[1754]

a vision, and in a vision or dream a person experiences different kinds of sensations on different occasions. Sometimes his feelings and talk in the dream are subject to and under the effect of the dream while at another time they are not and he feels and talks as he would feel and talk if he were awake. For example, if in a dream a person is glad over the death of his son, his feelings will be regarded as under the effect of the dream because in his state of wakefulness no normal person would be glad over the death of his son. So if the words spoken by Mary when she saw the angel in her vision were under the effect of the vision, then they would signify that when the glad tidings was given to her she had a pleasant surprise whether God would work such a miracle as to give her—a virgin—a son. But if the words be regarded as a natural expression on her part when the tidings of the birth of a son was given to her, then they would signify that she was completely perplexed and horror-struck at the thought that a son should be born to her—a virgin. In the former case hers would be a very pleasant surprise at the great favour that God was going to do her, and in the latter case it would be an expression of bewilderment indicating the horrified state of her mind.

Whereas the words, no man has touched me, show that Mary thought that the glad tidings meant that she would have a child without contracting a legal marriage, otherwise there was no sense in her denial to have known any man in a married state, the words, neither have I been unchaste, refer to her denial to have known any man outside legal wedlock. In her reply to the angel she seemed to be thinking of her vow of celibacy which obviated the possibility of her having any offspring. If she thought that the promise made in the preceding verse referred to the birth of a son as a result of her conjugal relations in some future time, as some Commentators of the Qur'ān think, then there was no occasion for her to express any surprise.

1753. The expression, that We may make him a Sign unto men, implies the fatherless birth of Jesus which was indeed a great Sign for the Israelites. It pointed to the impending transition of Prophethood from the House of Israel to that of Ishmael and constituted a warning to the Israelites that they had become spiritually so corrupt and morally so degenerate that no male among them was fit enough to become the father of a Prophet of God. It is in this sense that Jesus has also been spoken of as 'a Sign of the Hour' in the Qur'ān (43:62), i.e. a Sign of the time when Prophethood was to have passed from the Israelites to the Ishmaelites.

1754. The expression, and it is a thing decreed, means that God had decreed that a fatherless son would be born to Mary and that this Divine decree was irrevocable. The Qur'ān has used two words Qadar and Qaḍā' to express the sense of Divine decree. The former word means designing or determining, while the latter means decreeing. When a scheme or plan is only designed to be put into execution, it is called Qadar, and when it is decreed by God that it should be carried into effect, it is named Qaḍā'. The fatherless birth of Jesus was a Qaḍā' (decree) of God.

فَحَمَلَتْهُ فَانْتَبَذَتْ بِهٖ مَكَانًا قَصِيًّا ﴿٢٣﴾

23. So she conceived[1755] him, and withdrew with him to a remote place.[1756]

1755. How Mary came to conceive Jesus without the agency of a husband is one of those Divine secrets which at present may be considered beyond human intellect to fathom. It may be regarded as above the ordinary natural law as we now know it. But the knowledge of man, at best, is limited. He has not been able to comprehend all Divine secrets. There are mysteries in nature which man has not been able to solve as yet; perhaps he may never be able to solve them. Among them may be included the fatherless birth of Jesus. God's ways are inscrutable and His powers limitless. He Who could create the whole universe by the word, Kun (be), surely can bring about such changes in matter as should make this apparently insoluble mystery yield to a solution. Moreover, medical science has not altogether ruled out the possibility, from a purely biological standpoint, under certain conditions of natural parthenogenesis or the production of a child by a female without any relation to a male. Medical men call attention to this possibility as a result of a certain type of tumours, which are occasionally found in the female pelvis or lower body. These tumours which are known as arrhenoblastoma are capable of generating male sperm-cells. If living male sperm-cells are produced in a female body by arrhenoblastoma the possibility of self-fertilization of a woman, even though virgin, cannot be denied. That is to say, her own body would produce the same result as though sperm-cells from a male's body had been transferred to hers in the usual way, or by a physician's aid. Recently a group of gynaecologists in Europe have published data to prove instances of childbirth where the mother had had no contact with a male (Lancet). Jesus's birth is perhaps not altogether unique in this respect that he was born without the agency of a father. Cases are on record of children having been born without fathers (Enc. Brit. under "Virgin Birth" and "Anomalies and Curiosities of Medicine," published by W. B. Saunders & Co., London). If we dismiss all these possibilities, then Jesus's birth will have to be regarded, God forbid, as illegitimate. Christians and Jews are both agreed that the birth of Jesus was something out of the ordinary—the Christians holding it as supernatural and the Jews as illegitimate (Jew. Enc.). Even in the family birth register the birth of Jesus was recorded as such (Talmud). This fact alone should constitute a valid proof of Jesus's birth being out of the ordinary. Joseph, Mary's husband, according to the Gospels, had not established conjugal relations with her till after the birth of Jesus (Matt. 1:25). So the words, 'she conceived him,' refer to this extraordinary conception of Mary without the agency of a male.

1756. 'A remote place,' refers to Bethlehem which is about seventy miles

فَاَجَآءَهَا الْمَخَاضُ اِلٰى جِذْعِ النَّخْلَةِ ۚ قَالَتْ يٰلَيْتَنِيْ مِتُّ قَبْلَ هٰذَا وَكُنْتُ نَسْيًا مَّنْسِيًّا ﴿٢٤﴾

24. And the pains of child-birth drove her unto the trunk of a palm-tree.[1757] She said, 'O, would that I had died before this and had become a thing quite forgotten!'

فَنَادٰىهَا مِنْ تَحْتِهَآ اَلَّا تَحْزَنِيْ قَدْ جَعَلَ رَبُّكِ تَحْتَكِ سَرِيًّا ﴿٢٥﴾

25. Then the angel called her from beneath[1758] her, saying, 'Grieve not. Thy Lord has placed a rivulet below thee;

26. 'And shake towards thyself the trunk of the palm-tree; it will drop upon thee fresh ripe dates;[1759] from Nazareth to the south. There Joseph took Mary sometime before Jesus's birth which took place in that town.

1757. As it appears from the Gospels, there was no room in the inn in which Jesus was born in Bethlehem. Joseph and Mary must have stayed in the open field and Mary might have betaken herself to the trunk of a palm tree in order to take rest under its shade and possibly also to find some support in her throes of childbirth.

1758. The word taḥt also meaning the slope and declivity of a mountain (Lane), the verse signifies that the voice came to Mary from the side of the slope of the mountain. As a matter of fact Bethlehem is situated on a rock 2350 ft. above sea level and is surrounded by very fertile valleys. There are fountains in this rock, one of which is known as the "Fountain of Solomon." Another fountain is situated at a distance of about 800 yards to the south-east of the town. From these fountains water is supplied to the town of Bethlehem.

1759. According to this verse the birth of Jesus took place at a time when fresh dates are found on palm trees in Judaea. That season evidently is in the months of August-September, but, according to the view generally held by Christians, Jesus was born on 25th December which day is celebrated all over the Christian world every year with great fervour. Now this Christian view is contradicted not only by the Qur'ān but also by history and even by the New Testament itself. Writing about the time of Jesus's birth Luke says: 'And there were shepherds in the same country (Judaea) abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flocks' (Luke 2:7, 8). Commenting on this statement of Luke, Bishop Barns in his famous book, "The Rise of Christianity," on page 79 says: "There is, moreover, no authority for the belief that December 25 was the actual birthday of Jesus. If we can give any credence to the birth-story of Luke, with the shepherds keeping watch by night in the fields near Bethlehem, the birth of Jesus did not take place in winter when the night temperature is so low in the hill country of Judaea that snow is not uncommon. After much argument our Christmas day seems to have been accepted about A.D. 300.' This view of Bishop Barns is supported by Encyclopedia Britannica and Chambers Encyclopedia (under "Christmas"):

> The exact day and year of Christ's birth have never been satisfactorily settled; but when the fathers of the Church in A.D. 340 decided upon a date to celebrate the event, they wisely chose the day of the winter solstice which was firmly fixed in the minds of the people and which was their most important festival. Owing to changes in man-made calendars, the time of the solstice and the date of Christmas day vary by a few days (Enc. Brit. 15th edition, vol. 5, pp. 642 & 642A)… In the second place the winter solstice was regarded as the birthday of the sun, and at Rome 25th December was observed as a pagan festival of the nativity of Sol-invictus. The Church, unable to stamp out this popular festival, spiritualized it as the feast of the Nativity of the Sun of Righteousness (Ch. Enc.).

These statements of the two Encyclopedias are further supported by Peake's "Commentary on the Bible." In this book on page 727, Peake says: 'The season (of Jesus's birth) would not be December; our Christmas day is a comparatively late tradition found first in the West.' Thus recent historical research into the origins of Christianity has established the fact beyond any reasonable doubt that Jesus was not born in December. In his "Dictionary of the Bible" Dr. John D. Davis, under the word "Year" writes that dates become ripe in the Jewish month of Elul; and in Peake's "Commentary on the Bible" (page, 117) we have that the month of Elul corresponds to the months of August-September. Furthermore, Dr. Peake says, "J. Stewart in his book 'When did our Lord actually live?' arguing from an Angora temple inscription and a quotation in an old Chinese classic which speaks of the Gospel story reaching China, A.D. 25-28, puts the birth of Jesus in 8 B.C. (Sept. or Oct.) and the Crucifixion on Wednesday in A.D. 24." From the above statements of the two Encyclopedias supported by quotations from the "Commentary on the Bible" by Dr. Arthur S. Peake, M.A., D.D., the fact becomes quite clear that Jesus was born in the Jewish month of Elul which corresponds to the months of August-September when dates ripen in Judaea, and not on 25th December as the Christian Church would have us believe. And that is the view which is expressed by the Qur'ān. In fact, the whole trouble of fixing the date of Jesus's birth seems to have arisen from a confusion of the date of Mary's conception. The pregnancy of Mary seemed to have taken place sometime in November or December and not in March or April as the Church historians believe. When after four or five months' conception pregnancy became too obvious to be concealed any longer, Joseph was prevailed upon to take Mary to his house in the month of March or April of the next year. Thus Christian historians mistake the date when Joseph took Mary to his house—in the month of March or April—for the date of her conception which had taken place four or five months earlier.

28. Then she brought him to her people, mounted.[1761] They said, 'O Mary, surely, thou hast committed a monstrous thing![1762]

It also appears from the present verse that Mary was lying in a sheltered place in the upper part of the hill and the date palm was standing on the slope, and therefore she could easily reach to its trunk and shake it. That the territory of Bethlehem abounded in date palms is clear from the Bible (Judges, 1:16) and from "A Dictionary of the Bible" by Dr. John D. Davis, D.D. Moreover, the fact of Mary having been guided to a fountain, as mentioned in the preceding verse, in order to drink of its water and wash herself, points to Jesus's birth having taken place in the month of August-September because in the icy cold weather of Judaea in December Mary could not have washed herself in the open. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1573-1576.

1760. The command to abstain from useless talk was meant, on the one hand, to conserve her physical strength and, on the other, to give her more time to devote to remembrance of God.

1761. For this meaning of the word see 9:92. It appears from the Gospels that after Jesus's birth at Bethlehem, in pursuance of a Divine command Joseph had taken him and Mary to Egypt where they lived for some years and it was after the death of Herod that the family came back to Nazareth and dwelt there (Matt. 2:13-23). There was also a biblical prophecy to the effect that Jesus would come to his people along with his mother riding on an ass (Matt. 21:4-7). Jesus and Mary were actually riding on asses when they entered Jerusalem. The expression, Taḥmilu-hū, may possibly refer to that prophecy of the Bible. The verse refers to the time when Jesus had already attained Prophethood as is clear from vv. 31-34.

1762. Farīyy also means, a forger of lies (Lane). By using this word the elders of the Jews insinuated that Mary was a bad woman and Jesus a forger of lies and a false prophet.

يٰٓاُخْتَ هٰرُوْنَ مَا كَانَ اَبُوْكِ امْرَاَ سَوْءٍ وَّمَا كَانَتْ اُمُّكِ بَغِيًّا ﴿٢٩﴾

29. 'O sister of Aaron,[1763] thy father was not a wicked man, nor was thy mother an unchaste woman!'

فَاَشَارَتْ اِلَيْهِ ؕ قَالُوْا كَيْفَ نُكَلِّمُ مَنْ كَانَ فِي الْمَهْدِ صَبِيًّا ﴿٣٠﴾

30. Thereupon she pointed to him.[1764] They said, 'How can we talk to one who is a child in the cradle?'[1765]

1763. The question of Mary having been called the sister of Aaron in the Qur'ān was put before the Holy Prophet himself and he asked the questioner if he did not know that the Israelites used to name their children after their Prophets and saints (Bayān, vol. 6, p. 16; Jarīr, vol. 16, p. 52). Mary has been here called the sister of Aaron and not that of Moses though both were brothers, for, whereas Moses was the founder of the Jewish Law, Aaron was the head of the Jewish priestly class (Enc. Bib. & Enc. Brit. under "Aaron"), and Mary also belonged to the priestly order. Ṭabarī has related an incident from the life of the Holy Prophet which gives an insight into the meanings of such Arabic words as ab, 'am, ukht, etc. When Ṣafiyyah, the Holy Prophet's wife, and incidentally a Jewess by descent, once complained to the Holy Prophet that some of his other wives had called her a Jewess in contempt, the Holy Prophet told her to return the taunt by saying that Aaron was her father, Moses her uncle and Muḥammad her husband. Now, the Holy Prophet certainly knew that Aaron was not Ṣafiyyah's father nor Moses her uncle. A reference to this accusation is also to be found in the Qur'ān in 33:70. The elders of the Jews, by calling Jesus's mother "sister of Aaron" might have meant that as Mary, the sister of Aaron, had, by accusing Moses of unlawfully marrying a woman, committed a heinous crime (a reference to this accusation is to be found in 33:70), so did she, like her namesake, commit a heinous act of giving birth to an illegitimate child. See also 401.

1764. The words 'she pointed to him' indicate that Mary knew what answer Jesus would give if the elders of the Jews addressed their question to him. These words may also indicate that Mary knew that if she declared herself innocent nobody would believe her. The only evidence of her innocence was her son. She meant that such a holy and righteous son whom God had endowed with such noble qualities could not be the result of an immoral union and that his virtues and good qualities by themselves constituted a sufficient vindication of her innocence. So she pointed to him.

1765. The verse presents no difficulty. When Mary, on being taunted by the elders of the Jews, directed their attention to Jesus, they disdained to talk to him and contemptuously said, how could they talk to 'a child in the cradle' meaning a mere boy, who was born and brought up before their very eyes? Elderly people are wont to talk like that when invited to learn wisdom from one who is much younger to them in age. The words merely constitute an expression of contempt and disdain for Jesus. See also 3:47.

1766. The talk which Jesus gave to the elders of the Jews and which is contained in these verses (31-34) could not possibly be the talk of a child. All these affirmations from the lips of a child sound like so many lies; and who would call these lies a miracle? Jesus was neither a Prophet at that time, nor did he say Prayer or give Zakāt or was given a Book. Moreover, in 3:47 this miracle is mentioned as Jesus having spoken to the people in the cradle and when of middle age. But talk by a man in middle age is no miracle; and by joining the word 'cradle' with the words 'of middle age,' the Qur'ān implies that the talk of Jesus in 'the cradle' and when he was 'of middle age' was no miracle in the sense in which it is popularly understood, but that it was a miracle in the sense that he spoke words of exceptional wisdom and intelligence in childhood as well as in middle age. The joining of these two sets of words also implied a prophecy that Jesus would not die young but would live up to a ripe old age. The prophecy did constitute a real miracle. But if the word Mahd is taken in the sense of 'period of preparation' which is also one of the meanings of this word, then verse (3:47) would mean that Jesus would speak to people words full of extraordinary wisdom and spiritual knowledge much beyond his years and experience, both in the period of preparation which is youth and in his middle age.

1767. The expression "Ibn-e-Maryam" is Jesus's distinctive name. Whereas, on the one hand, it seems to imply his fatherless birth, on the other it confers on him a name which is incapable of being confused with that of anybody else. The Gospels have used for Jesus the epithet "Ibn-e-Ādam" (son of man) also but this latter epithet has been used in the Bible for other persons as well. "Son of Mary" is at once a distinctive and descriptive name of Jesus.

1768. Perhaps there is no other individual in religious history concerning whom so many and so far-reaching differences exist as about Jesus, son of Mary. The Jews, the Christians and the Muslims all hold widely different views about Jesus's birth, the manner of his death and about some prominent incidents in his life.

1769. Christians believe that Jesus was God's son. They base this belief on the assumption that the Bible calls him "son of God." But in the Bible other persons have also been called or addressed as "sons of God." Jesus enjoys no special distinction in this respect and he is, therefore, no more a son of God than those persons who have also been addressed as such (Luke, 20:36; Jer., 31:9; Matt., 6:9; John, 8:41 & Ephes., 4:6).

1770. In the Arabic language the word Kun, besides being addressed to a thing, is also used to express a greatly felt desire. In an expedition the Holy Prophet's very brave and loyal Companion, Abū Khaithamah happened to be absent. The Holy Prophet keenly felt his absence. When in the midst of the battle he saw from a great distance a rider coming to him at full speed, he exclaimed Kun Abā Khaithamah, i.e. would that it were Abū Khaithamah; and lo! it was really Abū Khaithamah (Ḥalbiyyah). So the word Kun would signify that when God desires or intends a thing to come into being, it comes into being; or when God expresses such a desire it takes a concrete form. The word lends no support to the view that soul and matter are primeval or coeternal with God.

1771. The verse means to say that the disbelievers' faculties of seeing and hearing will become much keener and sharper on the Day of Judgment, because the veil will then be lifted from their eyes and ears and they will realize that they were in the wrong; but that realization being too late will prove to be of no avail to them.

1772. The verse embodies two prophecies: (a) The Christian people will first come to rule over almost the whole of the earth, and will be dominating it by their large numbers; and (b) as a result of their disbelief they will then be deprived of their dominion which will ultimately be given to the followers of Islām.

1773. "The Book" means the Qur'ān. The Holy Prophet is here directed to relate the story of Abraham as it is given in the Qur'ān and not as it is related in the Bible. Whereas the Qur'ān depicts Abraham as a truthful man, the Bible accuses him of telling lies (Gen. 20:13). The Qur'ān has laid great stress on the truthfulness of Abraham, perhaps because sometime in future, lies were to be attributed to him by some Commentators of the Qur'ān.

1774. 'Ibādah which is noun-infinitive from the verb 'Abada does not consist only in prostrating before God or an idol, but also signifies blindly or unthinkingly following a person or accepting an idea or belief without subjecting it to sane and searching criticism. This latter significance of the word is clear from the verse itself because nobody has ever been seen to worship Satan in the sense that he prostrates before him and prays to him.

1775. In this verse, in fact, in the whole Sūrah, Shirk (idolatry) has been repeatedly denounced and condemned in the strongest and most scathing terms and the Divine attribute Ar-Raḥmān (The Gracious) has also been mentioned again and again, because Shirk (idolatry) in every shape and form is the direct result of the denial of Raḥmāniyyah (Divine Grace).

1777. In this verse Abraham seems to be referring to his emigration to Canaan. He went from Iraq to Canaan and from there to Egypt. He left his father and people behind him in Iraq.

1778. Ishmael has not been mentioned here, though he was the eldest son of Abraham. Isaac and Jacob have been mentioned by the way only as subordinate prophets while Ishmael has found a separate and independent mention in v. 55. This shows that Ishmael possessed a higher spiritual status than both Isaac and Jacob.

them true and lasting renown), mean: (1) They acquired good reputation and were remembered with respect, affection and love by their contemporaries and future generations. (2) Their talk was full of wisdom and intelligence and was free from all sorts of bitterness, obscenity, falsehood and hatred. (3) They were fearless in expressing their beliefs and were hard upon disbelievers and untruthful persons. (4) Their good works constituted and continued as so many monuments and memorials to their good name.

1780. The words, he was a Messenger, a Prophet, explain and remove a popular misconception, viz. that a Rasūl (Messenger) is one who brings a new Law and a new Book and a Nabī (Prophet) is one who is commissioned by God only for the reformation of his people, and though, like a Rasūl, a Nabī receives Divine revelations, yet he brings no Law or Book containing new commandments and ordinances. According to this popular notion every Rasūl (Messenger) is necessarily a Nabī (Prophet) but not every Nabī a Rasūl. The verse under comment demolishes this wrong notion because if a Rasūl (Messenger) is one who brings a new Book and a new Law and as such is necessarily a Nabī (Prophet), then the addition of the word Nabī to the word Rasūl in this and other verses is superfluous and redundant. The fact is that every Rasūl is a Nabī and every Nabī a Rasūl. These two words are interchangeable and represent two aspects of the same office and two functions of the same person. A Divine Reformer is a Rasūl inasmuch as he receives Messages from God (Risālah meaning a message), and he is a Nabī in the sense that he conveys those Messages to the people to whom he is sent (Nubuwwah meaning the conveying of a message). Thus every Rasūl (Messenger) is a Nabī (Prophet) because after receiving Divine Messages he conveys them to his people and every Nabī is a Rasūl because he conveys to his people those Messages which he receives from God. Only the functions of Nabī follow those of Rasūl. In his capacity as Rasūl he first receives Messages from God and then in his capacity as Nabī he conveys them to his people. This is why here and everywhere in the Qur'ān when these two words Rasūl and Nabī occur together, invariably the word Nabī follows the word Rasūl because that is the natural order.

1784. Some Commentators of the Qur'ān think that the words, of the posterity of Adam, refer to Idrīs, and, whom We carried in the Ark with Noah, refer to Abraham, and the words, of the posterity of Abraham, refer to Ishmael, Isaac and Jacob; and the words, of the posterity of, are understood before the word Israel and refer to Moses, Aaron, Zachariah, Yaḥyā and Jesus, all of whom have been mentioned in the preceding verses of the present Sūrah.

1785. In fact, negligence and remissness in observing Prayers make a person ignorant of Divine attributes and kill in him the desire to establish his connection with his Creator which in turn throws him into the clutches of the Devil. And whereas negligence in invoking Divine mercy and in praying to God leads to failure, the pursuit of evil desires results in apathy towards true knowledge and indulgence in obscenities and idle pursuits; and all these things combined together bring about complete moral and spiritual ruin of a person.

1786. The epithet "good deeds" is more applicable to such acts as are done at the proper occasion and suit the exigencies of time than to mere devotional acts, as is generally understood.

جَنّٰتِ عَدْنِ ِالَّتِیْ وَعَدَ الرَّحْمٰنُ عِبَادَهٗ
بِالْغَیْبِ ؕ اِنَّهٗ كَانَ وَعْدُهٗ مَاْتِیًّا ﴿۶۲﴾

62. [a]Gardens of Eternity, which the Gracious God has promised to His servants while they are yet hidden from their sight.[1787] Surely, His promise must come to pass.

لَا یَسْمَعُوْنَ فِیْهَا لَغْوًا اِلَّا سَلٰمًا ؕ وَلَهُمْ
رِزْقُهُمْ فِیْهَا بُكْرَةً وَّعَشِیًّا ﴿۶۳﴾

63. [b]They will not hear therein anything vain but only greetings of peace; they will have their sustenance therein, morning and evening.

تِلْكَ الْجَنَّةُ الَّتِیْ نُوْرِثُ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا
مَنْ كَانَ تَقِیًّا ﴿۶۴﴾

64. [c]Such is the Heaven which We shall give for an inheritance to those of Our servants who are righteous.

وَمَا نَتَنَزَّلُ اِلَّا بِاَمْرِ رَبِّكَ ۚ لَهٗ مَا
بَیْنَ اَیْدِیْنَا وَمَا خَلْفَنَا وَمَا بَیْنَ ذٰلِكَ ۚ
وَمَا كَانَ رَبُّكَ نَسِیًّا ﴿۶۵﴾ ۚ

65. And the angels will say to them, 'We do not come down save by the command of thy Lord. To Him belongs all that is before us and all that is behind us and all that is between; and thy Lord is not forgetful;'

رَبُّ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ وَمَا بَیْنَهُمَا
فَاعْبُدْهُ وَاصْطَبِرْ لِعِبَادَتِهٖ ؕ هَلْ تَعْلَمُ
لَهٗ سَمِیًّا ﴿۶۶﴾ ع ۷

66. He is [d]the Lord of the heavens and the earth and of all that is between the two. Serve Him, therefore, and be steadfast in His service. Dost thou know anyone equal to Him?

[a]9:72; 13:24; 61:13. [b]52:24; 56:26; 78:36. [c]7:44; 43:73; 52:18. [d]37:6; 38:67; 44:8; 78:38.

1787. The expression, Bil Ghaib, may also signify that the Faithful will get "Gardens of Eternity" because they believed in things which they did not see—God, angels, Hereafter, etc.

R. 5.

وَيَقُوْلُ الْاِنْسَانُ ءَاِذَا مَا مِتُّ لَسَوْفَ اُخْرَجُ حَيًّا ﴿٦٧﴾

67. And says man,[1788] [a]'What! when I am dead, shall I be brought forth alive?'

اَوَلَا يَذْكُرُ الْاِنْسَانُ اَنَّا خَلَقْنٰهُ مِنْ قَبْلُ وَلَمْ يَكُ شَيْـًٔا ﴿٦٨﴾

68. Does not man remember that [b]We created him before, when he was nothing?[1789]

فَوَرَبِّكَ لَنَحْشُرَنَّهُمْ وَالشَّيٰطِيْنَ ثُمَّ لَنُحْضِرَنَّهُمْ حَوْلَ جَهَنَّمَ جِثِيًّا ﴿٦٩﴾

69. And, by thy Lord, [c]We shall assuredly gather them together, and the satans too; then shall We bring them on their knees around Hell.[1790]

ثُمَّ لَنَنْزِعَنَّ مِنْ كُلِّ شِيْعَةٍ اَيُّهُمْ اَشَدُّ عَلَى الرَّحْمٰنِ عِتِيًّا ﴿٧٠﴾

70. Then[1791] shall We certainly pick out, from every group, those of them who were most stubborn in rebellion against the Gracious God.

[a]23:38; 36:79. [b]19:10; 76:2. [c]10:29; 17:98; 34:41.

1788. Al-Insān (man) does not here mean man in general but a particular class of men, viz. those unfortunate disbelievers who doubt the existence of the Life after death. In fact, there are very few people in the world who totally deny the existence of the Hereafter. It is not by words of mouth but by their actual actions and deeds—their entire engrossment in material pursuits—that they express their doubt or denial of the Life beyond the grave.

1789. Anything worth mentioning or having any significance or importance. This meaning is supported by 76:2.

1790. In Hebrew, Jahannam is used as Gehenna which in Aramaic originally was 'Hinnom,' but later on came to be changed into "Ge-Hinnom" (Enc. Bib.) which means, 'The valley of death or destruction.' The word may also have been a combination of Jahana which means, he went near, and Jahuma which means, his face became contracted. So Jahannam may also mean a thing or place which a person at first likes but when he goes near it, he comes to dislike it and contracts his face to show his dislike for it. Thus the very construction of the word explains the nature and character of Hell.

1791. Thumma meaning, then, i.e. afterwards, is a particle or conjunction denoting order and delay. Sometimes it is used to denote the order of enunciation, not the virtual order. It also has the meaning of 'and' and 'so' (Lane).

71. And[1792] surely, We know best those deserving[1793] to be burnt therein.

ثُمَّ لَنَحْنُ أَعْلَمُ بِالَّذِينَ هُمْ أَوْلَىٰ بِهَا صِلِيًّا ﴿٧١﴾

72. And [a]there is not one of you[1793A] but will come to it. This is an absolute decree of thy Lord.

وَإِن مِّنكُمْ إِلَّا وَارِدُهَا ۚ كَانَ عَلَىٰ رَبِّكَ حَتْمًا مَّقْضِيًّا ﴿٧٢﴾

[a]21:99.

1792. In this verse, thumma is a conjunction denoting order of enunciation and not proper order, meaning 'and.' The word would signify, 'and We tell you another thing that……'

1793. The words may mean; (a) Those who are more fitted to burn in the fire than to be left out of it; (b) those who are more deserving than others to burn in the fire; (c) those who deserve to be punished more by being thrown into the fire than by any other means.

1793A. The pronoun kum (you) in Minkum is not of general application. It applies, as the context shows, only to the disbelievers and to those who doubt the existence of the Life after death. All these categories of men have been mentioned in the preceding verses. According to Ibn-e-'Abbās and 'Ikrimah, another reading of Minkum (of you) is Minhum (of them) and Ibn-e-'Abbās used to say that the expression Minkum is addressed to disbelievers (Qurṭubī). So it is to disbelievers mentioned in vv. 67-71 that the pronoun kum (you) clearly refers. On the other hand the Qur'ān quite clearly and emphatically supports the view that the righteous believers will never go to Hell; they will ever bask in the sunshine of God's love and mercy (27:90; 39:62; 43:69; etc.) and will remain far removed from the fire of Hell and will not hear even its faintest sound (21:102, 103). But if the pronoun kum (you) be taken to include both the believers and the disbelievers, then in the case of disbelievers the verse would mean that all of them will go to Hell and in the case of believers the fire of Hell referred to in the verse would signify the fire of trials and tribulations through which they have to pass in the present life and which they endure with patience and fortitude and out of which eventually they are taken to be brought into the heaven of Divine bliss and peace as the next verse shows. The Holy Prophet himself has explained the meaning of this verse. His wife Ḥafṣah is reported to have said: 'On one occasion when the Holy Prophet said that none of those of his Companions who had taken part in the Battle of Badr or Uḥud will go to Hell, I drew his attention to the present verse, upon which he slightly reprimanded me for having misunderstood its meaning and directed me to read the next verse' (Muslim, as quoted by Jāmi'ul-Bayān). The fact that the Holy Prophet referred Ḥafṣah to the next verse (v. 73) shows that he also had understood the particle thumma occurring in that verse to mean 'and,' and had taken the next verse as an independent and separate clause, otherwise he could not have reprimanded Ḥafṣah for having misunderstood the meaning of the verse under comment.

ثُمَّ نُنَجِّي الَّذِيْنَ اتَّقَوْا وَّنَذَرُ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ فِيْهَا جِثِيًّا ﴿٧٣﴾

73. [a]And We shall save the righteous and shall leave the wrongdoers therein, on their knees.

وَاِذَا تُتْلٰى عَلَيْهِمْ اٰيٰتُنَا بَيِّنٰتٍ قَالَ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا لِلَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْٓا ۙ اَيُّ الْفَرِيْقَيْنِ خَيْرٌ مَّقَامًا وَّاَحْسَنُ نَدِيًّا ﴿٧٤﴾

74. And when Our manifest Signs[1794] are recited unto them, the disbelievers say to the believers, 'Tell us, which of the two parties is better in respect of position and is more impressive in respect of companions?'

وَكَمْ اَهْلَكْنَا قَبْلَهُمْ مِّنْ قَرْنٍ هُمْ اَحْسَنُ اَثَاثًا وَّرِءْيًا ﴿٧٥﴾

75. And [b]how many a generation have We destroyed before them, who were better off than these in wealth and better in outward show.

قُلْ مَنْ كَانَ فِي الضَّلٰلَةِ فَلْيَمْدُدْ لَهُ الرَّحْمٰنُ مَدًّا ۚ حَتّٰٓى اِذَا رَاَوْا مَا يُوْعَدُوْنَ اِمَّا الْعَذَابَ وَاِمَّا السَّاعَةَ ۭ فَسَيَعْلَمُوْنَ مَنْ هُوَ شَرٌّ مَّكَانًا وَّاَضْعَفُ جُنْدًا ﴿٧٦﴾

76. Say, 'The Gracious God grants those, who are in error, respite for a time [c]until, when they will see that with which they are threatened—whether it be punishment or the final Hour[1795]—they will realize who is worse in respect of position and weaker in forces.'

[a]21:102; 39:62. [b]6:7; 17:18; 19:99; 21:12; 36:32; 50:37. [c]72:25.

1794. Mere 'Signs' are those proofs and arguments based on reason, intellect and experience which point to the existence of a thing, its aim and purpose, and establish it. But 'manifest Signs' are those Signs and arguments or reasons which not only point to the existence of a thing and prove it, but are quite suited to the occasion and to the problem they are intended to prove and which also have a very noble and sublime purpose to serve, that they eminently do.

1795. 'Punishment' here may signify the intervening punishment which will overtake disbelievers in stages before their final destruction, and "final Hour" may signify their complete and final destruction.

وَيَزِيْدُ اللّٰهُ الَّذِيْنَ اهْتَدَوْا هُدًى ؕ وَالْبٰقِيٰتُ الصّٰلِحٰتُ خَيْرٌ عِنْدَ رَبِّكَ ثَوَابًا وَّخَيْرٌ مَّرَدًّا ﴿٧٧﴾

77. [a]And Allāh increases in guidance those who follow guidance. [b]And the good works that endure are best in the Sight of thy Lord in respect of reward and in respect of the ultimate end.'

اَفَرَءَيْتَ الَّذِيْ كَفَرَ بِاٰيٰتِنَا وَقَالَ لَاُوْتَيَنَّ مَالًا وَّوَلَدًا ﴿٧٨﴾ؕ

78. Hast thou not seen him who disbelieves in Our Signs, and says, [c]'I shall certainly be given great wealth and children?'[1796]

اَطَّلَعَ الْغَيْبَ اَمِ اتَّخَذَ عِنْدَ الرَّحْمٰنِ عَهْدًا ﴿٧٩﴾ۙ

79. Has he got knowledge of the unseen or has taken a promise from the Gracious God?

كَلَّا ؕ سَنَكْتُبُ مَا يَقُوْلُ وَنَمُدُّ لَهٗ مِنَ الْعَذَابِ مَدًّا ﴿٨٠﴾ۙ

80. Indeed not![1797] We shall note down what he says and shall greatly prolong for him the punishment.

وَّنَرِثُهٗ مَا يَقُوْلُ وَيَاْتِيْنَا فَرْدًا ﴿٨١﴾

81. And We shall inherit[1798] from him all that he talks of and [d]he shall come to Us all alone.

[a]9:124; 47; 47:18; 48:5. [b]87:18. [c]18:35; 74:13, 14. [d]6:95; 18:49.

1796. The disbeliever sets great store by his wealth and children and takes great pride in them and so do the disbelieving proud nations of the West, with whom the Sūrah particularly deals.

1797. The particle kallā (indeed not) signifies rejection, rebuke; and reprimanding a person for what he has said being untrue. It also signifies that what has been said before is wrong and what follows is right (Lane). The words, 'what he says,' refer to the proud talk in which the disbelievers indulge because of their great wealth, power, influence and children.

1798. The words, We shall inherit from him all that he talks of and he shall come to Us all alone, may mean: he shall have to leave all his wealth and children behind; (a) We shall preserve his insolent talk and will remind him of it when he comes to Us and will punish him for it; and (b) his inheritors will enter the fold of Islām and all his wealth and resources will be used in Our cause.

وَاتَّخَذُوْا مِنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ اٰلِهَةً لِّيَكُوْنُوْا لَهُمْ عِزًّا ﴿٨٢﴾

82. [a]And they have taken other gods than Allāh that they may be a source of honour and power for them.

كَلَّا ؕ سَيَكْفُرُوْنَ بِعِبَادَتِهِمْ وَيَكُوْنُوْنَ عَلَيْهِمْ ضِدًّا ﴿٨٣﴾ ع ١٧ ٨

83. Not at all! [b]They will deny[1799] their worship, and will be their opponents.

R. 6.

84. Seest thou not that [c]We send satans against the disbelievers, inciting them to acts of disobedience?

فَلَا تَعْجَلْ عَلَيْهِمْ ؕ اِنَّمَا نَعُدُّ لَهُمْ عَدًّا ﴿٨٥﴾ ج

85. So be not thou in haste against them; We are keeping full account[1800] of their doings.

يَوْمَ نَحْشُرُ الْمُتَّقِيْنَ اِلَى الرَّحْمٰنِ وَفْدًا ﴿٨٦﴾

86. Remember the day when [d]We shall gather the righteous before the Gracious God as honoured guests;

وَّنَسُوْقُ الْمُجْرِمِيْنَ اِلٰى جَهَنَّمَ وِرْدًا ﴿٨٧﴾ ق ع

87. And [e]We shall drive the guilty to Hell like a herd of thirsty camels.[1801]

لَا يَمْلِكُوْنَ الشَّفَاعَةَ اِلَّا مَنِ اتَّخَذَ

88. [f]None will have the power of intercession save he who

[a]21:25; 36:75. [b]6:24; 10:29. [c]8:49; 47:26; 59:17. [d]39:74. [e]39:72.
[f]2:49; 20:100; 21:29; 34:24; 39:45; 43:87; 53:27; 74:49.

1799. The words may mean: (a) The false deities will deny that the idolaters ever worshipped them; (b) the idolaters will deny that they ever worshipped false deities. For (a) see 2:167; 10:29; 16:87;28:64; and for (b) see 6:24; 30:14.

1800. The verse means; (a) We are keeping full account of their wicked deeds; and (b) We are keeping account of the time when their punishment will be due.

1801. Al-Wird means, (a) coming to or arriving at water; (b) water to which one comes to drink; (c) the turn of coming to water; (d) the number of camels or the herd of thirsty camels (Aqrab). See also 11:99.

has received a promise from the Gracious God.

عِنْدَ الرَّحْمٰنِ عَهْدًا ﴿٨٨﴾

89. [a]And they say, 'The Gracious God has taken unto Himself a son.'

وَقَالُوا اتَّخَذَ الرَّحْمٰنُ وَلَدًا ﴿٨٩﴾

90. Assuredly, you have indeed uttered a most hideous thing.

لَقَدْ جِئْتُمْ شَيْئًا إِدًّا ﴿٩٠﴾

91. The heavens might well-nigh burst thereat, and the earth cleave asunder, and the mountains fall down in pieces.[1802]

تَكَادُ السَّمٰوٰتُ يَتَفَطَّرْنَ مِنْهُ وَتَنْشَقُّ الْأَرْضُ وَتَخِرُّ الْجِبَالُ هَدًّا ﴿٩١﴾

92. Because they ascribe a son to the Gracious God.

أَنْ دَعَوْا لِلرَّحْمٰنِ وَلَدًا ﴿٩٢﴾

93. [b]It becomes not the Gracious God that He should take unto Himself a son.[1803]

وَمَا يَنْبَغِي لِلرَّحْمٰنِ أَنْ يَتَّخِذَ وَلَدًا ﴿٩٣﴾

[a]2:117; 4:172; 6:101,102; 10:69; 17:112; 18:5; 19:36; 21:27; 25:3; 39:5; 43:82.
[b]2:117; 4:172; 10:69; 37:152-155.

1802. The dogma that Jesus is the son of God is so hideous that the heavens, the earth and the mountains might well break into pieces and fall asunder at its enormity. The belief is repugnant to heavenly beings (As-Samāwāt) because it is against Divine attributes and against all that they stand for. It is revolting for human beings living on the earth (al-Arḍ), because it offends against the dictates of human nature and man's intellect and reason recoil in sheer disgust from it. Men of high and noble ideals such as Divine Prophets and God's Elect (al-Jibāl) also deny and denounce it because the idea that man should stand in need of the vicarious sacrifice of anybody for the attainment of salvation and a high moral status runs counter to their own spiritual experience.

1803. The Sūrah contains most emphatic and clear denunciation of Christian dogmas, particularly their basic doctrine that Jesus is son of God, from which all other dogmas flow. In the present and preceding four verses special stress has been laid on the refutation and condemnation of this doctrine. It is worthy of special note that the Divine attribute Ar-Raḥmān has been repeatedly referred to in this Sūrah—it has been mentioned as many as sixteen times. As the fundamental dogma of the sonship of Jesus and its corollary, the dogma of atonement involve a denial of the Divine attribute Ar-Raḥmān and as the central theme of this Sūrah is the refutation of this dogma, this attribute inevitably has been repeatedly referred to. The dogma of atonement implies that God cannot forgive the sins of men whereas the Divine attribute 'Ar-Raḥmān' implies that

آتِي الرَّحْمٰنِ عَبْدًا ﴿٩٤﴾

94. [a]There is none in the heavens and the earth but he shall come to the Gracious God as a bond man.[1804]

لَقَدْ أَحْصٰهُمْ وَعَدَّهُمْ عَدًّا ﴿٩٥﴾

95. Verily, He comprehends them by His knowledge and has numbered them all fully.

وَكُلُّهُمْ آتِيهِ يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ فَرْدًا ﴿٩٦﴾

96. And each of them shall come to Him on the Day of Resurrection, all alone.

إِنَّ الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَعَمِلُوا الصّٰلِحٰتِ
سَيَجْعَلُ لَهُمُ الرَّحْمٰنُ وُدًّا ﴿٩٧﴾

97. Those who believe and do good deeds—the Gracious God will create deep love for them.[1805]

فَإِنَّمَا يَسَّرْنٰهُ بِلِسَانِكَ لِتُبَشِّرَ بِهِ الْمُتَّقِينَ
وَتُنْذِرَ بِهِ قَوْمًا لُّدًّا ﴿٩٨﴾

98. So [b]We have made the Qur'ān easy in thy tongue that thou mayest give thereby glad tidings to the righteous, and warn thereby a contentious people.

وَكَمْ أَهْلَكْنَا قَبْلَهُمْ مِّنْ قَرْنٍ ۖ
هَلْ تُحِسُّ مِنْهُمْ مِّنْ أَحَدٍ أَوْ تَسْمَعُ
لَهُمْ رِكْزًا ﴿٩٩﴾ ع ٦ ٩

99. [c]And how many a generation have We destroyed before them! Canst thou perceive a single one of them, or hear even a whisper of them?[1806]

[a]20:109. [b]44:59; 54:18. [c]17:18; 19:75; 21:12; 36:32; 50:37.

He can and actually does often forgive them, hence its repetition in this Sūrah.

1804. The Gracious God needs no son to help Him or succeed Him, because He is the Lord of the heavens and the earth and His Kingdom extends over the whole universe, and because all men are His servants and Jesus is one of them.

1805. The verse may have one of the following meanings: (a) God will put His own love in the hearts of the righteous; (b) He will have deep love for the righteous; (c) He will put deep love for mankind in the hearts of the righteous; and (d) He will create deep love for the righteous in the hearts of men.

1806. The verse embodies for the Western Christian nations a grim warning about the dreadful fate that is in store for them if they did not accept the Truth and give up their evil ways. They are proud of their material power and resources and their worldly prosperity and progress, but have ignored the patent fact that wrong beliefs and a life of sin lead only to destruction.

CHAPTER 20

ṬĀ HĀ

(Revealed before Hijrah)

Date of Revelation and Context

The Sūrah was revealed very early at Mecca. This is the opinion of ʻAbdullāh bin Masʻūd, one of the earliest Companions of the Holy Prophet. The Sūrah continues to deal with Christian beliefs and doctrines which formed the primary theme of the preceding Chapter. One of the basic doctrines of Christianity is that the Law is a curse. The Sūrah opens with an emphatic repudiation of this Christian doctrine. The Law, it says, is not only not a curse but is positively a great Divine boon and mercy, and instead of being a burden and an encumbrance, its object is to afford solace and spiritual contentment to man. This is one of the principal objects of the Qur'ān which it fulfils most adequately. The Holy Prophet is comforted with the message that God has revealed the Qur'ān to lighten man's burdens and not to add to his difficulties. It meets all human major needs and requirements.

Subject-Matter

The Sūrah proceeds to tell Christians that in order to understand and realize the truths embodied in the Qur'ān, they should ponder over the circumstances and conditions through which Moses had to pass. It is stated that after his spiritual upbringing had become complete and he was found fit to be entrusted with the great responsibilities of a Prophet, Moses was commanded to go to Pharaoh and convey to him the Divine Message. Pharaoh refused to accept it, behaved arrogantly and sought to kill Moses. Thereupon Moses was commanded by God to take the Israelites out of Egypt to Canaan. Pharaoh pursued them with his mighty hosts but Divine punishment overtook him and he was drowned in the sea before the very eyes of the Israelites. Moses then went up to the "Mount" where the Law was revealed to him. The Sūrah then administers a subtle rebuke to Christians. They are told that when before the advent of Jesus the Israelites believed in the doctrine that God was One and later great stress had also been laid in the Qur'ān upon Divine Unity and upon the importance and significance of the Law or the Sharīʻah, how could a teaching which regarded the Law as a curse and entertained and preached polytheistic doctrines intervene between these two strictly monotheistic creeds? Next, mention is made of Divine punishment that would overtake Christian nations for their sins and iniquities after they had enjoyed material prosperity for a thousand years. Of these the last three centuries would be marked by uniform progress and prosperity of a very high order. This would make them disdainfully ignore the Divine warning that a dreadful fate was in store for them. The Sūrah emphatically declares that this event will certainly come to pass and Christian nations of the West will be seized with a terrible visitation; lofty mountains shall crumble and become like scattered dust (vv. 106, 107). Then the subject with which the Sūrah has opened is rehearsed, viz. that the Qur'ān easily yields to understanding and comprehension because it has been revealed in the national tongue of the people who are its first addressees. Like the Christian Scriptures it usually does not talk in parables and metaphors, thus leaving the subject confused and lacking in clarity, but explains its teaching in an easily comprehensible language. The importance of the Law is driven home by strong and forceful arguments and it is shown to be not an unmitigated curse but a great Divine blessing. Then mention is made of the expulsion of Adam from "the garden." This incident on which the whole fabric of the Christian doctrine of atonement stands is either misunderstood or deliberately misinterpreted and misrepresented by Christians. The truth is that the birth of Adam took place according to a fixed Divine plan, and Divine plans never miscarry or fail in their object. While according to the Bible, God created Adam in His own image (Gen. 1:27) and then, beguiled by Eve, Adam fell into sin, the Qur'ān declares that having been created in God's own image and likeness, Adam could not possibly have been guilty of any such fall. It describes him as only having slipped into an inadvertent lapse (v. 116). The Sūrah ends with a stern warning to disbelievers that Signs and miracles of their own devising will never be shown to them and that if, in spite of having seen many heavenly Signs, they still persisted in denying the Divine Message, they will be punished as were punished the disbelievers of the former Messengers of God.

1807. Ṭā Hā is a combination of ṭā and hā. In the dialect of 'Akk, an Arab tribe, it means, 'O my beloved,' or 'O perfect man.' The author of Kashshāf interprets it as 'O you.' By some, the expression is interpreted as, 'Be thou at rest' (Bayān & Lisān). The expression points to the fact that the Holy Prophet was gifted, in the fullest measure, with all those natural faculties, qualities and attributes which contribute to the building up of a man's full moral stature. The Holy Prophet was indeed a complete and perfect man, a perfect human specimen, in the fullest sense of the word. See also 2343 and 3091.

1808. The verse contains a message of comfort and hope for the Holy Prophet and Muslims. It purports to say that it is incompatible with the perfect and unerring Quranic revelation that its bearer should fail in his mission. The cause of the Holy Prophet, therefore, must triumph. The verse also refutes the Christian dogma that the Law or the Sharī'ah is a curse. There is nothing in the Qur'ān which is repugnant to human nature and which, if acted upon, should put man into trouble.

1809. Briefly, "The Throne" represents the transcendent attributes of God, i.e. the attributes which are technically known as Ṣiffāt-e-Tanzīhiyyah. These attributes, which are eternal and unchangeable and are God's exclusive prerogatives are manifested through His other attributes which are known as Ṣiffāt-e-Tashbīhiyyah, i.e. such attributes as are found more or less in human beings also. The former attributes, i.e. transcendent attributes, are said to constitute God's Throne and the latter attributes are the bearers of His Throne. See also [986] & [1233].

[1810.] The word Sirr (secret thoughts) signifies the thoughts that lie hidden in man's breast which he alone knows, and Akhfā (more hidden) comprises all those ideals, ideas and ambitions of a person which lie hidden in the womb of futurity and have never crossed his mind.

[1811.] The verse contains the quintessence and kernel of the Quranic revelation referred to in v. 3, above. It is that God exists. He is One. He possesses all perfect attributes and is completely free from all conceivable defects and imperfections and, therefore, He alone is entitled to our worship and adoration.

[1812.] Against all accepted canons of history Freud in his "Moses and Monotheism" has adumbrated quite a novel theory that Moses was not an Israelite and that he did not belong to the Hebrew stock and also that the Israelites never settled in Egypt. He has advanced the following arguments in support of this strange claim: (1) That Moses is an Egyptian name. (2) That the idea of the Oneness of God was originally Egyptian, having been first conceived and adopted by an ancient Egyptian king, named Ikhnaten (or Akhenaten). (3) That Moses, himself being an Egyptian, borrowed it from the Egyptians and preached it among the Israelites. (4) That because Moses was

11. [a]When he saw a fire, and he said to his family, 'Tarry ye, I perceive a fire; perhaps I may bring you a brand therefrom or find guidance at the fire.'[1813]

إِذْ رَأَىٰ نَارًا فَقَالَ لِأَهْلِهِ امْكُثُوا إِنِّي آنَسْتُ نَارًا لَّعَلِّي آتِيكُم مِّنْهَا بِقَبَسٍ أَوْ أَجِدُ عَلَى النَّارِ هُدًى ﴿١١﴾

an Egyptian he could not properly express himself in Hebrew.

All these arguments possess no basis in fact. Moses is certainly a Hebrew word, having derivation both in Hebrew and Arabic. But even if the name Moses was of Egyptian origin, it does not follow that the man Moses also was an Egyptian. As the Israelites were a subject race in Egypt, living under the rule of the Pharaohs, it seems quite plausible that they had adopted Egyptian names. The members of a subject race generally feel a particular delight in adopting the names and imitating the customs, modes of living and dress etc., of their rulers. The argument that the idea of the Oneness of God was originally Egyptian, having been first conceived and adopted by Akhenaten, an ancient Egyptian king, and preached by him among the Israelites, is equally wrong. It is unreasonable to suppose that a certain concept is the monopoly of one people. Different peoples may independently form similar ideas without having borrowed them from one another. But even supposing that the idea of God's Unity is of Egyptian origin, the inference cannot be justified that Moses was an Egyptian. If an American or a German can borrow an idea from an Englishman and vice versa, why cannot an Israelite borrow an idea from an Egyptian? The truth is that the idea of God's Oneness was neither conceived by Egyptians nor by Syrians or any other people. It has its origin in Divine revelation. Further, Freud bases his claim that Moses was an Egyptian on Exod. 4:10 where it is stated that he was slow of speech and could not adequately express himself and arbitrarily draws the conclusion that Moses was slow of speech in Hebrew. On the contrary, the fact is, and both the Qur'ān and the Bible lend support to it, that when commanded by God to go to Pharaoh and preach his mission to him, Moses requested to be excused on the plea of his inability to express himself adequately. This, if any thing, shows that Moses could not freely express himself in the tongue which Pharaoh spoke and understood, i.e. the Egyptian tongue, and therefore he was not an Egyptian. In fact, the linguistic evidence of Hebrew and Arabic, combined with the evidence of Jewish history and tradition and added to the account of Moses as given in the Bible and the Qur'ān—all go to substantiate and support the contention that Moses was not an Egyptian nor was his name of Egyptian origin. See also "The Larger Edition of the Commentary," pp. 1621-1623.

1813. The verse refers to a vision of Moses, and visions are of two kinds: (a) The visions that concern only the Prophet who sees such a one. In such visions the Divine manifestation remains confined to the Prophet concerned.
